CP Rail Is Lukewarm To Moving Its Tracks

Not Interested If $s Needed

By ROY PEACOCK
Staff Reporter

The Canadian Pacific Railway is something less than enthusiastic about local proposals that their single-line track across the south end of the city be relocated.

This was stressed in no uncertain terms at a special meeting held at city hall last night to discuss the possibility of track relocation to north of Belleville.

J. F. Crate, superintendent of the Smiths Falls division of CP Rail, told the 35 people present his company was not opposed to progress but wanted it put on the record that his company would agree to track relocation only if there was no loss in business, no loss of its competitive position and no cost to CP Rail.

Answering an earlier suggestion that CP trains might run over Canadian National Railways track, Mr. Crate said he did not see how this was possible if CP Rail was to retain its competitive position.

But Mayor J. Russell Scott is still confident that something can be worked out and a proposal that a feasibility and economic study of CP Rail track relocation will be placed before city council.

The proposal will be that the study be done either by consultants to be hired by the Quinte Area Planning Board, for preparation of the city's official plan, or by a separate firm of consultants.

It was agreed generally that the study should be the first step in any proposal for track relocation.

Attending the meeting were most members of city council, representatives from Sidney and Thurlow townships, officials from both railways and local and provincial planning experts.

Mayor Scott told the meeting that Belleville was split in two by the Moira River and was divided north and south by two railways.

He said the CP tracks cut the rest of the city off from the waterfront which, he said, was the finest and most beautiful part of Belleville.

The mayor said it was time to reassess the situation and suggested that a third rail might be provided on the CN right of way for lease "or whatever" to CP rail.

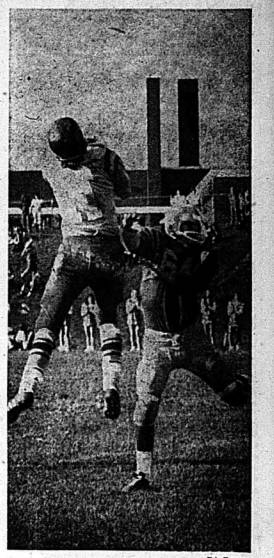
Mayor Scott said if tracks were not relocated and planned road development calling for numerous grade separations went ahead, Belleville would become known as the "roller coaster city of Canada."

Alderman Arthur Keegan, who for the past two years has been urging relocation of the CP tracks, took the same view.

He said the CP tracks were holding up millions of dollars worth of development in Belleville's waterfront area and even suggested the city should be compensated for its loss in assessment.

George Van de Water, general manager for CN's Rideau Area at Belleville, said, however, that his company had no present plans for a third track on its Toronto-Montreal system.

Centralized traffic control would increase the traffic potential of the present two tracks but he did not see how the system could handle an additional 22 trains run daily by CP Rail.



R. A. Shire, director of engineering for the rail transport committee suggested that although track relocation was an engineering problem, economics also entered the picture.

He said a study was necessary to determine the economic advantages and disadvantages.

He said track relocation was becoming a Canada-wide problem and referred to a pilot study now being done in Winnipeg in connection with possible track removal there and to determine the sort of legislation needed to provide financial assistance to carry out a removal program.

No one was able to say definitely whether a transportation study was eligible for subsidy from the senior governments, although the practice has been to subsidize the cost of urban renewal studies.

NEW YORK (AP) — Dock workers from Maine to Texas went on strike today, facing the government with the first complete shutdown of every deepsea port in the continental United States. With the other ILA locals pledged to follow New York's lead, all 45,000 members at U.S. East and Gulf ports were out. West Coast ports have been on strike since July 1, when members of the Longshoremen's and Warehousemen's Union walked out.

TOKYO (Reuter) — Japan had a record surplus of $3,704 billion in its balance of payments for August, the finance ministry announced Friday. The revised August figure compared with a surplus of $476 million in July. The ministry said the surplus was due to a drop in imports from the United States caused by a West Coast dock strike and a massive inflow of short-term money.

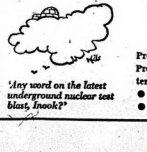
The government plans more research on recycling, but not now, he said in an interview following an address to the Western Canada water and sewage conference.

Cut Back Or Debt -Queen's



KINGSTON, Ont. (CP) — Queen's University was told by its principal Thursday it will have to cut back sharply on expenditures this year and may even have to resort to borrowing money as a result of the provincial government's restrictions on university grants.

Dr. J. J. Deutsch said in a report to the university senate that the institution's operating costs are rising at a much higher rate than the two-per-cent increase in grants which the government has decreed.

The present grant to the university is $1.730 per student.

Dr. Deutsch said that in the 1970-71 academic year the value of a per-student operating grant was six per cent higher than in the previous year. But the university's budget showed a deficit of about $500,000.

He said a university committee studying the situation suggested Queen's should look at several alternatives, including borrowing money, reducing the number of faculty members or their salaries, or curriculum, changes.

'Any word on the latest underground nuclear test blast, Snook?'

Canada Steps Up Anti-bomb Stand

UNITED NATIONS (CP) — Growing Canadian concern over the effects of the proposed biggest-ever U.S. underground nuclear test on Amchitka Island is expected to be one of the prime topics External Affairs Minister Mitchell Sharp will discuss with State Secretary William Rogers when the two meet at the UN today.

Canada wants the test, scheduled for later this month on the tiny island near the end of the Aleutian chain off Alaska, cancelled because of the dangers such a blast poses to the environment in an earthquake-prone area.

Sharp strongly condemned underground nuclear testing by both Russia and the U.S. in a General Assembly speech Wednesday, and he is expected to ask Rogers to use his influence in having President Nixon call off the test.

The White House said Thursday Nixon has not yet reached a decision on whether to allow the test involving a five-megaton bomb, equal to five million tons of TNT. There have been reports that the bomb already is implanted 300 feet underground, awaiting the go-ahead.

Press reports say sources close to the White House have indicated that Nixon will delay the test—known as Cannikan—until late this month so that it will not conflict with the visit of Soviet Premier Alexei Kosygin to Canada in mid-October. It had been scheduled for sometime this week or early next week.

Greenpeace Gets Support

VANCOUVER (CP) — The Canadian protest mission Greenpeace, cheered by a message of support from a U.S. Coast Guard cutter, hopes to move further along the Aleutian Islands toward Amchitka Saturday.

The mission plans to cruise just outside the 12-mile territorial limit if the United States goes ahead with plans to detonate a five-megaton nuclear bomb on Amchitka.

House May Debate Test

OTTAWA (CP) — Government House Leader Allan MacEachen says he will offer to the Commons Monday a motion condemning the proposed U.S. nuclear test on Alaska's Amchitka Island.

But, he told the Commons Thursday, the motion would only be called to a vote if the opposition agrees to restrict debate on the motion to one speaker for each party.

Community College Enrolment

Loyalist One of Three to Exceed Target

By LENNY WILLIAMSON
Staff Reporter

Enrolment at Loyalist College is up 17 per cent over last year, its board of governors were informed last night.

The number of students enrolled by Sept. 14 was 615, although the total has climbed since then. The formula forecast, on which the college's budget is based for this year, was for 601 students this year.

The board was told that there is usually a slight decrease in numbers by Dec. 1, the date the enrolment is taken for government grant purposes. College officials are predicting the number then will be about 611, 10 more than the formula forecast.

Other colleges are in a less enviable position. Seventeen of Ontario's 20 community colleges have a lower enrolment than their formula forecast. Only Lambton, Loyalist and Niagara have an increase in the actual numbers enrolled over their formula forecast.

Those 17 colleges who based their budgets on a larger enrolment than actually materialized could be forced to make cutbacks when the government grant, based on the Dec. 1 enrolment, comes through.

Although Loyalist budgeted for an enrolment of 601, officials earlier had hoped the actual enrolment this year would climb to about 700.

Forty students expected to return for their second or third years did not turn up, and 110 who paid their $35 deposit for first year courses did not enrol.

A telephone survey revealed that those who did not return had jobs and had decided, in view of the deteriorating labor situation, to stick to their jobs and pick up their second and third years at a later date.

The college's enrolment got a shot in the arm through the agreement now reached with Hastings County Board of Education for the college to take charge of night school interest courses formerly conducted by the school board in secondary schools.

Loyalist will now administer the non-credit courses, although the instruction will take place in the same schools, with the same staff, as in former years.

Last year, Loyalist conducted classes for 81,900 "contact hours", the number of hours of instruction offered multiplied by the total number of students. Hastings county board recorded 70,000 contact hours. With Loyalist now administering these courses, its extension enrolment will increase by 30 per cent. Extension students will account for 20 per cent of Loyalist's total enrolment this year. The balance is made up of day students, manpower retraining and apprenticeship programs.

CPR Wants Guarantees

Ald. Enos David said it was obvious that CP Rail couldn't utilize CN trackage and suggested that before anything was done there be a cost analysis on grade separations as compared to new trackage.

"Let us attack it on a cost basis," he suggested.

Ald. Ben Corke said it was obvious that construction of another line would be required in any track relocation project and asked if Sidney township wanted this.

Township reeve Jack Bush noted that even if the CP Rail tracks were relocated, they would still cross the same north-south roadways.

He agreed, however, that new tracks could be diverted around built-up areas.

Railway officials said it was not realistic to feel that track relocation would materially reduce the number of future grade separations needed.

However, Ald. Keegan said track relocation would make costly grade separations at Belleville's east and west limits unnecessary.

He suggested that CP Rail track relocation commence just north of the Trenton air station.

If both railways were together the number of grade separations would be halved, he said.

Allan Brass, planner with Proctor, Redfern, Bousfield and Bacon, who did Belleville's urban renewal studies, complimented those responsible for bringing all groups together for discussions. This, he said, was good planning.

He agreed with Ald. Keegan that development in the city's Foster Ward area was being hampered by the CP tracks but felt the meeting should be talking procedures rather than specifics.

Reeve Bush said his township would be interested in a transportation study and suggested it be a joint effort on the part of municipalities concerned.

He said his township now had if they were all protected it would cost $30,000 annually in crossing protection maintenance.

This brought a comment from Mr. Shire, who said that closing certain crossings would be one way to economize.

Thurlow Reve Horace Casey said his township had fewer level crossings than did Sidney. If there were more tracks further north there would be more crossings, he said.

Ald. Robin Jeffrey asked if a transportation study could be done by the Quinte Planning Board.

Whether this could be done would depend on the scope of the problem, it was stated. If the study was done as part of the official plan, it was felt the cost would be eligible for subsidy.

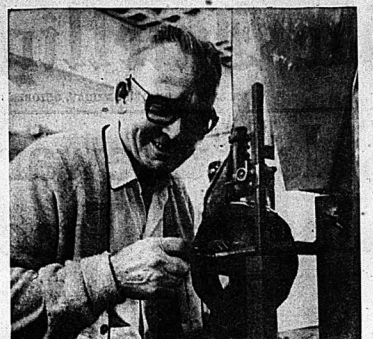
Bert Kenny, planner for the Quinte Planning Board, said it would have to be determined whether a complete transportation study was required.

If so, land use would have to be studied and growth potential noted.

Ald. Jean Smith wondered what would happen after a study was done.

Mr. Shire said this was a question that bothered him. He said that although the RTC gave approval on track relocation, it had no power to direct them.

Neither was there any legislation to bring in the three levels of government for allocation of project costs.



"There is no one to say that costs will be picked up in a certain way," he said.

Mr. Shire said this was one of the purposes of the current study at Winnipeg.

Although there were no definite answers on the problems of track relocation, the meeting did see headway in another matter.

Mr. Shire's suggestion that closing certain level crossings was one way of reducing costs prompted a question from Ald. E. A. Orr, if railway property along the CP tracks Foster Ward might be purchased by the city to provide an access road and thus allow closing of at least one of the crossings.

Mr. Van de Water said CN owned property in that area and he anticipated little problem in it being made available.

Impaired Charges Stick in Court

Travelling south on Pinnacle Street, playing leapfrog with police cruisers and other drivers proved costly for Dennis R. Prentice, 53, of RR5, Belleville.

Pleading guilty to a charge of impaired driving in provincial court Thursday, evidence was submitted relating how Prentice was travelling east on Bridge Street, when he made a right turn south on Pinnacle. In the process of his turn, he dodged between the curb and a police cruiser.

Continuing against one-way traffic he forced two drivers to detour in front of the Royal Canadian Legion avoiding head-on collisions.

Chased east on Dundas Street at speeds ranging between 50 and 60 mph, he was halted near Belleville General Hospital.

Judge T. Y. Wills fined him a total of $154 and suspended his driving licence for three months.

Driving while impaired as well as operating an automobile without the required prescription glasses cost Janet M. Terry, 24, of 14 Murney Street, a total of $165 and 17 court costs after she pleaded guilty to both counts.

Her licence was suspended for three months.

Mrs. Thomas Cassibo phoned police Sept. 12 to have them deal with a domestic quarrel, after they questioned her regarding Mr. Cassibo's public intoxication, the husband, Thomas Francis Cassibo arrived home in his car.

He pleaded guilty to impaired driving was fined $125 and $4 court costs and had his licence suspended for three months.

Gerald Charles McConnochie, 25, of 84A Geddes Street was stopped by city police Sept. 22 after they observed him closely tailgating a car on Front Street near the Park Theatre.

He was stopped on Dundas St. East, after taking up two cars and pleaded guilty to impaired driving.

Together with a $100 fine, $4 court costs and his licence was suspended for three months.

11 Rifles Stolen

City police have disclosed that a total of 11 "high powered rifles" were taken during the Sept. 28 raid on Griffin's Guns and Sports Shop at 180 North Front Street.

As well as the rifles, 20 boxes of 30.06 ammunition and a cook book, were reported stolen from the store.

Total value of the stolen goods has been estimated at $1,500.

Loyalist Tenders Under Estimates

With one-third of the estimated budget for Loyalist College's new building spent, tenders have come in at 10 per cent under the original estimates.

The board of governors at the college was informed last night that the total of the contracts now tendered for amounts to substantially less than expected. Each individual tender was less than estimated, except for the structural steel, which was $27,300 over estimate.

Estimated cost of the new building is $3,462,277.

Last night the board approved tenders for several contracts. Cost of windows, provided by Glaverbell Glass Ltd. Concord, is $82,246. The estimate was $98,000.

Roofing and sheet metal was awarded to Semple-Gooder and Co. Ltd., Rexdale at a cost of $55,380. The estimate was $60,000.

The damp roofing contract was awarded to Dean-Chandler Waterproofing Ltd. for $2,000.

The steel deck and metal cladding contract went to Canadian Metal Rolling Mills for $79,136, about $650 less than estimated.

The college has made an effort to involve local companies in the construction, but has experienced difficulty in getting them to bid.

Only one company, Dalton Engineering, bid on the backfill contract. Six local firms were asked to bid, but none submitted tenders. These companies will be contacted again, the date for opening tenders will be extended, and no decision will be made on awarding backfill contract until Oct. 5.

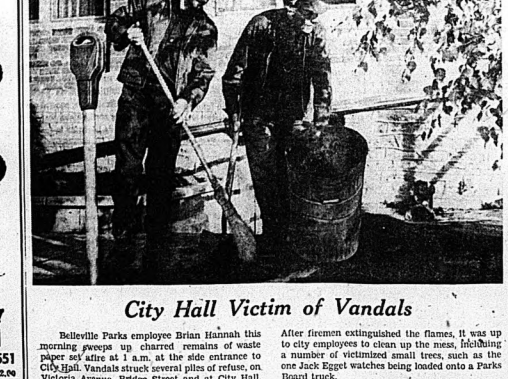
Barry Young, Prince Edward - Lennox Liberal candidate had earlier called for a public inquiry into the situation.



It has been reported that the development of mines and the Lake Ontario Cement Company Ltd., are conducting joint studies of alternate quarrying sites near Cherry Valley, Midland and Kingston.

Help Coming On Trent Land

SMITHS FALLS, Ont. (CP) — Public Works Minister James Auld said Thursday the provincial government is planning to start acquiring land to help preserve the Rideau-Trent-Severn canal system.

Mr. Auld said implementation of the report "is a long-range plan, but things that are generally agreed upon—such as acquisition of certain lands—could be started during the fiscal year."

Trenton's Highrise Is Not Dead Yet

By KENNETH SMITH
Staff Reporter

TRENTON — It was learned yesterday a systematic strategy has developed behind the scenes here as part of a battle to overthrow the Ontario Municipal Board's ruling on the Kilcormick highrise.

Wraps came off the campaign of intense pro-highrise activity initiated by town council at a special meeting of the Trenton and Suburban Planning Board called specifically to deal with the apartment tower question.

Disclosure came that the town has commissioned a series of reports to support reconsideration of the issue by the OMB as the TSPB met to formally reopen the matter quashed by the OMB at the end of August.

With the Ontario Municipal Board giving as one of its reasons for refusing a zone change to permit the construction the fact planning board had not dealt sufficiently with the issue, planning board last night reviewed the proposal in full and gave tentative approval to the rezoning.

What was generally thought to be a first step in reopening the issue, however, appeared last night to be one of the final actions in the get-things-going-again plan, which began swiftly after the OMB handed down its decision on the old Fraser estate site.

The job has been four-fold: Seek planning board approvals and comments (absent from the town's case before a public hearing on the question) and reports on the condition of services, parks and traffic in a bid to more fully document and defend the town's pro-highrise stand.

In its ruling, the municipal board had stated criticisms voiced at the Aug. 12 hearing had not been answered satisfactorily. The hearing had been told sanitary sewers, parks and water supply in the area may not be adequate and that traffic count evidence presented by the town had flaws.

(Town council had approved the rezoning change before the TSPB had examined it fully. A vocal corps of set-aside protestors prompted intervention of the OMB which blocked the council rezoning decision but it may only be blocked temporarily.)

Through public disclosure of correspondence and comments by planning board members last night it became clear municipal authorities have been working diligently throughout September to promote the Dundas West apartment project again.

Essence of the actions taken by municipal authorities appears to be that they are trying to satisfy the Ontario Municipal Board the basis for its ruling "no longer hold water." Planning board members were quick to point out last night the OMB had not "rejected" but only "deferred" the rezoning.

If the rezoning was deferred, the argument goes, remove the reasons for the deferral — get that planning board approval, lack of which the OMB was concerned about, and show that the services, parks and traffic are not bad.

Planning board maintained some caution at yesterday's extraordinary gathering, declining to give unconditional approval of the rezoning change until reports on parks and traffic are available.

Town council, it was learned during the meeting, launched the strategy to reopen the issue no later than September 3, only three days after the OMB had "deferred" the zoning switch that would have allowed building of the 63-unit structure.

On September 3, the Toronto consulting firm of Gore and Storrie was commissioned to report to the town on "the adequacy of sewer and water system serving the intersection of Dundas Street West and Catherine Streets, particularly with respect to construction of an apartment building at the intersection."

This three-page service report was dispatched to the Town of Trenton September 10 and indicates services in the area are satisfactory.

It says "the existing street sewer and the sewer system to which the street sewer is tributary appear to be quite adequate . . . the trunk sewer system is quite adequate."

On water service the report states, "the water distribution system will be quite sufficient for service to the proposed building site" once the new water line is put along Dundas West, provided the building has an independent pressure system.

This municipal service study, as part of the 220-the highrise plan, may cancel out one of the OMB's grounds for objection, the approval of the TSPB another.

Meanwhile, authorities here await the other reports — one on traffic, the other on parks — to be completed. They are already being prepared.

The traffic study is far superior to the one prepared by the town to support the apartment tower bid the last time around. Residents in the neighborhood of the highrise site had argued that the traffic count prepared by the town had only been conducted over a limited period.

Town crews conducted traffic surveys on the streets surrounding the Fraser homestead from September 7 to September 13, as they worked to build the new sewer - the - highrise case. These results have now been forwarded to the department of transportation for analysis but there has been no word of when this study will be completed for the town.

The final report in the strategy package will come from a local body, the parks board, which will construct a detailed and objective picture of the recreational and parks picture in west Trenton.

At the public hearing August 12, OMB hearing chairman David Jamieson had been told by objectors the area's largest recreational open space zone, Hanna Park, is not safe for children to play in and that children of apartment dwellers converge on properties of homeowners because they have nowhere else to play. No date has been set for completion of this report.

Town council and the planning board appear more confident than ever that the Kilcormick apartment tower would be an asset to Trenton and they are working to present an objective case that will rally the OMB to their thinking.

On planning board member told The Intelligencer at the conclusion of last night's meeting, it is doutful if another hearing would be necessary to reverse the municipal board decision, the feeling being once they get satisfaction, the deferral can no longer exist.

During last night's meeting the board politely rejected advice from Frank Stokmans of vice from Frank Stokmans of Board, telling him this is a Trenton project and until the TSPB is disbanded the Trenton board will look after its own affairs.

A Look Around

Some thoughts at random:

There are areas of Belleville untouched by the progress of recent years. In some ways this is a good thing, for amid the poverty and atmosphere of deterioration there are pockets of comparative affluence and there are trim lawns and gardens and an overall character lacking in the more modern areas of the city.

We are thinking of Hillcrest for example; here there are some interesting architectural contrasts, from well-kept bungalows to older stone structures, some given added character by a mantle of ivy, on down to dwellings which might better be condemned and replaced by modern low-cost housing.

Foster ward too has its own unique character, a combination of the old and the fairly new, and down by the harbor and waterfront homes and businesses there is the atmosphere of Europe, perhaps some little coastal community in Holland, Belgium or Germany.

And there is the waterfront proper and you visualize it as it could be. There is the nucleus here of an extended park and pedestrian walk system.

You wonder too about housing needs — in both Hillcrest and Foster ward — and instead of what can only be considered as substandard you imagine again something in line with contemporary progress.

Low-cost high-rise apartments then in Hillcrest and Foster ward? Or town houses? It is something to think about.

October is here, the year is in decline but autumn's fabled image remains and the best is yet to be.

Maybe it is our growing population, but Belleville seems to have more pretty girls than ever.

And the mini is still "in," although you also see the occasional midi and peasant dress.

And oh yes . . . there are those hot pants!

Summer sporting activities may be tapering off, but they are still playing tennis at Zwicky Island, the end of the evening, and well into the night under lights.

Only a year or so ago that would have been unheard of.

The Mall is flourishing. So too are the other suburban commercial establishments.

The downtown scene also looks healthy.

• • •

You look at the new cars, some of them still fitting a description of them at a conference in The Hague a few years ago: "the fantastic and insolent products of the United States (Canadian) car industry," and you wonder why this year some of the sportier jobs look as if they might reach 140 m.p.h., instead of say 120 m.p.h. and why this should be when the speed limit is 70 m.p.h.

Who Needs Wallace?

We have never been greatly impressed by Alabama governor George Wallace. He talks a lot but his arguments and views strike us as shallow and exuding from the top of his head so to speak .

Wallace probably has never met Prime Minister Trudeau but he evidently has delved into Mr. Trudeau's leftist views and he labels him, as he did in New York the other day, in the following terms. He had been talking about communism in Latin American and added: "We've got a crypto-communist premier in Canada just above us. He's got a worse background and record than Cuban Premier Castro himself."

The word "crypto" means secret or hidden but we can see nothing in Mr. Trudeau's utterances or policies in recent years to give any credence to Wallace's remarks. The Alabama governor is out of touch in this regard, for Mr. Trudeau's left-wing sympathies are now a thing of the past. To say he is worse than Castro is the sort of ludicrous remark we might expect of Governor Wallace.

Mr. Greene Ill

Energy Minister Joe Greene's illness in Japan is another setback for a man who has already been sidelined once or twice with similar heart problems. Mr. Greene has suffered a stroke and partylysis of one side. Political life is a gruelling thing and all the more so for one in as delicate health as Mr. Greene. We wish him a speedy and complete recovery and return to his duties if health permits.

Ottawa Journal

We found ourselves saying to a friend that we had just spent an interesting weekend reading Yousuf Karsh's latest volume, "Faces of Our Time." The word "reading" is revealing. The usually speaks of looking through a "picture book," but this is an affair of mind as well as eye. Karsh's 200 words or so describing his "confrontation" with each of his notable people are as evocative as his eye and lens.

The first men who landed on the moon kept asking him to tell them all about Russia and England and France to which they were about to go. "But you have just been to the moon! Why are you so interested in those mundane places?" Armstrong replied: "To tell you the truth, that is the only place I've been to!"

Karsh visited Marc Chagall, the Russian painter and designer, at his Paris apartment. "We heard children coming home from school, and Chagall said, 'You know, when I was a boy in Vitebsk (in the Jewish community) whenever I wanted to laugh my mother wanted to put her hand over my mouth and say Shah, Shah, not too loud or they might come and get you. I could never laugh out loud. Now when I hear children shouting and happy I thank God every day."

Einstein in his study at Princeton: "A simple, kindly, almost childlike man, too great for any of the tricks or postures of eminence." The great scientist said: "If mankind fails to find a harmonious solution, then there will be disaster on a dimension beyond anyone's imagination." Karsh asked to what source we should look for hope. "To ourselves." He spoke sadly yet serenely, reports Karsh; "a man beyond hope or despair."

What was Robert Frost's way of writing a poem? He said it was like a witticism . . . it just came. "And it only comes 15 or 20 times a year."

Somerset Maugham: "I wanted to ask him a thousand questions about his methods, his life, his views, but after half an hour I realized that I, not he, was being interviewed. I could not resist a man who appeared to have no interest in the world just then but me . . . an immense cunning in pretending another man's innermost thoughts."

Karsh at work: "It is quite absurd — I speak with strong conviction and somewhat his ter experience — he says that the French are a decadent race. Most of the great French men I have photographed have chosen to live on the sixth floor or higher without an elevator — Francois Mauriac, the eminent and devout Catholic writer, for example . . . I and my assistant were compelled to ascend six floors with all our heavy equipment, in several breath - taking climbs."

Karsh asked Sir Lawrence Olivier what difference he found in British and American audiences and got this quick reply: "I could think of much, much more pleasurable ways of finishing my career than by answering that one!" As to theatre and film? "I should say as a general rule that the film is the director's medium and the theatre the actor's medium."

With Dr. Schweitzer, the French missionary - surgeon in Africa, Karsh asked him how he thought Christ would be received if He were to appear in our time: "People would not understand Him at all." Which did he consider the most important of the Ten Commandments? Schweitzer thought about that a long moment and said: "Christ gave only one Commandment. And that was Love."

And so from a "merg" book we view the gallery of mankind and his joys and fears. Look at the picture, then read what Karsh has to say about the picture again and see more than we saw for the first time. It is a measure of the greatness of the men — and Karsh.

Need to Clarify Issue

Candidates and the Separate Schools

Editor,
The Intelligencer.

It is often difficult to find the meat in an election issue because of the sauce poured on by candidates and such appears to be the case in the current one. While the question of separate school support is not officially part of the campaign, it remains a private issue with many voters, and due to this fact a bit of clarity might enable voters to better assess both the parties and the candidates.

On Sept. 21, speaking on the CJBQ open line program, in reply to a query on the separate school issue, Premier Davis said: ". . .we feel that there should be one standard school to handle all races and religions in the province to create a continuity in curriculum and standards". Earlier statements credited to him in the press indicated his fear that total support of the Catholic schools would "fragment the system".

Mr. Davis openly supports the concept of French language schools and these schools in Northern Ontario are separate (language) schools — North Bay Ecole Secondaire Algonquin, and, I believe, also the Sudbury Macdonald - Cartier school. Sturgeon Falls students are demanding a French speaking separate school and their demands have been met with a promise of "investigation".

Another thing that troubles me . . . Mr. Davis' plea for "continuity in curriculum and standard" — are these students educated in the French language to be provided with all French colleges and universities in Ontario in an effort to provide such continuity?

The Sturgeon Falls demonstration appears to be the result of "fragmentation" of the system. How does Mr. Davis justify his statement that support of religious separate schools would "fragment the system" when at the same time he advocates the support of separate language schools and fails to notice the fragmentation caused by such schools.

Whether one is a supporter or public school supporter is of no consequence. . . the question exists and all Ontario residents who pay taxes should demand that Mr. Davis clarify his stand or perhaps an answer could be forthcoming from one of the aspiring candidates.

MARION ANDREWS

Sturgeon Falls School Issue

Ottawa Le Droit: A royal commission, the classic subterfuge of Canadian governments is the agent to which Toronto will have recourse to solve once and for all the educational answers of the type which have just aroused the French population of Sturgeon Falls. This time, however, it seems it is serious.

Not only has the minister of education, Robert Welch, announced the formation and terms of reference of the commission, to be headed by Thomas Symond, president of Trent University, but he has clearly said all sources of the conflict should be eliminated.

In six months at the latest, March 16, the law should be modified. Franco-Ontarians will not have to wait much longer to see if they are being mocked. . . .

From the decision of the minister, it follows that the Sturgeon school dispute is settled in principle. As the francophone majority desired, a separate secondary school for anglophones should be constructed. Unfortunately the delay of six months will not make possible until September, 1972, or even this year, had not the Nipissing school board been so morbidly francophobe.

Brockville Waterfront Rezoning Issue

Brockville Recorder and Times

Can the city legally refuse to rezone property if it is not prepared to buy the property or offer the owner tax relief?

City council will be faced with this question as well as others when councillors must decide whether or not to approve the recommendation of the planning board for a zone change for the old Ault milk plant in Walter street east. An apartment developer would like to replace the old plant with a waterfront apartment building.

While it won't be known until council meets how many members of council oppose the rezoning, it is a pretty good guess that a majority are against it, for reasons that are not too clear. There has been for instance, a whisper campaign that some beneficent citizen is going to buy the property and donate it to the city for park use. Who is this mysterious citizen? No one seems to know! Apparently it is part of a ploy. Then there is another whispering campaign that the Reynolds Coal company "may" want to donate the old coal yard to the city for park purposes and the city doesn't rezone the property. This is blackmail if not true and in the absence of any such announcement from the coal company should be written off as a red herring. Out of the same ploy. Then there's to be a petition. Of what worth is a petition without a personal interview of all those who sign such things, many not aware of what they are signing, many not even city residents or taxpayers.

Another interesting and disturbing factor in this controversy is the fact that there is now agitation for a further study by a group of consultants. This would be supplementary to the parks and recreation study now before city council.

This supplementary study would cost $15,000 on top of the $10,000 spent on the original study.

Brockville has been studied and planned to the point where it is becoming a matter for citizens to wonder the real specific purpose of such studies. The waterfront has been zoned since 1950. The zoning was revised in 1964 to allow for mixed uses with some non-conforming uses permitted. The banks of the creeks through town were zoned and proposals made for development at that time too. The study now before the city reiterates what earlier planning boards advised in regard to waterfront development but at an additional cost of $10,000.

What do those plans and studies really mean if the city hasn't the money to follow through? Readers may recall another study, that of transportation, at a cost of $17,000. Very little use has been made of it simply because of a lack of money.

Booklet Gives NDP Credibility Lacking in Past

From The Intelligencer's Queen's Park Bureau.

By DON O'HEARN

What may turn out to be the most effective piece of propaganda in this campaign is a booklet put out by the New Democratic Party.

Booklet actually is a poor word to describe it. Because this piece is a very slick 16 pages in full-color magazine format and highly professional in both production and writing.

It is reported to have cost more than $50,000 to produce and around one million copies are to be distributed.

This could be the best $50,000 investment that any party makes in the campaign.

For the piece is not only a slick production, it is also slick politically.

It uses nationally known writers and pictures. Pierre Berton, Maureen Calloway, Prince Kaiser, Bruno Gerussi, to express NDP beliefs and, in turn, their beliefs in the party.

The assessments and opinions they express tend to be very simplistic, but their polished writing makes them polished prose.

What will probably make the piece a very good investment is that on its professionalism it will be a booklet that will register effectively with the voting public.

It gives a credibility to the NDP that the party critically needs.

The publication reflects quality and stature and knows how, "big time" know-how. Particularly big time know-how.

And the paeans of praise will also do their bit. For they are cleverly done. Not unduly, not overdone. And though, as mentioned, the content is simplistic this really is only aimed at the person who is informed or to anyone who makes a close, analytical examination. The public won't see through.

It is a very good effort.

An indication of this piece is that it reflects the considerable improvement in the NDP election organization in this campaign.

The same type of publication produced and printed in 1967. But even though it had some of the same writers there is little comparison between the two, considering the two. It was high class amateur as contrasted with complete pro.

And this same contrast can be spotted throughout the NDP organization. It is a much more efficient machine this time.

One Dissenter Scuttles Nuclear Test Motion

OTTAWA (CP) — Jack McIntosh (PC-Swift Current-Maple Creek) denied the required unanimous Commons consent Thursday for a motion that would have had all MPs condemn nuclear tests.

However, later, Government House Leader Allan MacEachen said the government would place such a motion on the order paper Monday if an agreement could be reached to limit the debate to one speaker for each party.

The motion was proposed by Eugene Whelan (L-Essex), who said President Richard Nixon is expected to make a decision in the next few days on an underground nuclear test blast scheduled for Amchitka in Alaska's Aleutian Islands next month.

It asked MPs to express their unanimous and united opposition to any nuclear testing anywhere by any country.

Speaker Lucien Lamoureux asked whether there was unanimous consent and said, as shouts of "yes" arose, that there appeared to be unanimity. Mr. McIntosh called out "no" and the motion was scrapped.

New Democrat Leader David Lewis later asked Prime Minister Trudeau to have a government motion condemning such testing. In that way, it would not require unanimous consent to come before the House.

Mr. Trudeau replied that the government opposition to nuclear testing already had been expressed in the Commons, in the United Nations and elsewhere.

The required unanimous consent was also denied Wednesday to a similar motion by David Anderson (L-Esquimalt-Saanich) and last week to a motion by the New Democrats.

In an adjournment debate later, Heath Macquarrie PC-Hillsborough said he was shocked and astounded that Prime Minister Trudeau has not made direct representations to President Nixon about the Amchitka blast.

Canada should be relentless in pushing for a complete test ban because each one posed a grave risk and left the universal environment "a little more polluted, a little more poisoned."

Political Interns Learn On the Job

OTTAWA (CP) — Medical interns can generally be certain their patient isn't going to jump up and walk out on them, but Parliament's latest batch of political interns can't be so sure.

Ten of them have arrived to spend a year working with Commons back-benchers in the second year of a program initiated by Alfred D. Hales (PC—Wellington).

But nobody seems to know exactly what will happen to them if an election is called before their terms end July 1.

Last year's batch was so successful that one government MP, responsible for assigning the interns for the year, said the government should be afraid of the whole program.

"If I were a member of the cabinet," said John M. Reid (Kenora-Rainy River), "I'd be scared right out of my mind. Having interns makes back-benchers far more effective."

But unless the government is afraid of its own back-benchers the situation isn't too ominous —five of the interns go to Liberal MPs. Three go to Conservand one to a Social Crediter.

Those selected were: Gerald Bellomo, 24, Toronto; Wendy Carter, 22, Vancouver; Marie Cordeau, 21, Quebec; Kenneth MacDonald, 24, Victoria; Jim MacDonald, 26, Toronto; Kathy Swistun,20, Edmonton; Paul Thomas, 27, Winnipeg; Bruce Thordarson, 22, Saskatoon; Yvon Turcotte, 21, Val d'Or, Que.; Jean Racicot, 23, Montreal.

They are undergoing three weeks of orientation that will include briefings from such parliamentary personalities as former prime ministers. Auditor-General Maxwell Henderson, opposition leaders and senior Commons staff.

Mr. Thordarson said one of the group's main conversational topics is what would happen if the government calls an election.

"Everybody's been discussing that—it's probably up to the individual member. If he wanted us to help on his campaign he would probably have to pay us himself."

But if the election were held late in the spring, he guessed the interns would be given Commons jobs until July 1.

They receive $6,000 for their 10 months, half of which they work for a government member and half for an opposition member.

"It has been the most successful undertaking that I have promoted since I've been an MP," he said.

Beach Pollution Beaten

OTTAWA (CP) — The National Research Council offers this solution for beach pollution: Flush it.

Flush it with a water-pumping system field-tested in Ottawa and almost guaranteed to end your city's summer swimming blues for good.

The water-pumping system, the NRC said in a news release Thursday, was developed in cooperation with the City of Ottawa engineering department.

The water-pumping system is based on the premise that some swimming beaches become polluted simply because the water is away from the main flow of the river or lake and therefore is sluggish or even stagnant.

Working with a scale model of the section of the Rideau River in the Mooney's Bay beach area of Ottawa, NRC scientists showed how water could be pumped into the polluted beach area from the clean centre channel of the river.

As a result of the model studies, two pumps, each moving 50 cubic feet of water a second, were installed just upstream of the Mooney's Bay beach.

This created a slow but uniform current in the formerly stagnant water, flushed the beach area clean and prevented further build-up of pollutants.

Naturalists Compile History Record

Members of the Quinte Field Naturalists club have not been idle since their project of gathering information towards compiling a natural history record of the Quinte area was announced this past spring. Irwin Knight, who with president, Terry Sprague, is in charge of the bird study, reports 300 different species of birds are to be found throughout the year in the circumscribed 30 mile radius of Belleville, 104 of these species being sighted during winter months.

Informal outings during the late spring and summer to Traverse Point in Prince Edward County, Presqu'ile Provincial Park and O'Hara Mill near Madoc provided facts with pleasure. Members have been asked to watch especially for banded birds, and to report such sightings, with details, to the responsible committee members.

Hedley Smith is working on the framework for the insect census of the area and would be grateful for relevant observations. At the October meeting the members hope to make a start on collecting the common names of wild flowers indigenous to the area.

The Quinte Field Naturalists have set themselves a prodigious task, but with enthusiasm and pooled knowledge expect to gather a sound base of information on the local natural scenery.

During the second half of their first fall meeting, held on September 27, at the Entomology Research Institute, the club was shown a film by Jim Bayley of Kingston. Entitled "Canoeing the Coppermine River", and in stunning color, the movie depicted the three week trip, by 12 intrepid Canadians in six canoes, down the Coppermine River, from Yellowknife in the North West Territories, to the Arctic Ocean, to commemorate the centennial year of 1970 in the N.W.T.

A visually exciting and stimulating documentary it portrays the dangerous shooting of the many rapids encountered along this mighty and powerful river, notorious for its areas of white water, and, with superb photographic skill, showed the vastness and grandeur of the far north, its great wealth of animal life, its birds, shrubs and flowers.

Mr. Bayley was introduced by Alma Wallis and thanked by Mr. H. Smith.

Study Guild Discusses Pollution

A lively discussion on "Information Pollution, sources of information and its reliability" proved a most stimulating program to open the 1971-72 season of the Women's Study Guild. Using provocative statements and questions from an article in September Maclean's magazine, the new president, Miss Olive Elson, sparked many comments and expressions of opinion from the number of women who attended the first meeting of the season.

Several members of the executive reviewed such magazines as Maclean's, Saturday Night, Time, Chatelaine, New Yorker and others, telling of the various types of articles contained in them, and commenting on their value. Following a full discussion on the merits of these, newspapers, radio, TV, and other media.

Miss Elson gave a list of periodicals available at the Public Library, 76 sum up, she then asked the members (a) where they got their information, (b) how they imparted it to others; (c) what contributed to their understanding and retention of information.

Preceding the program, Mrs. R. Roulet had used "Prayers of Life" by Michel Quoist as a devotional, reading prayers that pertained to various methods of communications.

Mrs. G. E. Adams was hostess at her home for the meeting, and was assisted by Mrs. H. G. Wylie and Mrs. L. N. Fortin in serving refreshments.

During the business portion, letters were read from the Canadian Save The Children Fund, and Marylene Cohen of Marseilles, France, the girl who is sponsored by the Guild. Pamphlets from CANSAVE regarding its sponsorship plan, the summary of its annual report, and its Christmas cards for 1971 were distributed by Mrs. R. Settle to each member of the Guild.

Mr; Mrs Ross Lott Wed for 50 Years

A pleasant evening was held recently in Tabernacle United Church, Belleville when 'open house' was held to mark the occasion of the 50th wedding anniversary of Mr. and Mrs. Ross Lott, Ameliasburg RR 1. Mrs. Lott dressed in plum heather tone dress was presented with a corsage of yellow sweetheart roses and Mr. Lott with a rose boutonniere.

For the occasion, the hall was highlighted with a lace covered tea table with gold underlay, centred with a three-tiered white and gold decorated anniversary cake and flanked with golden tapers. The guest tables were at most attractive with white cloths centred with bouquets of yellow snapdragons.

Pouring tea and coffee were Mrs. Lott's two sisters, Mrs. Maude Baker and Mrs. Chris Ralph, both of Toronto; a sister-in-law, Mrs. Fred Charlesworth of Trenton; Mr. Lott's cousin, Mrs. Maurice Bell of Stirling and two nieces, Miss Joyce Bell of Belleville and Mrs. Bob Charlesworth of Trenton.

Granddaughters of the honored guests Roxann, Jean, Diana and Brenda Lott as well as great nieces Edith and Tina Charlesworth served the guests and replenishing in the kitchen were Mrs. Grant Minaker, Mrs. Bill Moreau, Mrs. Lena Wright and Mrs. Berkley Stetzner.

Mr. and Mrs. Lott (nee Janey Charlesworth) were married on September 28, 1921 at Frankford Anglican Church by the late Rev. Byers. Attendants at the time were the late Mr. and Mrs. Percy Charlesworth. The couple have two sons Edwin Lott, 20 Green Street, Belleville and Elvin of Rossmore. There are 10 grandchildren.

Mr. Lott at one time farmed in the Frankford area and in Prince Edward County and later worked at the Officers' Mess, Trenton CFB and in the past few years has been occupied at house painting.

Among the many messages of congratulations, the couple received telegrams from Prime Minister Pierre Trudau, Opposition Leader Robert Stanfield and George Hees MP.

Numerous cards and gifts were also received from the 34 relatives and friends who signed the guest book tended by granddaughter Sharon Lott.

Rev. W. C. Cox was chairman and throughout the program Mr. Harvey Couch and son Kenneth, and Donald Campbell furnished musical selections. Several vocal duets were rendered by Dennis and Dale Ray of Springbrook and Sandra and Lana LaChappelle, Stirling.

Mrs. Clayton Thompson of Hoards presented a devotional with scripture pictures on the theme "The Wonders of Our Father's World." Her assistants were Mrs. Harold Miller, Mrs. Tom Thompson, Mrs. Gerald Heagle and Mrs. Ron Parr. A trio selection was given by Linda, Heather and Kenneth Hoard with Margaret Hoard as accompanist. Rebellious Girl Feels Unwanted

By DORIS CLARK

Dear Doris: My friend's daughter (15) is one of six children. If her mother slaps her face, the girl slaps her mother's face. She has always been hard to handle.

When this daughter was 10 her mother gave birth to the sixth child. The daughter was staying with us and told us that she did not want to go back home. "No one will even look at me," she said. "They will only be looking at the new baby."

I know for a fact that her mother is baby crazy and if the child grows up as an easy-to-raise child, fine, but if as in this daughter's case, she needs the spoken knowledge that she is loved and wanted, and acts up when she is not wanted, well, maybe, she gets written off in the mother's mind. — Wanting To Help

Dear Wanting: I suppose the thing is as plain as the nose on your face — to everybody but the mother. She thinks she can breed babies, take care of their physical wants, and let it go at that.

I know more than one mother, or father, who will lavish attention on babies and young children. Then when their babies reach a certain age they no longer find them interesting. It is as if they had enjoyed playing with dolls but when they turned into people with minds and ideas of their own, the older persons were not equal to them.

Perhaps if you can remain a staunch friend, inviting this girl to your home from time to time to share in your family fun, you can provide some of the warmth which this young rebel lacks.

• • •

Dear Doris: What do you recommend for fingernails? Sometimes I have several split split or broken at the ends at one time. — Tried Everything.

Dear tried: Does "everything" include rubber gloves? Detergents tend to soften the nails. Many women would have broken fingernails all winter if they didn't use rubber gloves. Insulated against heat, every time they put their hands in hot, soapy water.

There is a heavy cream or salve on the market which can be applied at night all around the nails, with good effect. Repeat your question, enclosing a stampeed, self-addressed envelope, and I will give you the name of this commercial product.

• • •

Dear Doris: For a 50th anniversary dinner, does the lady honored guest sit opposite her husband on one side and he on the other side of table, or opposite his bride of 50 years ago; or do they sit together? — Josie

Dear Josie: Fifty years ago they sat side by side at their wedding dinner holding hands surreptitiously under the table. Oh yes, they did. I have it on good authority! But their wedding guests had not yet thought up the picturesque twist of demanding that they rise and kiss each other upon the insistent tapping of spoon on glass.

The couple fifty years married will still enjoy sitting side by side, bride on groom's right. And who knows? Maybe they will sneak in a little hand hold.

• • •

The September meeting of Sidney South WI was held at the home of Mrs. M. Jamieson with nine members and six visitors present.

Mrs. G. Wilman chaired the meeting and conducted the business portion. 4-H leaders were announced as follows: Club 1 — Mrs. H. Regensburg and Mrs. F. Hosking; Club 3 — Mrs. J. Best and Mrs. C. Carleton.

An invitation was received from Chatterton WI to attend the next meeting Oct. 13 at 8 p.m. in Sidney Baptist Church hall. It is hoped that as many as possible will be able to attend.

The president also announced that there would be a board meeting at Scott's Church with Mrs. C. Thicker in charge. The short course "News and Ideas for Kitchens" will be held December 1 at the Sidney Township Hall.

The meeting was turned over to Mrs. G. Grills, convener for Agriculture and Canadian Industries who introduced her niece, Miss Raina Rolufs as guest speaker. Representing Rolufs Travel Centre in Belleville, Miss Rolufs introduced members to 13 countries in Europe as well as London, England and the Netherlands. She described her trip which lasted 22 days and included over 30 cities of the world. The beauty of her trip was revealed in the many colorful slides which she showed, along with currency and many souvenirs of her trip.

During lunch which was served by the hostess and her assistants, Mrs. J. Dickens, Mrs. D. McComb and Mrs. Sills, the conlumers report was given by Mrs. F. Meens and contained some helpful hints.

It's natural for a small child to feel jealous of the little newcomer. Scolding will not make him less so. Protect the new baby, of course, but let the older child admit to you that he doesn't like her or want her, while you reassure him that he still has your affection.

Ann Landers

Ann Goofs Answer; Due to Copy Cut

ANN LANDERS

DEAR ANN LANDERS: You goofed — and I hope you'll be big enough to admit it. I refer to your shamefully inadequate response to the mother who signed herself "Ill In Illinois." I was ill in Indiana when I read it.

The mother was writing about her handsome, talented, 21-year-old, homosexual son. She wanted to know how she could help him lead a normal life. Your advice was for the mother to get counseling and learn to live with the situation which you described as "probably irreversible." Your last line, that she was propably a lot unhappier than the boy, was strange, to put it mildly. How did you reach that conclusion? Did an assistant write that answer? It didn't sound like you, Ann Landers. Please review the letter and try it again. — MARION, IND.

DEAR MARION: You're right that I goofed, but the buck stops there. Every word that appears under my byline is written by me, and I'm responsible for it.

The advice you question was, I agree, inadequate. I have no defence but I do have an explanation. I sometimes must cut a letter in order to use it in the column. In this instance, I cut the letter so drastically that some vital facts were deleted. In the original letter, the mother described the boy's accomplishments. He was creative, outgoing, related well to members of both sexes, did beautifully in school and was headed for a promising career. He told his parents he was a homosexual and made it clear that he was perfectly content and did not want professional help. The mother, on the other hand, was so grieved about his deviation that she was becoming bedridden. I told her not to press therapy on a boy who didn't want it, but to get some therapy herself, so she could learn to accept him.

DEAR ANN LANDERS: Our youngest daughter went steady for two years with a smart alec punk who didn't know enough to stand up when speaking to an adult. We never liked the boy and she knew it. To make a long story short, he got Neva pregnant and then tried to lie his way out of it.

I could fill your whole page with stories about what we went through with our daughter. To complicate matters Neva really did care about that creepy kid. We had a terrible time convincing her that she should not keep the baby. It tore my heart out to watch that girl sit by the phone, waiting for a call. And then when the father had to drive her to the hospital to have the baby I thought to myself, what's the matter with the laws in this country? How come the boy who got her that way is nowhere around? Is it fair that a 16-year-old girl, who was a virgin when she met the dirty dog, has to carry the burden alone while he runs off with his buddies to ballgames and dates other girls?

Please, Ann Lanuers, do what you can to get a law passed saying the boy has to marry the girl when a pregnancy is involved. You would be performing a great service. — WICHITA HEARTACHE.

DEAR W.H.: A great service? For whom? Do you have any idea what the divorce rate in this country is among people who get married willingly? Why wish a bum like that on your daughter? She is far better off without him. Good riddance.

Personal Touch Is Keynote of Quinte Area Tour

By BRIAN AMARON
Staff Reporter

Prime Minister William Davis must have felt like an authentic, old-time politician Thursday as he used the personal approach to meet the citizens of Deseronto, Napanee and Tweed.

Seeking re-election in the Oct. 21 provincial election, the Conservative leader said "there's much shaking hands and signing autographs because people still want it."

Certainly the crowds who turned out to greet Mr. Davis and his wife Kathleen, seemed to be in agreement. More than 300 people, most of them youngsters let out of public school, welcomed the premier to Deseronto. PC advance man John McNaughton was nearly mobbed as he handed out placards and flags to cheering kids.

The visit to Deseronto and Napanee was only the second by a provincial premier in history although Mr. Davis was hard-pressed to come up with the name of the first dignitary. George Lyon, Reeve of Deseronto and Mr. Davis' host, recalled that Howard Ferguson had paid a call to the communities in the late 1920s.

Highlight of the visit was the meeting between Mr. and Mrs. Davis and Chief Earl Hill of the Bay of Quinte Mohawk band. Dressed in full costume, Chief Hill was accompanied by a group of similarly attired school children as well as former chief John A. Brant.

Chief Hill spoke privately to the premier about the possibility of provincial aid in the rebuilding of the band's council house. Mr. Davis suggested he make a formal request to Queen's Park.

MORE

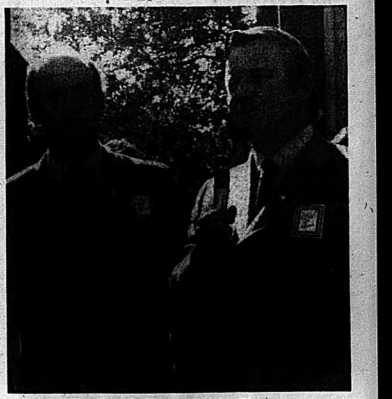
The Prime Minister then spoke briefly to the crowd from the main steps of the post office, promoting Hastings MP Clark Rollins who is seeking re-election for the fourth time, and emphasizing the Conservative party's desire to "consult with people"

The scene then shifted to Napanee where the greeting was perhaps not as noisy but every bit as enthusiastic. Mayor Lorne Smuck presented Mr. and Mrs. Davis with a wooden serving tray before the town hall but the gift caused some consternation for the honored couple. "Kathleen thought it was going to be a baby's bassinet," Mr. Davis said, commenting on the finely-wrapped gift. "Five's all I can handle, I think. We're not thinking of those things at the moment." They have five children at home in Brampton.

The premier strolled along Dundas Street, shaking hands and chatting with the locals, mostly older folk who had lined the sidewalks. The walk ended at the headquarters of Jim Taylor, Conservative nominee for Prince Edward-Lennox riding. There guests were treated to coffee and light snacks while the Premier made a speech similar to the one he gave in Deseronto. The party then piled back onto the campaign buses and set out for Tweed.

During the ride, Dr. Davis answered reporters' questions on a variety of issues. He said his government was carefully investigating the Sandbanks question and discussion was underway with Public Works officials about resemblsition of the land.

Environmental control and pollution abatement were the prime concerns of the young. Mr. Davis said in reply to a question about discoveries he might have made so far during the campaign. He listed the environment as number one among his party's priorities for the next four years.



He also mentioned that since "people feel divorced from government," his administration would see to it that "ministers get to the people, municipal heads, school heads, citizens groups. There are human limitations, of course, but the situation can be improved."

The reception in Tweed was a mixture of youthful enthusiasm and elderly reserve. While an ice cream stand catered to the crowds' parched throats, Mr. Davis and his wife inched their way around the warm parking lot, taking time to sign autographs on Canadian flags, sample the odd cone and even wish one voter best wishes on his 89th birthday.

Mr. Davis met with one dissenting note when a man, who said he had led a petition, questioned him about the closing down of Tweed - Hungerford District High School and the resultant busing out of students. Mr. Davis replied that he was well aware of the problem but reiterated his decision, saying that the majority of local citizens supported him.

The band was playing the Davis campaign song and a group of young supporters were loudly spelling out the Prime Minister's name as Mr. Davis picked up the microphone to make his final speech of the afternoon. The theme was familiar, invoking the crowd to support local candidate Clarke Rollins and pointing out the past record of Conservative governments.

Then, with a final grin and wave, the premier and his wife stepped on board the chartered bus and headed off for an evening engagement in Peterborough.

Jim Taylor Supported in Picton

Picton Welcome Warm

By MARGARET HAYCOCK

PICTON (Staff) — Ontario Premier William Davis stressed yesterday the government has made senior citizens exempt from payment of medicare premiums as of January 1, to allow them to share "our general economic growth."

Mr. Davis, who made a sixty-minute stopover at the Progressive Conservative committee rooms and the Armory Mall, also endorsed the government's decision to lower the voting age.

He spoke to a group of approximately 250 persons, many of them students, gathered on the lawn of the Armory Mall.

The Premier said he has seen nothing in his campaign and nothing in his experience to contradict the wisdom of lowering the voting age to 18 years.

Mr. Davis commented today's youth has "a very real contribution" to make and urged students in the group to approach the election objectively.

"They'll add a lot of enthusiasm to the election," he predicted.

The personal touch is necessary in an election campaign, according to Premier Davis, who observed a campaign cannot be conducted solely through press conferences and press releases. He said he has been travelling for the past week and meeting persons province-wide to discover and discuss their concerns.

"These kids ask some pretty good questions," he told reporters as he spoke with 13-year-old Warren McFaul, a grade nine student at Prince Edward Collegiate Institute.

The youth had asked Mr. Davis his opinion of American takeover of Canadian industries and commented the United States assumes control of a Canadian mine, for example, sells its resources and profits.

Premier Davis replied that the province is not closing its doors to American investment because "we are still young economically and we have to have our people working."

American operated industries provide large tax returns and salaries to prove takement is not "a one way street."

Mayor Ackerman welcomed Mr. and Mrs. Davis to Picton and presented the couple with a souvenir of local handicraft.

When Mr. Davis concluded his brief remarks at the Armory Mall he moved through the crowd signing autographs, shaking hands and answering questions.

"Is it alright for me to do this?" he asked as several students sought his autograph on their excuse slips.

The premier was stopped briefly by a man who shouted he was from Montreal and happened to be passing through Picton during Mr. Davis stopover. He was eager to tell the premier he felt his policies were "excellent" and repeated "bon chance" as he shook hands with the visiting premier.

CN Introduces New System

A new phase of merchandise shipping has been started and the Canadian National station in Belleville is finding itself right in the middle of the operation.

"It has long been a problem that customers were inconvenienced by the lack of information available on the location of a particular car in a certain train due at least partially, to the middle men in the business," said George Van de Water, manager for CN's Rideau area.

In the past, agents spread across the CN line would negotiate business with a customer and then go through complicated channels, relaying the needs of the customer.

With the new system, the customer will talk directly to the service centre for the area. This same centre will be responsible for the location of the car, its progress and its invoicing.

One of 100 such centres will be located in the city. Others in the Rideau area are located at Ottawa, Brockville and Peterborough.

The centre in Belleville will be responsible for cars as far west as Oshawa and as far east as Gananoque, Picton will be the southern boundary of control and car responsibility will reach as far north as Peterborough and Bancroft.

"What we are trying to do is to centralize all the customer services so that when a customer has a problem, he can make a toll-free phone call to the service centre in his area and find out exactly what is happening to his freight," said Mr. Van de Water.

"Express services are already under a scheme such as this and the carload service is the next step to making the operation complete across the board," he said.

These services will be extended to cover passenger service and telecommunications in the future.

"Through this change," said Mr. Van de Water, "at least nine area agents will be closing shop."

Some facilities used in the old operation will be used to complement the communication setup of the new program for car location.

"The number of problems in the old scheme were ridiculous to the extent of duplication of work, no one person was responsible for the service, customers could not benefit from the extensive computer system in Montreal which could locate their car instantly, and communications broke down," said Mr. Van de Water.

"With the new system, these problems are almost completely eradicated," he said.

Another serious problem in the past was that a train car could be held at the station until a complex process of rating and billing was completed.

"Now the customer can conceivably receive his invoice at the same time as his cargo," said Mr. Van de Water.

Spokesmen for the CN feel the "Servo Centre" will reduce most of the tieups in the over-all service to the customer.

An extension is being added to the existing express building which will cost in the neighborhood of $100,000, with construction starting in the next month.

Work should be completed by February and staff training and relocation should be completed by March when the station is expected to go into operation.

Fans Cost Senators Chance to Win Last Washington Game

WASHINGTON (AP) — Washington Senators, their merry mourners turning a funeral into a fiasco, have bowed out of baseball with one of the rarest feats in the team's history—a last inning loss by forfeit.

The Texas-bound team, a fixture in the American League's basement for many of its 71 years, seemed headed for certain victory in the capital finale Thursday night.

The Senators held not only a 7-5 lead, but New York Yankees had no one on base and only a single out remaining.

By the hundreds they poured out of the stands, roaming the outfield, jamming the basepaths, pulling up the bases and running off with the pitchers' rubber.

For the first time since 1954, a major league baseball game ended in forfeit.

"We won the game even though they took it away by the rules," said catcher Paul Casanova.

"I never expected anything like that, said pitching coach Sid Hudson, a Senator for more than two decades.

"Th't was just the fans' way of expressing themselves over what they thought was a wrong deal," said receive Tom McCraw. "I'm not saying it was a good way, but, I guess they thought it was the only way."

Almost 15,000 fans were on hand to see the Senators, who lost 96 games with a team batting average of .230, slip into history alongside storied losers like the St. Louis Browns. The fans came not so much to mourn as to heckle owner Robert Short, who engineered the transfer of the franchise to Dallas-Fort Worth.

Short was not seen at the stadium, but fans carried an effigy of him through the stands. Signs ridiculing Short blossomed from virtually every corner of Kennedy Stadium. At least one of the signs was obscene.

Police removed that one, drawing a jeer that was almost matched in sheer volume by the cheers for popular slugger Frank Howard.

Howard, who has not been noticeably happy about the prospect of playing in Texas next season, gave the fans something to remember him by with a soundly laced linedrive home run in the sixth—his 28th of the season.

"We had all the confidence in the world we would have gotten the side out," said outfielder Del Unser, another popular player.

But then came the flood of fans, picking at the outfield grass, at the scoreboard signs, even the dugout roof.

"It was like opening day, except in reverse," said Unser. "It's one of the things I'll always remember."

The Senators' forfeit was the first in major league baseball since July 18, 1954, when delaying tactics by St. Louis manager Eddie Stanky led umpires to give Philadelphia Phillies a sweep of a doubleheader with the Cardinals.

Winning Swing

Fanning Pleased with Expo Performance

MONTREAL (CP) — Despite the fact Montreal Expos finished the 1971 season with 71 wins, two less than last year, general manager Jim Fanning was still satisfied with the progress of the third year club.

"If we take a look at some of the individual performances, there was a clear improvement over last year.

"Our best young players head into a double A next year and some others should make the jump to the major leagues in 1972 and 1974," said Fanning. "Until they're ready, we will make do with what we have."

Fanning said he was particularly pleased with the starting pitching staff, notably Bill Stoneman. Ernie McAnally and Steve Renko.

Stoneman was shooting for his 18th win in the season's finale Thursday at Jarry Park, but lost the game 3-1 to Ferguson Jenkins and the Chicago Cubs, leaving his record at 17-16.

Renko had a 15-14 mark and McAnally came back from a disastrous beginning to finish with a respectable 11-12 record. At one stage of the season, McAnally was 2-3.

Marshall was the Expos' premier relief artist, pitching 23 saves and posting a 5-8 won-lost record with a 4.28 earned run average. He appeared in 66 of Montreal's games and finished 52 of them.

One thing that Fanning hopes to be able to improve during the off-season is the left-handed pitching on the club. The Expos currently have one southpaw—Dan McGinn—who was anything but effective with the Expos this season.

McGinn appeared in 28 games for Montreal—six as a starter—and had an unimpressive 1-4 record with a 5.95 ERA.

There is another department that Fanning would also like to improve and that's speed on the bases.

The Expos have a couple of good base-runners in their minor league chain including Jim Chapman of Vancouver, B.C., who played part of this season with Quebec Carnavals of the Eastern League.

But the Expos club managed only 54 stolen bases this season as a team, which is unimpressive when some individual base runners get more than that in a season.

"We need a guy with the Lou Brock type of speed," Fanning said. "We need offensive speed, the kind that both ers a pitcher."

Staub Busiest

MONTREAL (CP) — Right-fielder Rusty Staub of Montreal Expos ended the 1971 season being the only player in the National League to play in all of his team's 162 games.

Staub finished the season as Montreal's leading hitter with a .311 average with 19 home runs and 97 runs batted in.

September Slump Survived, Giants Head for Champagne

By THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

San Francisco Giants, after building a huge early-season lead and nearly losing it in a dreadful September slump, put everything together on the final day of the season and clinched the National League's West Division title with a 5-1 victory Thursday night over the San Diego Padres.

Charlie Fox, in his first season as Giants' manager, talked about it in a champagne-filled dressing room celebration that had been brewing for more than a week.

"I feel wonderful," he said, his uniform dripping with the bubbly stuff the Giants had been carting around in the final hectic days of the frantic race.

The Giants' victory enabled them to finish one game ahead of the onrushing Los Angeles Dodgers, who completed their season with a 2-1 victory over Houston Astros.

"Sure, I'm disappointed that we didn't go all the way," said Dodgers' manager Walt Alston in the quiet Dodgers' dressing room.

The Giants' triumph also sends them into the National League's best-of-five playoff against Pittsburgh, the East Champion, beginning Saturday in San Francisco.

The Pirates ended their regular season with a 4-3 victory over Philadelphia Phillies. In other National League finales, New York Mets defeated St. Louis Cardinals 6-1; Atlanta Braves downed Cincinnati Reds 6-2, and Chicago Cubs rimmed Montreal Expos 5-3.

The Giants, leading the wild West since April 12th, took an 8½-game lead into the final month of the season but their late swoon, which saw them lose 16 to 22 games, shrank their lead over Los Angeles to one game going into the final day of the campaign. But even in the team's worst stretch, Fox was certain the Giants could win it.

"We had the confidence all along, "he said. "We knew we'd get straightened out."

Fox was right. The Giants won three of their last four games and hung on for their first title since 1962.

Juan Marichal, the high-kicking right-hander and ace of the staff, made sure of it. He held the Padres to five hits, struck out five and had his usual pin-

Only two days before the game, he had not been feeling well. "But I'm going to try," he said, adding that he had no problems against the Padres.

"When you've got support like I have on this club it makes you feel better and it makes you pitch better," he said.

Rookie Dave Kingman, filling in for injured Bobby Bonds, provided Marichal's major offensive support. The 6-6, 210-pound right-handed slugger capped a three-run fourth inning against Dave Roberts with a two-run homer.

Tito Fuentes opened the inning with a single and scored on a double off the centre field fence by 40-year-old Willie Mays. The Giants added two runs in the ninth, but they weren't necessary as Marichal had the Padres well under control.

The Dodgers, meanwhile, were concentrating on beating the Astros and watching the scoreboard. They had to win and did. But there was nothing they could do to stop the Giants.

"On paper, we're a better team than the Giants. But they're a better team on the field. But to lose by a game . . . well, that's pretty tough."

Don Sutton, 17-12, pitched brilliantly for the Dodgers, thwarting the Astros on six hits and six strikeouts. "I couldn't afford to relax out there on the mound, even if the Giants were ahead," he said, "I still had some men to get out."

Pittsburgh tuned up for the playoffs, beating the Phils with the help of Manny Sanguillen's homer and Jackie Hernandes' two-run double.

The Mets' Tom Seaver won his 20th game and bettered his league strikeout record for right-handers, fanning 13 for a total of 283, as New York topped St. Louis. Ken Singleton belted two homers for the Mets.

Chicago's Ferguson Jenkins registered his 24th victory—tops in the league—as the Cubs defeated Montreal on Ron Santo's run-scoring single and Jim Hickman's two-run double in the ninth.

Saints Make Two-Pivot System Work

By ERIC EMERSON
Sports Staff

The idea might not have been quite what Leo Cahill had in mind when he started his notorious new offensive system with the Toronto Argonauts but the Quinte Saints showed yesterday that twin quarterbacks really can be used effectively.

Quinte's change from the original concept, however is that both quarterbacks are employed simultaneously. The system worked to perfection as the Saints trampled Centennial 52-6 in a Bay of Quinte COSSA senior bout yesterday.

Actually, only Rick Meagher saw action at the pivotal position of Quinte's offence but Saints' backup quarterback Stan Brooks was getting more than his share of play — at offensive end.

The second string signal caller proved to be a first-rate receiving threat, hauling in scoring strikes of 40 and 60 yards run from Meagher who shredded the Chargers' pass defence.

"Stan? What can you say about him, except that it must have been his tremendous basketball training that helped him catching a football," grinned Quinte head coach Rick Locke. Brooks basketball mentor last season, as he assessed the receivers' efforts.

At first, it appeared as though Centennial would be the team to enjoy air success as quarterback Glenn Carleton connected for a spectacular 60-yard pass - and - play with end Phil Easton. After their initial success the Chargers seldom went to the air, however, sticking to a ground game that went nowhere against the tough Saint defence. "I was a bit surprised that they didn't pass more after they completed a couple of early ones," admitted Locke.

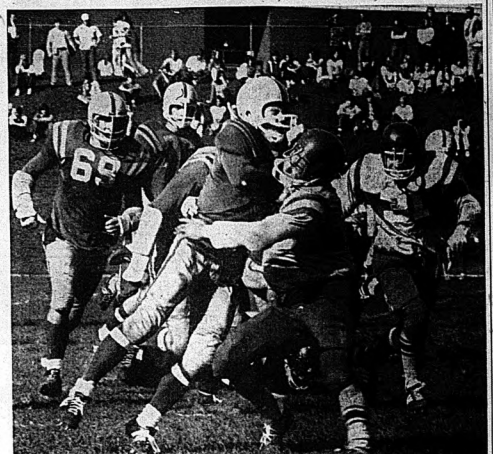
Increased pressure by the defensive line in the second, third and fourth quarters was one possible explanation for Centennial's failure to exploit the passing game.

While Centennial was grounding to a halt, Meagher filled the air with footballs, as the Chargers proved fairly strong against the rush but were completely vulnerable to the air attack.

Besides his pitches to Brooks, the Saint slinger threw a 50-yard touchdown pass to brother Terry Meagher on a flea-flicker and helped set up a 27-yard gallop by Paul McQuaid on a Statue of Liberty play.

In addition to the touchdown tosses the Meagher brother act accounted for two two - point conversion passes with Brooks hauling in a third.

McQuaid scored in the first period on a five-yard reverse and Bill Kirkham went 12 yards on an off-tackle for the other Quinte major. Punter Paul Hall booted a pair of singles and Carleton recorded a safety touch for the remaining Quinte offensive points.



Inside linebacker Ken Vos capped an outstanding effort on the Saints' defence when he sprinted 30-yards with a second quarter interception for a touchdown. Corner linebacker Terry Doran was the other stickout in a fine all-round defensive performance by the winners.

The game had figured to be a much closer affair with both teams winning their league openers. Quinte had blanked Centre Hastings 27-0 while the Chargers had come through with a dramatic 7-1 last-minute win over the tough Trenton Tigers.

Quinte's passing success was evident in the junior game as well, helping them to an 18-6 win. Saint quarterback David Bird flipped 25-yard scoring passes to David Drake and Terry Marek to build a 12-0 lead at half time.

The winners rallied in the final period, with Peter Vos providing some powerful inside running and Murray Hannah adding the final counter on a 15-yard off-tackle run.

Defensive lineman Dave Ogden and Terry Reid along with safety Bob Moore were the major factors in containing the junior Chargers.

'Fancy Meeting You Here!'

Centennial Secondary School halfback John Bunner runs smack into the stonewall defence of the Quinte Saints as linchacker Terry Doran makes the tackle. Quinte turned the expected Bay of Quinte COSSA battle into a rout as the defending champions bounced back from a 6-0 deficit to hand the Chargers a 52-6 drubbing. It was the second league game for both teams after each had won their league opener last week.

Fairway Problems Could Be Worse

By ERIC EMERSON
Sports Staff

There's no doubt that Belleville Fairways' coach Murray Hunter is faced with a problem, the rookie Junior B hockey coach can be excused if he does manage to smile through his tears.

The problem? "We might have to wind up cutting some of the guys who played on last year's team," explained Hunter after witnessing a turnout of close to 30 junior, age candidates at the Memorial Arena last night. Some "Some players might not make it this season, who could have made it almost any other year."

Hunter tempers his enthusiasm with the knowledge that the Eastern Ontario Junior B league should be a well-balanced him. "Peterborough and Oshawa always seem to come up with power," he acknowledges, "but we could put up a good solid fight for third place. Our main problem will be not to let down against teams like Gananoque and Picton, we don't know what kind of clubs they'll come up with." The latter two entries in the league are Junior C clubs that will compete with the Peterborough, Oshawa, Kingston and Belleville "B" teams.

One area which threatened to be a problem could turn out to be a Fairway strong point — netminding. "I don't know how good Arnie Istead is, but Bob Harrison looked sharp tonight. He could have the inside track on the goal-tending position," noted the Belleville coach. Istead, last year's back-up goalie, was forced to miss the initial practice because of job commitments.

A total of 11 players who saw Junior B action last season were on hand for the workout including captain John Mulvihill, Tim Yohn, Brian O'Coin, Cliff Janitsch, Peter Ackerman, Dave Smith, Bill Bunnett, Doug James, Paul Whattam, Dave Horwood and Rod Palmer.

Also signed with the Fairways is Mark Woodward, the leading scorer last season with the now-defunct Trenton Golden Hawks. The speedy centre counted 12 goals and 20 assists for Trenton.

Hunter was also impressed with the first appearances of defenceman Jim Cain, a newcomer to the Belleville area and centre Brian Coutts who performed with the Blake Kerr Midgets last season.

The Fairways' coach made eight cuts after the practice session and will continue to cut the size of the squad this weekend. He feels that the team may be ready for a short scrimmage in tonight's 6 p.m. workout.

Quinte Raceway Runs Final Card

The Quinte Agricultural Society hopes to fold its harness racing card Saturday and noisily steal away. The group, which conducts the Quinte Raceway harness cards will hold its final meet of the season tomorrow night and officials are hoping for a big turnout.

President Ev Gowsell explained that "we had two more dates we could have operated, but the crowds have been dropping off lately because of the weather, so we thought it would be better to wind things up Saturday instead of maybe going in the hole for next season."

The final meet will act under way at 7:45 p.m. at the Belleville Fairgrounds and will have a full 10 race card.

BCI Soccer Squads Hold Moira Scoreless

BCI's senior soccer squad trounced the Trojans in a Bay of Quinte Cossa bout yesterday, but the junior Collegians were held to a 0-0 tie by their Moira counterparts.

Senior Collegians 4 and Dave Van Vliet scored in the first half for BCI. Van Vliet crashed into goalie Jim Sherberley on the play sending the Moira netminder to hospital on a possible broken nose. BCI netminder Warren Rushlow on the other hand had an easy night as the Collegians controlled the play.

Van Vliet scored his second goal of the game in the final half, while Rick Hogge missed a fine opening to up the count to 4-0. It was the second shutout in a row for the Rushlow.

Minor Hockey Offers Two More Chances

". . . And the sign said minor hockey players had best apply," might not make the hit parade, but the message should be clear to boys planning to participate in the sport this winter.

Only 200 applications have been received so far by the Belleville Minor Hockey Association, about half the number expected. Those who have not registered for minor hockey will have only two more chances before they are forced to go on a waiting list.

Registration will be held tonight at the Belleville Memorial Arena from 7 - 9 p.m. and Saturday from 9 a.m. to 1 p.m.

Princess Anne Could Set Precedent

LONDON (Reuter) — Britain's latest equestrian star, Princess Anne, could become the first member of the Royal Family ever to take part in the Olympic Games.

The 21-year-old daughter of Queen Elizabeth won the European three-day riding championships at Burghley, England, this month to give her a strong chance of selection in the British team of four for the Olympics at Munich in August next year.

Riding an eight-year-old horse, Doublet—a present from her mother and aired by one of her father's Argentine polo ponies—the princess took on the cream of Europe's endurance riders.

Her performance was all the more remarkable as she had ridden little in the previous two months following a minor operation.

It was only the second time she had competed in a major international event, and she was riding as an individual, not a member of the official British team.

In winning the European championships Sept. 5, Princess Anne showed two of the most important qualities needed for top competition—complete calm and total concentration despite the cheering of the huge crowd every time she took a fence.

British sports writers have practically selected the princess already but she is reserved on her Olympic chances.

She told interviewers after her triumph that she would not ride Doublet again this year, and would have a better idea of her style after trials next April.

Petes Win Home Opener

PETERBOROUGH (CP) — Ron Lalonde scored two goals, one into an empty net, as Peterborough Petes defeated St. Catharines Black Hawks 6-4 Thursday night in the opening game of the Ontario Hockey Association Junior A series.

Lalonde's second goal came with just three seconds remaining in the game after Hawks removed their goaltender for an extra attacker.

St. Catharines led 2-1 after the first period, but Petes held a 4-3 lead at the end of the second.

Ashley Quits NHL

GUELPH (CP) — Linesman George Ashley of Guelph has resigned from the National Hockey League officiating staff and will join the Ontario Hockey Association staff as a referee and linesman.

Ashley, 29, is the second Guelph resident to leave the NHL staff before the new season. Referee Ken Bodendistel has announced he is also moving to the OHA staff.

MONTREAL (CP) — The Quebec Junior A Hockey League, which became a major force on the Canadian amateur hockey scene last season when Quebec Remparts won the Memorial Cup for the first time, begins its 1971-72 season tonight, with six of the 10 teams swinging into action.

Each club will play 62 games between now and next March 27.

The Remparts will be seeking their third straight league title after running away with the championship last year, 32 points better than second-place Shawinigan Bruins.

Other clubs involved in their order of finish last season are Trois-Rivieres Ducs, Sherbrooke Beavers, Verdun Maple Leafs, St. Jerome Alouettes, Sorel Black Hawks, Drummondville Rangers, Laval Nationals and Cornwall Royals.

Despite losing high-scoring Guy Lafleur to Montreal Canadiens of the National Hockey League, he Remparts are favored to retain the league championship this season. Lafleur counted better than two goals a game last season for a 132-goal total.

TORONTO (CP) — Minsky, son of Northern Dancer-Flaming Page, coasted to a half-length win in the sixth race at Woodbine racetrack Thursday, but didn't impress his trainer.

"I can't figure him out," said Sidney Watters, after Minsky edged out Amber Stone to pay $7.70 for the win. "He runs only as hard as he has to. He gets to the lead and pulls himself up.

Minsky finished the mile in 1:23 4-5, combining with Amber Stone for an $8 exactor. Miss Rebound was third.

Hawks' First Win Canucks' First Loss

Vancouver Canucks suffered their first defeat in eight National Hockey League exhibition games Thursday night when they fell 5-4 to Chicago Black Hawks in Vancouver.

It was the first victory for the Hawks in five starts. They have lost two and tied two.

Toronto Maple Leafs and Minnesota North Stars struggled to a 1-1 tie in Toronto, Buffalo Sabres whipped Pittsburgh Penguins 6-2 in North Bay, Ont., and Philadelphia Flyers downed St. Louis Blues 3-1 in Philadelphia.

The Hawks exploded for three goals in the third period to win. Lou Angotti netted the tying and winning goals for Chicago. Pit Martin, Jerry Korab and Chico Maki added a goal each.

Angotti's goals came 23 seconds apart.

Tony Esposito tended goal for the Hawks, while Dunc Wilson and George Gardner shared net duties for the Canucks.

Rookie Richard Martin, a 71-goal scorer with Montreal Canadiens of the Ontario Hockey Association Junior A series last season, sparked the Sabres with two goals. Both came in the first period and Buffalo went ahead 6-0 before the Penguins scored.

Gump Worsley played the entire game for the North Stars, as did Bernie Parent for the Leafs.

Barclay Plager opened the scoring for the Blues early in the first period and then they subsided. Larry Mickey tied the score in the second. Bill Lesuk put Flyers ahead with a slap shot in the third and Garry Dornhoefer added the clincher near the end of the game.

NHL Rival League Better Than Expansion?

EDMONTON (CP) — World Hockey Association teams now being considered in 14 Canadian and United States cities will provide better hockey than the new division of the National Hockey League, W. D. (Bill) Hunter, general manager of Edmonton Oil Kings, said Thursday.

He told the annual "face-off breakfast" of the Western Canada Hockey League club there will be plenty of hockey talent available for the new league, planned to begin competition next season.

"There are quite a few NHL players who are dissatisfied with their opportunities and who would play in the WHA, and many players of major league calibre still are in the minors."

Hunter attended a WHA meeting in Los Angeles recently during which WCHL representatives from Edmonton, Calgary and Winnipeg were offered WHA affiliation.

He estimated the franchise fee at about $1 million compared with the estimated $5 million paid by recent NHL expansion teams.

Farmers Take Own Action; Sue Benson for Wheat Payment

Controversy over the bill has been building in intensity since Otto Lang, minister responsible for the Canadian wheat board, introduced it in Parliament almost a year ago.

Now, its fate may be decided by the courts if four Saskatchewan farmers are successful in a bid to start legal action.

They seek a writ of mandamus against Finance Minister Edgar Benson and their application, filed in Regina Wednesday, is to be heard Oct. 6.

Such a writ, if granted, would force the government to make long-deferred payments to the wheat board under the Wheat Reserves Act, amounting to a sum which has been estimated as either $62 or $90 million.

The government has made no payments under the legislation since July, 1970, intending to replace them with larger payments under the new stabilization act.

Prime Minister Trudeau has reserves act are made, or if the new legislation is much longer delayed by opposition parties in the House, the proposed bill will be withdrawn.

The Liberal government has said farmers cannot have the best of both worlds—either they get the stabilization bill or they stay with the reserves act.

Mr. Trudeau put it succinctly in a television broadcast Thursday night:

"Sorry, we're prepared to increase payments to the western grain farmer from $60 million to $100 million, but we're not prepared to increase it to $160 million. So you must make your choice."

A number of western farm groups, faced with that choice, have come out in support of the new bill recently.

However, both the Progressive Conservative and New Democratic parties in Parliament have continued their opposition, on grounds that the government is breaking the law by its failure to make the required payments under the existing legislation.

With the stalemate in the House continuing, the ultimate decision on fate of the new legislation may rest with the impending court action.

The four farmers who filed the application—William Sordia of Assiniboia, Clarence Lucas of Mazenod, Roy Ames and James Bradley, both of Milestone—did so with the support of the Saskatchewan attorney-general's department.

Attorney-General Roy Romanow said the government has, in effect, lent its name or support to the application in an attempt to insure the four farmers have "standing in the court."

Mr. Trudeau says the $100 million payment under the new bill would be for the crop period ending last July, when he says the government owed the wheat board $60 million under the existing legislation. Payments due to the wheat board since then, under either bill, do not apply until the end of the 1970-71 crop year, he said.

• But Richard R. Southam (PC — Qu'Appelle-Moose Mountain) said the truth is that more than $90 million now is owing under the reserves act. And the proposed $100 million payment, he said, would be diluted since it would go to growers of oats, rye, rapeseed and other grains, not just to wheat farmers.

Papers concerning the court action were served on Mr. Benson Thursday in Ottawa. They require the finance minister or his representative to appear in federal court in Regina next week.

Hellyer Convention Opens

TORONTO (CP) — Paul Hellyer takes his Action Canada movement into its first national convention today, hoping it will lead to a realignment—or coalition—of some existing political parties and a new opposition to the federal government.

Mr. Hellyer, a 1968 leadership candidate for the Liberal party and a former federal transport minister, has made it clear on several occasions he would like to see a realignment of the existing Progressive Conservative and Social Credit parties, along with Action Canada.

For this reason, Mr. Hellyer goes into the three-day convention determined to maintain Action Canada's status as a movement—as opposed to a separate political party—so that efforts can continue toward a realignment of existing political forces.

Conservative and Social Credit observers have been invited to Action Canada's first convention. But the invitation was not extended to the Liberals or New Democrats.

Since Mr. Hellyer broke away from the Liberal party and founded Action Canada last spring there has been no indication of the movement's strength.

His late today, in the keynote speech to this convention, the founding chairman will reveal scientific polling figures for the first time. The figures were secret information on the eve of the convention, the only clue from convention workers was that they were "well up in the thousands."

And no one had any idea of how many delegates would be attending this first convention, since there was no pre-registration system and the meetings were to be open to everyon.

Th convention will feature a series of workshops on economics, taxation, social welfare, foreign affairs, pollution, housing, agriculture, human rights and government structures. It will end late Sunday night with the election of a leader—Mr. Hellyer's victory is a foregone conclusion—and deputy leader.

Four candidates have entered the race for deputy leader. They are: George Skelton, president of Skelton Advertising Services in Calgary; Barry Blow, a 30-year-old Chilliwack, B.C. teacher; Marvin K. Wallace, a London, Ont., businessman; and Leon Pushong of Toronto, who ran unsuccessfully for the British Parliament in 1963.

Action Canada members who do not attend the convention can vote through the regional offices of a trust company which has codes for identifying members. The results are expected to be known here Sunday night.

Trudeau Names 27 Secretaries

OTTAWA (CP) — Prime Minister Trudeau announced Thursday afternoon the appointment of 28 parliamentary secretaries but cut the number to 27 in the evening.

The move made Ian Watson (L-Laprairie) the shortest-lived parliamentary secretary on record. He had the post as assistant to Revenue Minister Herb Gray for just six hours.

Twenty-seven is still by far the largest number of such secretaries in Canadian history. Each of the Liberal MPs so appointed gets $30,000 a year, $4,000 more than the pay and allowances for regular MPs. The largest previous number of parliamentary secretaries was 24.

Of the 151 Liberal MPs, 30 are in the cabinet, 27 are parliamentary secretaries, three hold positions in the House of Commons, 39 are chairmen or vice-chairmen of Commons committees, and two hold Liberal party positions.

Secretaries re-appointed included:

Barnett J. Danson, 50, York North, to Mr. Trudeau; Gaston Isabelle, 50, Hull, to External Affairs Minister Mitchell Sharp; James A. Jerome, 38, Sudbury, to Privy Council President Allan MacEachen; Judd Buchanan, 42, London West, to Indian Affairs Minister Jean Chretien Hugh Faulkner, 38, Peterborough, to State Secretary Gerard Pelletier; New appointees included:

John Roberts, 37, York-Simcoe, to Regional Economic Expansion Minister Jean Marchand; Jack Cullen, 44, Sarnia, to Defence Minister Donald Macdonald; Lloyd Francis, 51, Ottawa West, to Veterans Minister Jean-Eudes Dube; R. Tolmie, 47, Welland, to Consumer Affairs Minister Ron Basford; David Wheatherhead, 43, Scarborough West, to Urban Affairs Minister Robert Andras; Steven Otto, 40, York East, to Supply Minister James Richardson.

Opposition Said 'Vague'

OTTAWA (CP) — Act opposition attack on government economic policies in the Commons Thursday was dismissed by government speakers as being vague and irresponsible.

New Democrat Leader David Lewis opened debate with a motion calling for economic measures that be admitted were not original, but needed action nonetheless.

They included a large-scale winter works program in co-operation with the provinces; immediate reduction in taxes; government action to force down interest rates; large additional funds for housing; funds for anti-pollution measures; introduction of a program to redirect trade and free the Canadian economy from foreign control.

The NDP leader then said Prime Minister Trudeau had juggled unemployment figures in a search for excuses for the current seasonly-adjusted jobless rate of 6.5 per cent.

Hugh Faulkner (L—Peterborough), parliamentary secretary to State Secretary Gerard Pelletier, called Mr. Lewis's motion opportunistic and irresponsible.

He said Mr. Lewis had presented a broad set of attractive proposals.

He had called for a reduction of taxes when the government's tax change bill, currently at second reading in the Commons, would remove a million people from the tax roles and reduce taxes for 4,700,000 people.

He had called for lower interest rates, but short-term interest rates were currently at their lowest level since the early 1960s.

If waned more money for waste treatment plants. But he did not say how much more than the $432 million the government has spent on such plants during the last 10 years.

Robert Andras, minister of state for urban affairs, concentrated on Mr. Lewis's housing proposal.

He said mortgage loans approved under the National Housing Act in the first eight months of 1971 exceeded the volume for any previous full year.

There was little doubt, the minister said, that at the end of the year Canada would be shown to have enjoyed record housing accomplishment.

Mr. Lewis received strong opposition support for his motion.

John Lundrigan (PC—Gander-Twillingate) agreed that Mr. Trudeau has distorted unemployment figures to give the impression the government is doing all right.

Government responses to opposition questions on the economy during the last month had shown deceit, distortion, concealment, pretense, hypocrisy, insensitivity, pious fraud and deliberate deception.

Lewis Promises No-Fault Auto Insurance Plan in 1972

TORONTO (CP) — Stephen Lewis, leader of the New Democratic Party, promised Thursday to enact a no-fault public automobile insurance plan for Ontario in 1972 if his party assumes power after the Oct. 21 provincial election.

This is a commitment the NDP formally undertakes with three weeks remaining in the election campaign," he told a lunch meeting of Toronto area candidates attended by Howard Pawley, Manitoba municipal affairs minister.

"We see it as a commitment to do something about the high cost of living," Mr. Lewis said. The NDP plan would reduce premiums charged by Ontario's 200 private carriers by 15 to 20 per cent, Ontario's new no-fault auto insurance program, introduced this year, covers only personal injuries and death benefits.

Mr. Lewis said the NDP scheme would include no-fault payment of property damage which would eliminate costly delays in reaching accident settlements and help to clear up a huge backlog of automobile litigation in the courts.

Mr. Pawley, invited to Toronto by Mr. Lewis to explain Manitoba's no-fault plan, said the controversy over the plan in his province has died down to an "ideological difference."

Mr. Lewis said the Ontario NDP plan would be mandatory with policies sold with license plates so that no Ontario driver would be on the road without protection.

He said surplus premium income under the plan would be reinvested as a means of reducing fees, or increasing benefits. The plan also envisages a formula to provide compensation to workers in the insurance industry dislocated by the change. A transitional assistance board would be created to provide help in the form of loans or retraining. Many of those dislocated would be invited to accept jobs under the plan. Surplus premium income of private carriers was more than $300 million in 1970.

Mr. Lewis said private insurance agencies would still be able to provide additional coverage over the plan's basic minimum.

He charged the provincial government with standing by while auto insurance premiums, which increased 83 per cent in the last 10 years, led the climb in the consumer price index.

Herb Baker, executive secretary of the Ontario Insurance Agents Association, said his group estimates that 10,000 employees of insurance companies or about one-third of workers in the industry would be put out of work by the Lewis plan.

A spokesman for Liberty Mutual said Mr. Lewis did not say how motorists would be able to save 15 to 20 per cent on their policies.

"All the companies don't charge the same rate," he said. "It's pretty difficult for him to make a statement."

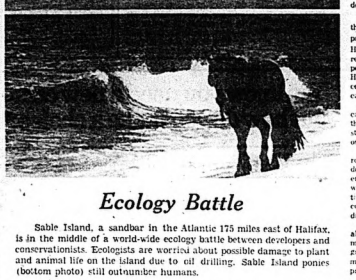
F. Clifford Fraser, deputy regional vice-president of State Farm Mutual Insurance Co. said the plan would "phase out car insurance package deals", with the government going into the car business itself.

A spokesman for Wawanessa Mutual Insurance Co. said the plan didn't sound "very practical."

Nixon Reveals Costs

LONDON, Ont. (CP) — The Liberal party will spend between $450,000 and "probably $750,000" over and above that spent by local riding associations on the Ontario election campaign, party leader Robert Nixon said Thursday night.

Mr. Nixon mentioned the figures on a local radio program and elaborated on them later in an interview.



He agreed with a reporter's suggestion that the $750,000 figure was "a guesstimate." He said he does not know the final figure because party fund raisers only started to solicit funds after the election was called.

The New Democratic Party has said it will spend $628,000, but the Progressive Conservatives have not revealed their election spending. Published reports have estimated Tory spending anywhere between $2 million and $6 million.

Mr. Nixon said his personal campaign in Brant will cost between $5,000 and $7,500, of which he will pay about $2,500 himself.

The NDP's seven one-minute commercials and a single 12-minute film cost $3,000. They were made by film-maker Alan King who said he donated his own time to the party.

The Tories have also refused to divulge the cost of their advertising, which intruded on Mr. Nixon's campaign Thursday.

Ecology Battle

Sable Island, a sandbar in the Atlantic 175 miles east of Halifax, is in the middle of a world-wide ecology battle between developers and conservationists. Ecologists are worried about possible damage to plant and animal life on the island due to oil drilling. Sable Island ponies (bottom photo) still outnumber humans.

Great Deal to Look Into

Hydro Not Answerable: Nixon

LONDON, Ont. (CP) — Tighter government controls are needed to oversee the operation of Ontario Hydro, Liberal Leader Robert Nixon said Thursday.

Campaigning for the Oct. 21 Ontario election, Mr. Nixon told about 125 University of Western Ontario students that "there is a great deal to look into as far as Hydro is concerned."

He said that there now is a government investigation into the operation of Hydro "and it is a very quiet investigation indeed."

He said the investigation by the government committee on productivity started after Health Minister A. B. H. Lawrence complained that the independent commission which runs Hydro raised rates eight per cent without first consulting the cabinet.

Mr. Nixon said that if he became premier, he would retain the commission but institute stricter government controls over it.

The department of the environment "should have a great deal to say" about Hydro's operation. The Hydro commission would also come under the scrutiny of a legislature standing committee, which would report directly to the house.

The Liberal leader said he also plans to make the private member more effective through greater use of legislature committees, and accused former premier John Roberts of being responsible for "downgrading the role of government backbenchers."

The Liberal leader also reiterated his pledge to reduce the size of the cabinet to 12 from 26 because now "the lines of responsibility are unclear, out of focus or blurred."

He also said that if he formed a government, his ministers would not be expected to be technocrats and experts.

"My own view is that a doctor should not be minister of health and a teacher should not be minister of education."

He said that the government already has hired 60,000 civil servants who are experts.

After leaving Ottawa, where the Liberals hold one of the six urban seats, he flew to Brockville, another Conservative area.

The Liberals hold none of the four London area seats and Mr. Nixon told the students "for many years this has been a Conservative stronghold and it may continue so to be."

At a stop-over in Belleville, Mr. Nixon said on a radio show that Ontario farmers, more than any other group, are dissatisfied with the Progressive Conservative government.

The Liberal leader, a farmer himself, told a caller that present government policies on marketing controls do not go far enough to ensure proper returns for farmers.

He also said the government should extend credit to farmers in a manner similar to the way the Ontario Development Corp. makes loans to other industries.

Davis Contends Liberal Opponent Misleading Public on School Issue

NAPANEE, Ont. (CP) — Premier William Davis charged Thursday night that Liberal Leader Robert Nixon is giving the public "factually incorrect" information about the issue of grants to separate schools.

The premier noted that he had said at the outset of the campaign for the Oct. 21 provincial election that he did not want the question to become an election issue.

"I find the government's position is not completely understood by everyone and it may be necessary from time to time to clarify it," Mr. Davis told a news conference aboard his campaign bus.

Both Mr. Nixon and Stephen Lewis, leader of the New Democratic Party, have rejected as unfair the premier's recent decision not to extend government grants to Roman Catholic schools beyond the present cut-off point of Grade 10. Both would extend grants through Grade 13.

Mr. Davis said Mr. Nixon had indicated on more than one occasion "that it was under my administration as minister of education that Grades 9 and 10 were added to the separate school system."

"This is factually incorrect—he's only 74 years out, like it was done in 1856."

"And there's another item that perhaps will have to be explained in greater detail," Mr. Davis added. "And that is his (Nixon's) suggestion, whether deliberate or otherwise, that the grant structure in 1964 was altered with special treatment for Grades 9 and 10, once again under my administration.

"Once again this is factually incorrect."

Mr. Davis noted that in 1964, while he was education minister, government grants to separate schools had been extended to Grade 10 from the old cut-off point of Grade 8.

But Grades 1 through 10 had been part of the separate school system since 1856, while Grades 11, 12 and 13 were, and still are, part of the private system, he said.

In extending grants in 1964 he had merely acted to give separate schools a fair share of grant monies which they had been entitled to under existing constitutional rights.

He had not "added" Grades 9 and 10 to the separate school system, nor was any "special treatment" involved, he said.

The premier said the issue is not one of whether grants should be extended to separate schools, but whether they should be extended to private schools.

The premier has said many times that he does not want to extend grants through Grade 13 for two reasons.

First of all, if he met the demands of Roman Catholic separate school supporters in this regard, he would have to give matching grants to other private schools such as Jewish parochial schools or Upper Canada College. This the province could not afford.

In addition, the premier has said that the extension of grants to private schools would lead to a fragmenting of the school system, when his government wants to see a single, integrated educational system throughout the province.

The premier denied a suggestion that he was making the separate-school question a campaign issue.

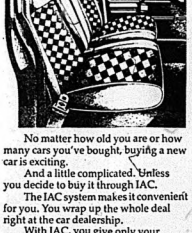
"I said at the time I made clear the position of the government, I was not going to make it an issue and I hoped that it would not be an issue," he said.

"Mr. Nixon in his nomination speech as I read his own press release which was issued from his office ... contained the phraseology where he himself said it was an issue," the premier added.

The Liberal leader was reported as saying, after the government's decision was announced last month, that the grant question would be a campaign issue.

But Mr. Nixon later denied having said this, and stressed that he agreed with the premier and Mr. Lewis that such an emotional question should not be allowed to interfere with the basic election issues of jobs and the economy.

Despite the attempts by all three party leaders to downplay the separate school question, it has continued to pop up during the campaign.



Mr. Nixon, particularly, has been asked about his party's policy on separate schools at almost all his campaign stops.

Premier Davis faced a demonstration by 600 Roman Catholic high school students in Welland last Friday. On Wednesday, during a swing through several Northern Ontario communities, a busload of separate school supporters dogged his footsteps for most of the day.

Let your heart choose the new car you want.
Let your head choose the best way to pay for it.

No matter how old you are or how many cars you've bought, buying a new car is exciting.

With IAC, you give only your deposit as security. Your car stands on its own financial feet. But when you borrow the money, you may find you have to put up your valued savings, your life insurance, or a chattel mortgage as collateral for your loan.

We don't think you should have to go through all that. So, with IAC, you don't.

By not borrowing your sources of borrowing power remain open. That's important. In fact, if later on you need a loan, we can arrange that for you, too.

We include life insurance at no extra cost to you. On top of that, you can enjoy the peace of mind of our Payment Protector Plan. This means we'll continue to make your car payments for you if you have an accident or illness and can't work.

Think of this before you decide: chances are the very man you buy your new car from is financing his entire inventory of cars through an IAC system. Doesn't that mean it must be the most convenient, safest and most sensible way for you to buy?

When you buy, pick whatever car your heart desires. But when you come to pay for it, use your head, ask your dealer about the IAC system. He knows all about it.

Frankford Curlers Can Stay at Home

FRANKFORD — Curling enthusiasts in the Frankford area won't have to travel out of the village to participate in their favorite sport this winter.

Due to the interest shown by local residents, the Frankford Curling Club will take to the ice this year. Curling will begin in early November and will be on a membership or pay - as - you - play basis.

The membership chairman is Jack Madill with John Loucks serving as president; Earl Hewlson vice-president; Mrs. Marjorie Hewlson secretary; Mrs. Carol Mawer treasurer and Gordon Elder games captain.

Garden Gets Job

TWEED — The Tweed Minor Hockey Association isn't promising anyone a rose garden, but how about a Bob Garden? A veteran with 25 years of OMHA experience, Garden was elected president of the Tweed minor hockey group at a meeting last week.

Other officials for the group include Jack McNish, vice-president; Jack McMurray, second vice; Stan Walter, treasurer and Burt Vance, secretary.

Registration fees for this season will be $7 per player with a maximum charge of $5 per family. The minor hockey group operated with a budget of $12,000 last season. One-third of that amount was raised in a walkathon.

White Spots Not Harmful

Dear Dr. Thosteson: I have a skin disease known as vitiligo. In other words, I have white spots on my body. Is there anything I can do about it? Is it harmful? What causes it? — M. B.

There probably isn't much, if anything, you can do about it. It isn't harmful. The cause is not known.

It has been observed that injury to the skin, such as severe sunburn and blistering, can be followed by such white areas in the head, but vitiligo (vitile - EYE - go) has also occurred when there is no record of any such damage to the skin.

Pernicious anemia has been reported to be more common in patients with vitiligo than others — but in other instances there is no connection between the two ailments.

From such small scraps of information, you can correctly draw the conclusion that we just don't know very much about vitiligo. In some skin areas, pigment (coloring matter) simply doesn't accumulate, so you have white spots.

These are more obvious in blacks or people with normally dark skin, but the trouble can affect light-skinned folks, too.

There is no indication that the condition is harmful in any way, except to one's appearance. The light splotches may stay the same, or may grow or spread away spontaneously, but since we don't know the cause, we do not know why these reactions occur.

There are drugs that can be taken by mouth, in conjunction with very careful exposure to the sun or ultra-violet light, but it is a tedious and unreliable process. It may not succeed, or it may cause excessive pigmentation in areas where you don't want it, so I think you'll find dermatologists reluctant to offer this treatment except with the understanding that it may not do any good.

The best solution probably is to use one of the cosmetic preparations designed to match your normal skin color. Or I am told that some people have found a walnut juice stain satisfactory.

* * *

Dear Dr. Thosteson: What causes a person to belch more than usual? — M.A.

Gastritis. Ulcers. Lack of sufficient hydrochloric acid in the digestive juices. And, very frequently, air-swallowing.

For the first three (or possibly some other disorders) see your physician. For air swallowing, read the section on that topic in my booklet, Colitis and Kindred Complaints. Send 25 cents in coin and a long self-addressed, stamped envelope for a copy.

* * *

Dear Dr. Thosteson: My husband had an operation for hemorrhoids six years ago. He complained of bleeding but no other signs or discomfort.

Now he tells me there is bleeding again, but he does not want another operation, and for that reason does not want to see a doctor.

I want him to see a specialist but can't seem to make him see the seriousness of the bleeding. — T. Y.

The bleeding, of course, may or may not be from the same cause, and that is the first thing that should be determined. Second, continued bleeding in time can lead to anemia.

I can think of pleasanter ways to spend time than having a hemorrhoidectomy (I've had one) but having the operation (if needed) is better and saver than not having it.

And, as I remarked in the beginning, it is certainly important to find out what is causing that bleeding, whether your husband does or doesn't agree to surgery.

A fissure, polyp, another hemorrhoid or even cancer may be the cause of his bleeding.

Sydney J. Harris Says

Newness in Auto Is Not A Virtue

Just as everyone thinks he knows how to run a newspaper, everyone thinks he knows how to build, sell and advertise a car — and the auto makers must be fed up to their fins with well-meaning and ignorant advice about their product.

But, if I may add one more shrill voice to the chorus of unpaid consultants, let me suggest that the car makers' constant emphasis on "newness" can be a self-destructive slogan.

Each model year, we are assailed with these strident claims of newness—new body, new comfort, new power, new styling, new performance. And usually, in much small print, new prices.

Now, newness is not a virtue in itself. Unless it represents a genuine advance, it becomes mere novelty, for which the customer is paying. There are signs the customer is beginning to awaken to this fact.

Moreover, these claims cheapen the past reputations of the cars. They tend to indicate that the car of a year or two or three years ago was really not much of a vehicle, and that past claims of greatness were luridly exaggerated. This does nothing to inspire the confidence in buyers.

Ironically enough, most of the men who make cars are solidly conservative in their political and social beliefs. They hold that whatever has been tested and found to be good in the past should not be discarded simply for the sake of expensive experiment.

But what they preach about government, they lamentably fail to practice in industry. If they are to be consistent conservatives, they should point proudly to the worthiness and stability of the old elements in their cars.

Newness for the sake of newness is a shallow, spendthrift and radical attitude toward life. The genuine conservative holds fast to what has been proved excellent in the past, and approaches innovations with caution and suspicion.

Apart from these philosophical considerations, there is the quite practical result that the intense and perpetual competition for newness destroys a good deal of wealth that is tied up in tools and dies; that it places a premium on gimmicks rather than on integrity of workmanship; and that it shoots "newness!" so often that when a truly new car comes along, the motorist is skeptical and jaded.

All change is not progress, as businessmen are the first suggest a more prudent plan in the making of new motor-to warm and regulation. Perhaps it is not presumptuous to cars.

Jeane Dixon's Horoscope

For October 2

Your birthday today: You have much service to render this year, mainly to yourself. You attract chores and responsibilities which offer great opportunity for learning new-for-you lessons. Today's natives combine aggressive personal initiative with some rather specific talent, often follow a specialized career.

ARIES (Mar. 21 — Apr. 19): Get right on the ball early and sell whatever you'd most like to have. Energy and curiosity run strong—and productively today and tomorrow.

TAURUS (Apr. 20 — May 20): There's always a sad story if you're looking for one, sometimes when you're not. Thought about your own activities avoids a dead-end slugfest later.

GEMINI (May 21 — June 20): Facts and people you don't yet know are involved indirectly in almost any project you can imagine. Discretion in what you do pays off well.

CANCER (June 21 — July 22): Attend social obligations, check up on relatives, make the rounds, lingering nowhere. By day's end you'll have many separate threads of experience to put together.

LEO (July 23 — Aug. 22): Up early and in your brightest mood and fresh attire! Be quite visible, ask for what you want, but be wary of promising too much in return.

VIRGO (Aug. 23 — Sept. 22): In a full and busy day, it's hard to get out of work than to just pitch in and do what's to be done and get cleared away.

LIBRA (Sept. 23 — Oct. 22): Delays mean nothing more than simple patience. Entertain and refresh yourself while you wait for routine programs to take shape.

SCORPIO (Oct. 23—Nov. 21): Whatever help you seek has unplanned strings attached—at least, that minor, particularly if your mate is invited in any significant share of the deal.

SAGITTARIUS (Nov. 22 — Dec. 21): Mobilize your strength go ahead despite sounds and furious gestures. Do what's been scheduled and get done with it at the earliest practical moment.

CAPRICORN (Dec. 22 — Jan. 19): New information, unfamiliar faces still work. Showing up to make it a lively day and a long evening of diligent study.

AQUARIUS (Jan. 20 — Feb. 18): Unexpected visitors, perhaps distant relatives are normal for today's experience. Test your facts by cross-reference.

PISCES (Feb. 19 — Mar. 20): Count your blessings, pause, a moment for thanksgiving that there are so many, then return to attending the minor problem

Toronto Major Prize In Airline Scheduling

Alitalia, Royal Dutch KLM, Lufthansa and Air France all want landing rights in Toronto. But the federal government is demanding equal concessions in return.

Italy is first on the list with discussions slated to begin in early November. Air agreements with West Germany, The Netherlands and France will be coming up for negotiation later this year.

One nation—The Netherlands—has already cancelled a bilateral air agreement with Canada because KLM, the Dutch airline, failed to get permission to land at Toronto, say government sources.

West Germany has served notice that the bilateral agreement with Canada will end next August. This came during a squabble between the two countries about landing rights at Toronto and Frankfurt.

Under the bilateral agreement, one year's notice must be given by a party wishing to cancel the deal.

West Germany has refused to allow Air Canada to fly its new Boeing 747 jumbo jet into Frankfurt. In return, Canada has denied the West German airline Lufthansa permission to land in Toronto.

The government informed West Germany in June that it would be willing to discuss landing rights in Toronto in October if the German government withdrew its notice of cancellation and allowed Air Canada to land in Frankfurt.

The West German government replied that this proposal was not satisfactory so the federal government removed Germany from its list of priorities for discussions.

Though the air agreement with The Netherlands has been cancelled, Dutch and Canadian airlines still fly between the two nations.

Air transport authorities in the two nations have agreed to allow KLM and CP Air to land at Montreal and Amsterdam.

But government sources say this sort of agreement can be ended at any moment leaving the airlines in the cold.

The only European airline now using Toronto is Britain's BOAC. This arrangement has been in force for several years.

Health Plan Insidious Trend

TORONTO (CP) — A Toronto psychiatrist said Thursday "an insidious trend" has become apparent since the provincial government took over the operation of universal health insurance.

Dr. Allan Davidson told the Kiwanis club that government spokesmen "begin to malign the medical profession, saying that doctors earn too much money, that the standards of medical practice were not high enough, and with that they started making us accountable to them."

He said he is opposed to the advancement of state medicine because the more doctors are forced to become accountable to governments the more influence politics will have on the practice of medicine.

"I fear that the public will suffer most," he said.

"I, as a physician, refuse to be told how to treat my patients by politically-motivated agencies that I believe are more concerned with votes than with health."

Tax Reform Study Says Tax Study Wasted Time

TORONTO (CP) — A new study of Canada's tax-reform measures concludes that the revision, which took about nine years, was a waste of time and money.

That's the basic finding of Dean Howard Ross of McGill University's faculty of management in a study prepared for the Private Planning Association of Canada and just released.

He concludes "that the whole great reform undertaking was an aberration and that we were, in effect, doing all right before we mixed up in it."

"I think the operation should be classified as a 'defeat' . . . I do not believe we got enough in the process to balance the effort that was devoted to it and the disruption that ensued.

Mr. Ross also says it was tragic that the whole debate got cast as a matter of equity versus economic growth. This misunderstanding would have to be cleared up before any future tax reform could be properly handled.

The real point, he says, is that the Canadian tax system of the 1960s was relatively good by international comparison and it was nothing well enough not to warrant so vast an examination and so comprehensive an effort to transform it.

Mr. Ross does not downgrade the ideal of equity as an ultimate goal of tax reform, but says it can be acceptable only as a long-term aim.

He suggests three aims for the future:

1. We must recognize some of the crucial things we did wrong, so that we may henceforth do them right.

2. We must not just rave about how great equity is in a tax system; we must also consider how to go about promoting it when imposing taxes.

3. We must have a sensible program to direct further work in pursuit of a better system.

The Private Planning Association is a private, non-political, non-profit organization formed in 1958 to undertake independent studies of Canadian problems, mainly in economic matters.

Paul Hellyer Levies Broadside At PM

Two Belles for Ballet

Debbie Graham of the local Ballet Guild, pairs with the city hall bell in a novel method of announcing the Oct. 19 visit of the National Ballet of Canada to Belleville. The performance will take place at Centennial School auditorium at 8.30 p.m.

Joint Action Sought

TORONTO (CP) — After a fighting speech by Paul Hellyer, Action Canada delegates today begin planking in a platform which, they hope, will unify some existing political parties and bring on a new opposition to the federal Liberals.

This is one of the prime tasks of Action Canada, a political "movement" begun five months ago after Mr. Hellyer quit the Liberal government to organize this "vehicle of ideas" in protest against existing policies.

In a broadside attack on his old party, he said Prime Minister Trudeau and a "supergroup" exercise near absolute power, that the government's tight-money fight against inflation was "the ultimate in bad judgment," and the cabinet should be trimmed by 50 per cent.

The speech by the former Liberal leadership candidate and one-time cabinet minister was the highlight of the convention's first day, and he clearly set a target of alignment with other political parties.

Mr. Hellyer has made no secret of the fact he would like to see Action Canada bring in Conservative and Social Credit members to form a new opposition party.

"Our purpose is not to divide but to unite," he told his followers Friday. "We do not wish to become another splinter party but we do want to participate in a political realignment that will give the Canadian people a clear, responsible and credible alternative to the present government."

The Conservative and Social Credit parties were invited to send observers, an invitation that was not extended to the Liberals or New Democrats.

Action Canada now has some 4,800 members.

First of Bear-Pit Sessions at Loyalist

Alan J. Deacon, a teacher at Quinte Secondary School, New Democratic Party candidate for the provincial riding of Quinte in the Oct. 21 elections, last night was the first of three Quinte riding candidates to engage in a bear-pit session with retraining students at Loyalist College. For his platform comments, see page 2.

Amchitka Opposition

MPs May Go to Nixon

OTTAWA (CP) — An all-party delegation may go to Washington to urge President Nixon to cancel the Amchitka nuclear test.

The group's intentions were announced Friday, a day after Government House Leader Allan MacEachen said the government would introduce the motion itself on Monday if it could get agreement that debate would be limited to one speaker from each party.

The Canadian government has frequently protested the Amchitka blast as a possible earthquake cause and a nuclear-pollution hazard.

There has been speculation that President Nixon might halt the blast but the unofficial word from Washington is that he has merely delayed it until Premier Kosygin of the Soviet Union has completed a visit to Canada starting Oct. 18.

The motion was denied by Donald MacInnis (PC—Cape Breton-East Richmond) and the third by Jack McIntosh (PC—Swift Current-Maple Creek).

Thursday Mr. MacEachen said the government would introduce the motion itself on Monday if it could get agreement that debate would be limited to one speaker from each party.

'Yes, Mr. Trudeau! No, Mr. Trudeau! Yes, Mr. Trudeau!'

Sharp Now Tries Russians

By STEPHEN SCOTT

UNITED NATIONS (CP) — External Affairs Minister Mitchell Sharp, having delivered a forceful protest over the proposed United States nuclear test, was to do much the same thing with the Soviet Union today.

Sharp said Friday night he made a "forceful presentation" to U.S. State Secretary William Rogers over the planned U.S. nuclear test on Amchitka Island in the Aleutian chain of islands off Alaska.

Today, Sharp meets Soviet Foreign Minister Andrei Gromyko and is expected to bring up, among other things, the recent Soviet nuclear test, feet apart.

Benson, Pepin At Odds

OTTAWA (CP) — Senior cabinet members are reported divided on framing a response to American demands for changes in the Canada-U.S. auto production agreement.

The main split is believed to be between Finance Minister E. J. Benson and Trade Minister Jean-Luc Pepin. So far, informants say, Mr. Benson seems to be ahead in his view that Canada must give up some ground in the American-imposed conditions for eliminating the U.S. surcharge on imports.

The agreement streamlined Canadian factories into more production of fewer models, cutting costs and granting access to the U.S. market duty-free at the manufacturers' level.

The U.S. has been pushing for at least three years to have replacement auto parts, a lucrative market, included in the duty free agreement.

Mr. Pepin's view is said to be that giving ground to the U.S. on autos will open the way for concessions elsewhere.

News Briefs

LOS ANGELES (AP) — Anthony J. Russo Jr. agreed Friday to testify in the federal grand jury investigation into the Pentagon Papers case, and a judge ordered his release from jail where he had been since Aug. 16 for refusing to talk. Russo, 34, worked at the Santa Monica-based Rand Corp. at the same time as did Daniel Ellsberg, indicated last June on charges of unauthorized possession of the then-secret Pentagon Papers on the Vietnam War.

FREDERICTON (CP) — Wallace S. Bird, lieutenant-governor of New Brunswick for the last three years, died in hospital here early today at the age of 53. Mr. Bird, appointed in 1968 during the term of former Liberal premier Louis J. Robichaud, was taken to hospital Wednesday with internal bleeding.

SAIGON (AP) — Between 50 and 100 Hue University students burned election posters and hurled firebombs at police in a three-hour anti-government demonstration today as political protests continued throughout the country on the eve of South Vietnam's one-man presidential election.

TORONTO (CP) — Negotiators attempting to avert a possible strike by 7,000 southern Ontario truckers continued talking into the early hours of today and planned to continue until an agreement was reached, a spokesman for the trucking industry said. The negotiations were "in the final stages," said Don Leatherdale, a spokesman for the Motor Transport Industrial Relations Bureau, representing 37 trucking companies. The unions progressed despite scattered picketing Friday by members of the International Brotherhood of Teamsters who defied pleas from their union officers to remain on the job while talks continued.

Leader Suggests Gun Role

QUEBEC (CP) — Michel Chartrand, head of the Montreal central council of the Confederation of National Trade Unions, said Friday that when the day comes he can accomplish nothing more with his speeches "I too will go underground and work with a machine gun."

Mr. Chartrand was taking part in a debate at Laval University on the kidnap crisis of last October.

Asked what he thought might happen this October, Mr. Chartrand said "anything could happen, the same fools are in power."

Immediate plans called for demonstrations on Oct. 15 by various groups to mark the first anniversary of the invocation of the War Measures Act.

"We will sing, we will parade, we will laugh at the judges and ministers, we will have a good time . . . right up to the time they bludgeon us," Mr. Chartrand said.

Election Roundup

Ontario Leaders Have Common Complaint-Ottawa

By CRAIG ASPINALL

TORONTO (CP) — There have been times during the campaign for the Oct. 21 Ontario election when the three major political parties have expended much energy attacking the federal government as they have on each other.

With 140,000 unemployed in the province and jobs falling like nine-pins in the wake of the United States supplementary duty on imports, the economy has been one of the biggest issues of the campaign.

Premier William Davis charged this week that lack of a national economic policy has been due partly to Ottawa's failure to seek the advice of the provinces.

Liberal Party Leader Robert Nixon made the same charge, saying that when Ottawa finally gets around to determining policy, particularly in the field of foreign control of the economy, it will be "inadequate" because Ontario had no say in it.

Stephen Lewis, leader of the New Democratic Party, puts it this way:

"Today, as our pathetic reaction to President Nixon's economic measures illustrated, the threats to Canadian independence have rarely been greater."

All three men have said they would co-operate with Ottawa on any steps it takes to strengthen the economy. But all express doubts about Ottawa's ability to come up with the goods.

Premier Davis, in a Toronto speech Friday, said federal proposals on tax reform, tax-sharing, unemployment insurance and social services will be "less than satisfactory" because they will be "handed down" from Ottawa rather than being developed in co-operation with the provinces.

He called for new policies to ensure more processing of natural resources in Canada; more spending on research and development by foreign-owned firms; the channelling of savings into business investments; and exploitation of the nation's bargaining power when dickering with outsiders on the sale of resources.

The Progressive Conservative premier previously had promised a big winter works program should the need arise and "some form of assistance" to Ontario companies adversely affected by the U.S. economic measures, but not eligible for federal aid.

Mr. Nixon said in a Toronto speech Tuesday that Ottawa has been "far too slow" in acting to protect Canada from the American economic juggernaut, and complained that Ontario, "the economic heartland of Canada," does not have a major voice in determining policy.

All three party leaders have spoken on the theme of Ontario as the keystone of the national economy, providing 40 per cent of Canadian production, generating 45 per cent of corporation income and housing one-third of the total population.

Mr. Nixon has proposed a $32 million program to create jobs; a review board to control foreign investment; a policy by which the province would be the "buyer of last resort"; where foreign takeovers appear imminent; processing of raw materials in Ontario; and encouragement of labor to strengthen its Canadian autonomy.

But Mr. Nixon has added that he does not believe foreign-owned companies could be excluded from job-creating provincial programs.

Mr. Lewis says:

"My own view is quite simple: Ontario must save Canadian economic independence."

He has said an NDP government in Ontario would stop giving incentive grants to foreign-owned companies; limit the degree of foreign ownership of industry; establish a board to review take-over plans by foreign companies; decrease reliance on foreign capital by requisitioning funds from financial institutions and corporations; and demand that branch-plant layoffs be justified economically.

The NDP would stimulate new enterprises through Crown corporations governing some resource industries, and through a provincial development corporation. Assistance in terms of money planning and marketing would be made available to farmers and small businessmen.

Both the Liberals and New Democrats have promised price review boards which would be given the power to control price increases in some key industries.

Hospital Board Asked To Consider Lottery

By IAN ROBERTSON
Staff Reporter

The executive committee of Belleville General Hospital has been asked to consider operation of a hospital sweepstakes lottery in order to raise auxiliary funds.

Although the Ontario Hospital Services Commission has endorsed the hospital's 1970 operating budget of $5,543,140, they held off approval for construction of two new elevators which will cost in the neighborhood of $200,000.

With approval from the OHSC now received, board chairman Monsignor J. P. Sullivan said the two elevators should be operational by March of 1972.

However, with delay in approval, one-third of the cost for this construction must be met by the city.

"I don't think the city of Belleville would want to add to the public expense," Ald. Joyce explained this morning. "I don't think there's room in the public purse for it."

It was because of this additional $70,000 expense to the city, the province and the federal government, that Mr. Joyce presented his solution to the financing problem. Finance committee chairman Carl E. Bateman told The Intelligencer, slightly more than $8,000 remains in hospital's capital fund. "Care of the patient isn't at jeopardy and as far as the elevator situation is concerned, there isn't any panic," but Mr. Joyce said the city's share could be raised by holding a lottery.

"I wouldn't for a minute want to take anything away from the Belleville Yardmen or the Greek church fund. I'm only interested in those dollars that are going out of the country and province."

We should do our fund-raising here instead of Ireland; it's ridiculous to send it out of the country when we could help support old folk and the sick," he said.

Mr. Joyce said he was amazed to think no Ontario hospital has taken advantage of the provincial government's approval for lotteries. "The hospital sweepstakes have been the salvation of their (Ireland's) hospitals and I would certainly like to see this get considered."

Asked by Mr. Joyce if the Ontario Hospital Services Commission would give approval to such a project, Mr. Bateman personally suggested "I don't think there would be any objection."

Board Looking for Name For Proposed Hospital

The Ontario Hospital Services Commission has found fault with the name Queen's Lodge, suggested for the Queen's Motel on Dundas Street East, slated to become a convalescent, extended care hospital attached to the Belleville General Hospital.

Hospital administrator Philip Rickard Friday told the board the OHSC has not officially approved any name, but the closest they can come up with is Queen's Pavilion.

Discussing the situation with fellow administrators, before October board of governors meeting, Mr. Rickard said the OHSC prefers to delete the Lodge part of the name.

"They think it would give the impression of an old folks home," he commented.

Following this announcement, board member Ald. Ben Corke said he wanted to clear up earlier reports that some members of Belleville city council were "opposed to the Queen's Motel thing."

He said objections were registered because "we could envision certain problems."

Ald. Corke said it was unfair to say Mayor J. Russell Scott and two aldermen were opposed to the plan. He said opposition arose because the "desire to rezone certain properties would cause delays."

Board chairman Monsignor J. P. Sullivan went on record to note Mr. Corke's strong support of the auxiliary hospital wing plan for the motel.

At Monday's council meeting, Mayor Scott argued that the Quinte Planning Board should hold a public hearing before a rezoning bylaw was passed by council.

However, council gave the necessary three readings to approve the rezoning bylaw and recommended the planning advisory committee call a public hearing Oct. 6 to give residents a chance to discuss the situation and register any complaints they might have.

TV Rental Up

Patients recovering in wards at Belleville General Hospital will be paying more for their rented television sets, obtained through the hospital and set up in rooms.

Costs of renting a TV have been raised from $1.25 to $1.35 per day.

A spokesman for the board of governors said yesterday, "this is the first increase since the hospital opened."

Four Arrested

Police this morning report the arrest of four Belleville youths in connection with the Sept. 22 theft of more than $2,200 in television and stereos from Booth's Radio and Television sales on the market square.

Charged with break, enter and theft are John Edward Adams, 18, of Sidney Street; Arnold Stone, 17, of Safe Boulevard, Simon Peter Marcel, 17, of Pine Street and Terry Donald Hannah, 18, of the Belleville Hotel.

The stolen goods have not been recovered.

Omitted

In the obituary of Charles Robert Scott in Friday's Intelligencer, his membership in the Royal Canadian Legion, Belleville Pipe Band, Royal Navy and Air Force Veteran's Association was inadvertently omitted.

The Case Of the Broken Pane

In an attempt to determine the cause of window breakage at Belleville General Hospital, the board of governors yesterday agreed to seek the help of the National Research Council, costs to be shared jointly by the hospital and the supplier.

J. N. Brown, chairman of the planning and property committee, told board members that more than $2,000 worth of windows had broken during 1970. The cost of repairs has been met by the supplier.

Mr. Brown speculated that heat buildup between the panes of glass and drapes on windows, caused the glass to crack. The contractor, however, originally felt breakage was due to faulty cut glass.

Board chairman Monsignor J. P. Sullivan said the supplier will be required to replace breakage at the end of the hospital's five-year repair contract.

Searching for Ancestors

Mr. and Mrs. R. I. Milner of 570 Wolfridge Avenue, Ottawa, are visiting the Belleville area in an attempt to track down Mrs. Milner's great grandfather E. P. Boselly, a cabinet maker and wood finisher who lived in Belleville during the late 1880s. As well as searching through graveyards such as this small one on Stanley Street, the Milner's have spent time searching files in the Dominion Archives in Ottawa, archives in Toronto and the Belleville Museum.

Old Line Parties Fail The People Says Deacon

In a speech before 125 adults retraining students at Loyalist College Friday night, NDP candidate for Quinte, Alan J. Deacon, charged that both the Conservative " and Liberal parties could not actively support the people because they receive funds from big business interests.

"That is why the NDP has deliberately sought the support of the individual people and small businessman," he said, "that is why neither the Tories or the Liberals can afford the time to care what happens to you and me."

Mr. Deacon, a teacher at Quinte Secondary School, cited the case of pollution in the Spanish River near Espanola. He referred to the conviction of the company in the 1940s and the subsequent "governmental delaying and blocking tactics."

In the bearpit session before the students, Mr. Deacon said the Conservative government's stringent pollution laws were an excellent move, but they "do not enforce and attack big corporations that are polluting," and at this point he commented on what he referred to as a "cement plant" in the Belleville district as another example.

Answering a question from the floor, he said his party would attempt to see that the Ontario Water Resources Commission has a free hand to enforce laws. They are frequently thwarted at every turn by delays in decisions and failure to back them up."

"The government passes the buck from department to department; there is no need for it to be a political issue," he stated.

One student termed Mr. Deacon's stand on foreign ownership "communism" after the NDP candidate said his party would attempt to "prevent legislation to prevent removal of money, machines and experts, invested in the country."

"Communism . . . not quite," he stated, explaining that of all the investments in Canadian business, only six per cent is coming from outside the country. However, 80 per cent of Canadian investment comes originally from foreign capital and removal of this investment would be disastrous.

During his two hour session, the first in a series of three wherein Quinte riding candidates will appear before the students, Mr. Deacon answered questions on a variety of subjects.

— Separate Schools: "The NDP policy on this is to support separate schools thrown Grade 13, but structured facilities would be shared by both. It is my personal belief that no country can effectively operate with a multiplicity of school systems; if we could operate one system without hurting anyone, I'm all for it."

— Grade 13: "Grade 13 should be eliminated. We are the only province which maintains Grade 13. As a high school teacher, I see many students who don't get enough work they could or might want.'

— Voting systems: "The electoral system is basically sound, but I would like to see a non political distribution board with each riding represented by equal distribution."

— Employment: "Stop rebates of corporate taxes, brought in in 1970, amounting to $175 million. This would stimulate the economy and small business." In reply to a further question from the floor, Mr. Deacon said the NDP is not interested in controlling business. "It doesn't want to become a small businessman; it wants to help small business get onto its feet."

Assaults on Officers Lead to Two-man Teams

Increasing numbers of assaults on city police officers has caused the Belleville Police Department to double the night crews walking the downtown street beats. The two-men teams will patrol during the dark hours. The force already has each cruiser manned by two officers.

Chief Crosbie revealed that over the past two weeks there have been at least four instances wherein police officers have been assaulted while making routine arrests.

"We are taking every step to see our men are provided with protection and to see that they are maintained on the street," he stated.

The street incidents in which the assaults occurred, included drinking offences, public disturbance complaints and the assault on a citizen.

During one fracas, Chief Crosbie reported a citizen used a police call box to call the Campbell Street station and advise officers one of his policemen was in trouble.

The latest in this series of incidents took place on downtown Front Street at 1.30 a.m. Thursday. As a result, two youths have been arrested and charged with common assault on police officers; the second youth will also appear in provincial court charged with resisting arrest.

Standby Chiller Proposed

The Board of Governors of Belleville General Hospital will seek permission from the Ontario Hospital Services Commission, to install a standby chilling unit and an emergency backup, to supplement the existing air conditioner during hot weather.

This request, made by superintendent of building services, W. F. Todd, was made to the board Friday morning by planning and property committee chairman J. N. Brown, who stated "I think that you can afford not to have it."

One board member agreed, commenting he was concerned that the hospital "would have to be evacuated" if the big compressor breaks down.

"I may be making a mountain out of a molehill, but I agree we shouldn't take chances," he said.

Quotations presented, ranged in cost from $22,000 to $43,000.

Fire Prevention Week Spotlights Hazard

In the past week, the Belleville Fire Department has been making a concentrated check on all area schools, public buildings and industries in preparation for the 51st anniversary of Fire Prevention Week.

From Oct. 3 to 9, the fire department will be pushing slogans such as "Fire Can Break Your Heart," and "Every Week Is Fire Prevention Week".

For distribution of information, the fire department will also be placing a truck and a booth in the Quinte Mall.

"It's important to remember that fires in 1970 cost the Canadian resident the greatest property loss ever," said Fire Chief Leo Culhane.

Approximately $200 million damages were the result of Canadian fires last year, and this figure has been increasing each year, says a report from the National Fire Prevention Bureau. This does not include the cost of forest fires.

From the same report it is listed that 224 deaths resulted from these fires, showing an increase of 45 from the previous year.

"Fire is a terrifying thing because of its finality," said Chief Culhane. "You can insure a house, a car, furniture, just about anything but you can't insure a life for compensation."

Last year in the city there were 235 calls for assistance amounting to $336,000 worth of damages.

"It's nice to think that while the nation's statistics for fires are climbing, Belleville's figures dropped by 70 calls from the previous year," said the chief.

"Because fire prevention is being stressed this week, the fire department invites anyone to call the department for information and, if needed, an inspector will visit a home and check for fire hazards.

"It might be interesting to note," said Reg Christopher, fire inspector, "that fires in the city last year cost each of us $10."

With the construction of several modern apartment buildings in progress across the city, the fire department has made numerous articles available on the facts and myths of fires in such structures.

"There is really no such thing as a fireproof building, but contractors do give priority in choosing building materials to those materials that are fire resistive."

In the case of structural steel, where steel will bend under severe heat, it is wrapped in a heat resistive material.

Apartment buildings are reasonably safe because of the numerous safety factors built into them," said the chief.

"Because of their existence, modifications had to be made to both fire regulation codes and fire fighting equipment," said a spokesman for the fire department.

"It would be nice if every one could be on the lookout for fire hazards all year round but at least for the week of Oct. 3 to 9, the fire department would appreciate that everyone check for fire dangers and report them to the department," said Chief Culhane.

Book Fair Attracts Hundreds

The competition for books was fast and furious at the tenth annual University Women's book fair at the armory mall in Picton Friday. Every book became a bestseller as the donated texts were used to raise money for Grade 13 students who are enrolling in university and for the Grade 12 pupil with the highest standing.

Province Will Be Asked To Set Up Trailer Park

There are no apparent city owned lands suitable for a trailer park in Belleville, but the city parks board will look to the province to establish one, a report from the director has indicated there is no city property available.

Thursday the parks board recommended that the Department of Lands and Forests be requested to consider development of a trailer park close to Belleville.

If the request is turned down and the city still wishes to provide such a facility, it is recommended that the staff of the Quinte Planning Board be requested to submit a summary of area sites available.

Alderman Pohan Jeffrey suggested that area municipalities be asked to make a similar request to the department.

Board member Robert Pirie questioned whether the city parks board should be getting involved in providing trailer camps, suggesting instead that its program be confined to conventional parks in the city.

"What would be the benefit" he asked.

Alderman Donald Soutter said the provincial department should be asked if it has any plans for a trailer camp within 25 miles of the city — preferably along the bay front.

Added Sentence For Parole Breach

In provincial courth Thursday afternoon, an 18-year-old Belleville youth was ordered returned to the Ontario Reformatory in Guelph to complete a one-year sentence after breaking the conditions of his parole, and was sentenced to serve a term of one year, less a day, after being found guilty on a charge of break and enter with intent to commit theft. An earlier charge for possession of a stolen auto, for which he was found guilty earlier in September, netted him a six-month sentence, to be served concurrent to the third sentence.

David John Casselman, of 49 Dundas Street East, pleaded not guilty to the break and enter charge and a third charge of supplying liquor to minors. The latter charge was not proceeded with.

George Angelatos, of 62 Dundas Street East, charged Casselman broke into his Minute Lunch restaurant on Dundas Street, July 24, stole two cartons of cigarettes and an undisclosed amount of cash from the till.

Madoc Conservatives Elect New Executive

MADOC (Special) — The Madoc Village Progressive Conservative Association of the Hastings Provincial Riding held a meeting last Friday night in the local Kiwanis Centre to hold an election of officers and to discuss general business. Clarke Rollins, candidate for the Hastings Riding, was present to meet association members.

Secretary Presley Nickle chaired the first portion of the meeting. The president Tom Burnside announced his resignation from the office, saying he is much too busy with other work to do justice to the position.

It was moved that all offices be declared vacant and the floor was open for nominations. The new executive elected were; president, Kelvin Kincaid; vice - president, Terry Pigden; secretary-treasurer, Harry Brown; executive assistants, Ed Armstrong, Bob Kirkwood, Frank Downey, Mary Goulah and Eugene Pigden.

The possibilities of forming a ladies' Conservative organization were discussed. It was suggested that the new executive hold a ladies night and get this set up. Mr. Rollins volunteered to attend the meeting and talk to the ladies, in the event one is held.

The president - elect, Kel Kincaid, took over the chair for the remainder of the meeting. He thanked his electors for the confidence placed in him in making him their new president, and congratulated the members of the executive on their newly acquired positions. He said the executive assistants are the hard working members, who must be able to act. Mr. Kincaid stressed that it is very important to get the young people out and give them every opportunity to take part.

Low Income Houses Termed 'Buffer'

TRENTON (Staff) — The Trenton Housing Authority has approved the site of Ontario Housing Corporation low income and senior citizens' housing on Wingg Street near Erie Technological Ltd. on the basis that it will serve as a buffer zone.

Lou Aziz, a member of planning board and the housing authority, told the Trenton and Suburban Planning Board Thursday the land parcel is an ideal location for that type of housing complex because it will be a buffer between an industrial belt and the west side residential areas.

Spring Flood Damage Can Be Avoided Now

Or in other words make things secure before the trouble starts!

That's the motto of Angus B. Duffy, Quinte area Emergency Measures Co-ordinator, who notes that thousands of dollars in damage is caused by high water in low areas along the Moira each spring when the proper precautions taken in time could have protected property.

He points out that spring flooding conditions cannot be predicted but after a front, snow, ice and water arrives it is often too late to protect property.

Mr. Duffy urges that pumps, docks, driveways and buildings be reinforced ahead of time so that they will survive the effects of high water.

Machinery, lawn furniture, and boats should be stored so that they will be above the flood level. Exposed electrical fixtures, pipes and drains should be sealed and secured.

He goes on to advise residents to think of the problems creating high water last year and consider what could be done to prevent them, and if they do occur, how best to overcome them.

And it doesn't hurt to be a good neighbor to someone who might not be aware of possible flood conditions along the river.

"Advise new neighbors who have moved into a potential flood area of the precautions that should be taken," he says.

Schools Of Tomorrow

Nobody can accuse Hastings county school administrators of lack of foresight. The trouble is that with such a plethora of ideas on how to handle school population trends, which might be termed uneven, trustees will be hard put to it to decide what is best.

As pointed out in recent days the word is that while elementary school population is shrinking the number of secondary school students requiring accommodation is increasing dramatically and space will be required for an additional 1,829 pupils by 1977.

Administrator Eric Runacres envisages two new secondary schools, one at Stirling and one in East Belleville, but poses the problem of a decade hence, when high school population starts to fall off?

Alternatives run the gamut from bussing children from school to school as populations shift, use by secondary school students of elementary school accommodation as classrooms in the latter become vacant, work-study programs which would have high school students out of school for periods to learn on the job in local plants and businesses, home study by advanced students, to a 12-month school year broken into three or more semesters, and construction of "relocatable schools" similar to the first building put up at Loyalist College. There is also the possibility, in Mr. Runacres' view, of putting up school buildings that could be sold eventually for conversion to factories or apartment buildings.

As we have suggested, there is no lack of ideas. Bussing however, as well as relocatable or temporary buildings destined for ultimate use for other purposes, could sap whatever pride and esprit de corps students may have in the schools they attend. It could increase too the sense of rootlessness and alienation some feel in the process of being shunted around and in the midst of large numbers of other young people. However ,that is not to say that the ideas are not sound ones in the context of the future and which of necessity may have to be adopted to meet the kind of needs the Hastings board visualizes.

The young people of tomorrow are going to have to be more adaptable anyway and if they find themselves in a situation of more movement, in buses and in relocatable schools, so be it. We would prefer however to see as little bussing as possible and students in fixed establishments similar to those in use today.

Stability should remain the goal of both population and school. If after 1980 high school population does drop then maybe the year-round semester concept of education may be the answer, enabling permanent use to be made of the schools. It would require a greatly increased teaching staff — but then, that is another problem.

Wolf Legend

It was a message in the Farley Mowat tradition — the wolf, that is, contrary to long-held belief, is not such a bad critter after all; and he does not kill his own kind, in the way humans do. As for looking after their own, moreover, wolves are among the best parents of the animal kingdom.

The CBC showed this little-known side of the wolf, an animal which has its place in the scheme of things, its role in nature, in its program "Death of a Legend" the other day. Here we saw the wolf in his outdoor habitat, and particularly amid the winter snow where he is often at the mercy of rapacious hunters in aircraft and now, more and more, riflemen on snowmobiles.

Wolves where they have been known to menace farm stock or protected game can expect the farmer's or hunter's wrath, but to hunt them down and kill them for part, as many are doing today by plane and snowmobile is not only cruel but is harassing members of the animal world which fulfill a valuable role in the balance of nature.

Indiscriminate hunting of the wolf is on a par with the same frenetic hounding of game in Africa, in many cases by poachers after the game for their coats and commercial value on the overseas fashion markets. "Death of a Legend" had a message, as Farley Mowat's works on this subject do: it is that the big bad wolf of legend has a much less ominous image than may be supposed.

Party Leaders' 'Wordsmiths'

The Speech Writers: Phantoms of the Political Opera

By RICHARD JACKSON

OTTAWA — Election this fall, next spring, or even as late as the autumn of 1972, no matter the timing now, the party organization headquarters here are getting on their marks . . . set . . . to go . . .

They are all staffing or, as the professionals in the business of hiring specialized personnel like to phrase it, "recruiting".

Speech writers; public relations experts, or, depending on your viewpoint of PR, "flacks"; organizers of several brands and breeds; the whole campaign lot.

By the time the campaign caravans are rolling—each of the four parties will be staffed to the limit even of having resident bartenders to hustle aboard and pour the refreshments on the planes and yes, even, believe it, the busses.

But more important than them all — at least from the party leader's critical make-it-or-break-it viewpoint — is the speech writer, head of the wordsmithing team and the campaign caravan's legman, or advance agent.

The speech - writer travels with the leader, picks the brains and typewriters of a staff by phone or in the flesh.

The legman hustles ahead. If he is a legman who has his heart as well as his head and legs going for him, he hustles ahead twice.

The first time, a week or days in advance of the leader, laying on the organization, the reception, the crowd, in fact, the works at all the stops listed on the leader's itinerary which is kept fluid from week to week.

Of course, he does not come into city or town a stranger, with nothing done in preparation for the leader's appearance.

The local organization has been busy rounding up pledges of rally attendance and standing ovations for the glorious leader by the ever faithful.

Tentative arrangements have been made for the hall, the high school auditorium or the supermarket plaza for the big day.

The legman looks it over, sizes it up against what he knows are the great expectations of the leader, and on that basis accepts it, goes along conditionally with arrangements on the guarantee that the whole show can and positively will be beefed up into Something Really Big, or rejects it, wiping the stop off the coming week's campaign itinerary.

Then, the day before the leader flies, motorcades or rolls in by train, the legman has a quick re-visit to re-check and determine whether the show as laid on is going to be good enough and if it is not can it be juiced up overnight, or would it be better to skip the whole thing.

On a day's campaign run, opening with a breakfast rally, a mid-morning rally, a noon-time appearance, a mid-afternoon pitch and the big evening bash, the itinerary is kept fluid enough for hop-skip-and-jumping from stop to stop.

With the others he can improvise, cutting his time and loises on poor shows and boosting the image and building support on the goodies.

The local organization better be on the ball, and give the leader's legman the feeling of positive thinking and dynamic action on both advance visits.

If it does not come through, the legman can fix it with a rubber call or a real backfire by plane or car to the boss that the local organization is not going to, in fact, have the leader hold up their candidate's arm in a companionable signal of victory to come.

It will not happen, because the local organization has muffed arrangements for the big show and the leader has cancelled out.

Excuses are easy. The caravan was running late. Another stop had to be added. There was a spot of trouble with the aircraft. Anything almost will do.

The energetic legman has to be the man most in motion, moving all the time between the leader and his next week's and next day's stop.

Of absolute necessity he has to be an upbeat type. The eternal optimist. The nonstop cheerleaders. The man on whom the whole organization leans to keep the leader's morale high and moving up.

This is not easy. There have to be some bad spots. Small crowds sometimes. Rainy days dampening enthusiasm on supermarket plazas. Sometimes, in the better areas especially, hostile demonstrations.

But the leader cannot be seen or even be allowed — to feel sorry for himself or uncertain of his success. Or up go the odds.

Legmen, the great performers, are good for one run. That is about all the energy a normal human being has in his batteries.

First, as man in charge of the PM's Western Political Desk, and more recently, Regional Adviser, and bossman of all the desks.

It's Groovy!

Well, the good old summertime has not left us completely. This Outlet scene is from a little while back, but we are back to fine days again, and a fair degree of warmth, with the added bonus of autumn's glory. (Picture by Ian Robertson)

GLEANINGS FROM OUR FILES OF BYGONE YEARS

20 YEARS AGO

October 2, 1951

Boyd Upper, interim sports writer for this newspaper and a fifth year medical student at Queen's University, has been named managing editor of the Queen's Medical Journal. A keen student of sports, Boyd will cover the Queen's intercollegiate football games for the Journal as well as basketball and other sports features of the university.

Opportunities and the Chamber of Commerce was the topic of an address by James T. Davis, secretary-manager of the Belleville Chamber of Commerce to the Rotary Club at their weekly luncheon. Mr. Davis, who was born and educated in Hamilton, has had five years service in the RCAF, coming here in August of this year.

October 2, 1941

Emblematic of their efforts in raising over $600 which was sent to the Chinese Red Cross in Toronto, for the alleviation of the suffering of their national war refugees, the Chinese Merchants Club of Belleville was presented with a handsome silver trophy, suitably engraved, by the Chinese Patriotic Federation of Ontario.

The rear of the Duck Brigade Artillery heralded in the official season along marshes, lakes and bay here this morning. Reports of gunfire echoed along the bay front shortly before. Old Sol had poked a pink crescent above the eastern horizon.

40 YEARS AGO

October 2, 1931

Wilmot Maybee and his threshing outfit threshed 1,575 bushels of oats in less than nine hours on the farm of ex-Warden of this county George Bailey of Harold, Rawdon township. It was a bumper yield of oats.

Belleville market prices: eggs 25-26 cents per dozen; butter 27-28 cents per pound; chickens 75 cents to $1 per pair.

50 YEARS AGO

Form B won the Riggs' Trophy in a basketball match played at the high school grounds against Form 2A. Score was 22 to 14.

The barge "Dresden" ran aground while proceeding out of the harbor from Allen's wharf. The tug William Davis released her.

Dr. Benson's fast horse, K. L. Lambert won the free-for-all class at the Madoc Fair straight heats.

Sandbanks—and That Artificial Lake Scheme

Editor,
The Intelligencer.

In those days of economic dilemma, any proposal aimed at alleviating the unemployment crisis is worthy of serious consideration, no matter how irrelevant it may appear at first glance.

Even so, the current suggestion of spending $20 million dollars to create an artificial lake in North Hastings is incredible. In a province blessed with over 200,000 natural lakes this project is comparable with trucking sand to the Sahara desert.

In the light of the rape of the Sandbanks by a private gravel company, apparently with the permission and blessing of the provincial government, the taxpayer may be excused if he exhibits signs of headshaking.

Many thousands of tax dollars were allocated to the development of the Sandbanks area. Now, at an amount quoted as being $1 a truck load, some 80,000 tons of sand a year is being removed in the name of private enterprise.

Already, leading ecologists have pointed out that unless this practice is ceased immediately, irreparable damage will result, or, at best require very costly redevelopment to restore the ecological balance.

The taxpayer paid for the original development of the banks, and I suggest thousands of people have enjoyed wandering amidst the beauty of the sand hills while listening to the gentle wash of the waters of Lake Ontario. I cannot recall the taxpayer ever being asked if he wished to sell off his investment to assist a private company to manufacture cement.

If the government of Ontario heeds the growing concern and halts the removal of sand from the area, who is going to foot the bill to replace and redevelop the Sandbanks? Will it be the Lake Ontario Cement Company or will it be the same taxpayer that paid for the original development?

If past experience is any guide the answer is obvious — the taxpayer.

Not knowing the geology of the area proposed for the lake it is hard to foretell what future demands may be made by private entrepreneurs. Imagine spending $30 million to create an artificial lake and resort area only to have some company move in and remove the sand from the beaches, the water from the lake or any other desirable material for profit or any other reason.

This whole project needs to be studied in detail and the value of the work generated weighed against the cost and practicality of the whole scheme. As the people of Ontario are going to have to pay for it they must be asked by plebiscite if they want it and are prepared to pay for it. A full list of the names of the owners of the half of the property that is not government owned must be published. There have been too many schemes involving land in recent years in which people in the political know have been able to make a killing at the expense of the rest of the community.

And, anyway, is there no better way we can spend $30 million in these times than to dig a big hole and fill it with water when natural water holes abound, almost on our doorsteps."

Opposition Prone to Gimmicks

From The Intelligencer's Queen's Park Bureau
By DON O'HEARN

TORONTO — The opposition has a much harder job in an election than the government.

The government essentially has to do and hold its vote. If it can do this, it will go back. The opposition has to win new votes.

This means it has to sell, and hard sell.

And in the drive to sell, some extreme proposals can be put before the public.

Liberal leader Robert Nixon may have come up with one of these with his proposal that teachers should be self-inserting and self-governing, along the lines of the medical profession.

On the surface this suggestion can look not too bad.

After all, why not?

Doctors and lawyers do run their own shows, so why not teachers? They also are specialists and carry a degree of responsibility as well as requiring particular education.

But then, there are definite distinctions.

A very important one is in standards.

Doctors to be licensed must not be far away. It is also significant to note in this respect that a British House of Commons committee has found that zero population growth would become a reality simply by preventing "unwanted" children from being born.

But such requirements for teachers are relatively minor. They do need some pedagogical training. But pedagogy if it is a science at all, is a very inexact one. Routine examinations can show that the teacher applicant has absorbed some measure of this that is needed. And there is no way beyond this that a body of fellow teachers can tell whether the applicant will be a bad or a good teacher. If for no other reason than that there is no real standard of what is a good teacher, and given any half dozen teachers, no two probably will get a half dozen different answers as to what constitutes excellence in their calling.

A further important difference is that professional integrity is of vital importance in both medicine and law. While it would be probably ill, to refer to specify what constitutes integrity in teaching.

Further, teachers all get their remuneration from public funds. As their employer, and being responsible for the quality of education, the state has a very definite first person interest in their performance.

It would seem doubtful that Mr. Nixon would have thought this through. He and his advisers seem most likely in this case to have been dominantly attracted by the 80,000 teacher votes.

A trouble is that rash election proposals such as this tend to become accepted as valid and when not adopted to provoke one more continuing tension in the community.

Toward Zero Population Growth

Windsor Star

According to a recently issued report by the Washington Centre for Metropolitan studies "the baby boom has become a baby bust. The Centre predicted that zero population growth now is a definite possibility for the U.S. in this century. Since Canadian life patterns generally mirror those in the USA, it is most likely that a similar development is taking place in Canada.

Such developments in population growth patterns only reinforce the argument that planning for the future should not be based on past population growth patterns alone, but take into account the changing public attitudes towards childbearing. It makes little sense, for example, to plan ahead for a city of several million people when the expected additional population will not be there.

It is of further significance that the U.S. study did not take into account the increasing abortion rate while resulted from relaxed abortion laws. In Washington alone, for example, abortions now run at the rate of 2,000 per month. As abortion laws relax elsewhere — as they undoubtedly will in time — the prospect of zero population growth becoming a reality may

Evolution of the Unions

Ottawa Journal

On Labor Day, a sense of humor helps a trade union mumbling.

Platitudes abound, as politicians and editorial writers praise labor's contribution to the nation; and sometimes mingle fatherly advice with the praise. The union man may suspect that, next day, a few public well - wishers are again grumbling privately, "these damn unions . . ."

Platitudes should be avoided and advice withheld for future situations when it may be pertinent to public dialogue.

In 1886, when the Trades and Labor Congress of Canada was formed as the first national labor body, it was not self-evident that organized labor was here to stay. In those days unions were mainly composed of a few skilled craftsmen, stuck in the niches of industry. The vast majority of workers were unorganized; as such, too many of them endured the 12-hour day and six-day week, low wages and grim working conditions.

Labor as an entity, of course, is not made up only of union members. But well over 2 million Canadians now carry a union card. Excluding agricultural workers, that's about one in three of the labor force. And the figures keep rising.

Moslems, Hindus Feel Pressure First

M. Haroon Siddiqi, Brandon Sun city editor and former Indian newspaper man, recently returned from a six-week visit to the subcontinent. Here he gives his views of India's religious problems.

By M. HAROON SIDDIQI
Brandon Sun

BRANDON, Man. (CP) — Every time relations between India and Pakistan become strained—and that happens often—the people who feel the tension and pressure more than any one else are the 60 million Moslems of India and the 12 million Hindus of Pakistan.

The present Bangla Desh crisis which has brought the two countries close to war is no exception. The atmosphere is volatile and conducive to communal riots, which if started could unleash violence and killings.

Still lingering in the minds of the two minorities are memories of the 1947-48 Hindi-Moslem riots when hundreds of thousands were massacred after the partition of India into Moslem-dominated Pakistan and Hindu-dominated India. An estimated 6.59-million Moslems fled from India to Pakistan and 5.56-million Hindus from Pakistan to India.

The mass migration did not leave Pakistan purely Moslem or India purely Hindu. By 1950 there still remained as many as 45 million Moslems in India and about 18 million Hindus in Pakistan.

Living in the two countries created on sectarian lines has not been easy for the two minorities. Their loyalties constantly questioned, their religious practices frowned on by the majority, they have had to live the life of second-class citizens facing discrimination in jobs and in their day-to-day lives.

The Hindus of Pakistan have been concentrated in East Pakistan which, until early this year, was considered a safer place for them than the western wing of the country where they had to subjugate their freedom of speech, culture, language and their religious practices to avoid the wrath of the eccentric religious fervor of Punjabi Moslems.

Although East Pakistan Hindus found it easier to integrate with the majority because their Bengali language and culture is no different than that of Bengali Moslems, they were victims of many riots and an estimated five million were forced to migrate, to India between 1950 and 1970.

But the real crunch came when the West Pakistan Punjabi-dominated army began crushing the independence movement in East Pakistan in March and made Hindus the principal target of brutalities.

Punjabi Moslems' traditional hatred of the Hindu coupled with their desire to avenge Hindu support of the Independence movement meant that a vast majority of the reported 200,000 killed by the army and of the seven million refugees spilling into India were Hindus.

Some observers believe that the Pakistan army—which has so far unloaded half of the country's minority population onto India—is systematically driving Hindus out of its borders.

The problems of the Moslem minority in India have been numerous. Their number in the civil service and the military and their representation in provincial legislatures and federal parliament is not in proportion to their population. Innocent Moslems have been cut down brutally in the many communal riots the country has witnessed since 1947.

Some low-ranking Hindu officials, especially officers, tend to side with the Hindus at the time of riots, and keep secret files on leading Moslems, often misconstruing normal Moslem criticisms of certain government policies affecting them.

Far too often, Moslem leaders standing up to fight democratically for their people's constitutional rights are branded "communal."

But Indian Moslems never have had to face anything even remotely resembling the Pakistan army's recent pogrom.

The important difference between India and Pakistan, from the point of view of the minorities, is that Pakistan is an Islamic state committed in effect to the domination and superiority of Moslems over the followers of other religions, while India is a secular country with a constitution that provides equal rights to people irrespective of religion, caste or creed.

And happily for Indian Moslems, a majority of those in power since 1947 at the federal and provincial levels, especially in New Delhi, have been men and women dedicated to the principle of equality between all people.

This is in direct contrast to the situation in Pakistan where politicians keep whipping up anti-India campaigns to win cheap popular support.

As the Illustrated Weekly of India put it in a recent edition: "Religious hatred is history's legacy to both India and Pakistan, but while India fought against it, Pakistan fanned it."

The Indian federal government has been alert to the dangers of communalism and has succeeded in dealing with it in as efficient a manner as is perhaps possible in an underdeveloped country of 1.23 million square miles and 550 million people.

Prime Minister Mrs. Gandhi's overwhelming victory in the general elections early this year has given Moslems a new confidence and a sense of relief, more so because she succeeded in routing out the Jan Sangh party, which has been known to have instigated many Hindu-Moslem riots.

Despite the government's leadership in secularism, there are many in the country who, angered by what the Pakistan army did to Hindus of East Pakistan, would love to even the score by releasing their deep hostility on the Moslems of India.

A local young woman, Miss Linda Langabeer, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Clarence Langabeer, Cedar Street, has left for Ghana, West Africa, to serve with CUSO (Canadian University Services Overseas).

During her school years, Miss Langabeer attended St. Michael's Academy and Quinte Secondary School, and late graduated from the Belleville General Hospital School of Nursing. For the past three years she has been on the operating room staff of the hospital.

Her duties in Africa will include tutoring and ward supervisory work in a teaching hospital operated by the Sisters of the Holy Family, Bekwai, Brong Ahafo Region, Ghana.

Although working conditions and wages will be somewhat meagre in comparison to this country Miss Langabeer is looking forward to the challenge of a two-year stint of duty in Africa.

Church Groups

ST. ANDREW'S GUILD

The September meeting of the Women's Guild of St. Andrew's Presbyterian Church was held in the parlor on Tuesday evening.

Mrs. S. Fraser welcomed the group and opened the meeting with prayer.

The Sunshine Group was in charge of devotions with Mrs. A. Globe and Mrs. R. Kingston taking part.

Mrs. R. Kempster gave the secretary's report and read items of correspondence and Mrs. R. Michaud gave the treasurer's report. Mrs. Fraser thanked those who helped in the care group during the summer months.

Mrs. M. Barlow expressed pleasure in meeting some young people from a United Presbyterian Church in Cincinnati, Ohio. These young people were on a working tour and spent a night at the church.

The Women's Missionary Society is packing a bale and Mrs. V. Weir would be pleased to pick up donations of men's clothing and winter clothing. A vote of thanks was given to Mrs. J. Robertson and her committee for the successful antique sale and show. Plans are underway for another show next September with Mrs. Robertson as convener.

Miss Frieda Matthews extended an invitation for everyone to attend a mission week-end at St. Andrew's and St. Columba Churches on Oct. 16 and 17. Speakers are Rev. James Sutherland of Taiwan, Colin Wascoae, Indian Affairs Branch, Ottawa and Miss Lois Cooke of Tyndale House, Montreal.

Refreshments were served by members of the Sunshine Group.

POINTS FOR PARENTS

BY MARY BRYSON

If you hire a babysitter for an evening, then change your plans, it may mean she has lost the chance to earn a fee. If you must cancel out at the last minute, offer to reimburse her a reasonable amount, especially if she has turned down other jobs for the same hours.

Sales, Ad President Will Address Club

Mrs. Pauline Hill, first woman president of the 3,000 member Canadian Advertising and Sales Association will be the guest speaker when the Belleville Women's Sales and Ad Club holds its regular dinner meeting at the Sun Lock Gardens this coming Tuesday evening.

Born and educated in Edmonton, Alberta, Mrs. Hill late attended the University of Toronto where she received a degree in health and physical education, which career she pursued in the Girl Guide creation Department of Eaton's of Canada in Toronto and the YWCA in Regina.

She joined Welcome Wagon Limited in Regina 1953 as hostess; transferred to Winnipeg as area director of Western Canada for Welcome Wagon and in 1967 moved to the Company's Canadian Office in the Toronto Dominion Centre as vice-president and managing director for Canada. In 1970, Mrs. Hill became executive vice-president of Welcome Wagon Ltd., and elected to the Board of Directors at that time.

Mrs. Hill is married to Alex Hill, retired Inspector for Detectives, Regina City Police Department and is involved in numerous community endeavors.

Horticultural Meeting

TWEED — Arrangements have been made by Tweed Horticultural Society to have as its guest speaker Janet Waite — resources manager for Moira River Conservation Authority on Tuesday, October 12, to be held at the S. H. Connor School, Tweed, at 8 p.m.

The first meeting of the society for the coming season was held recently, following the summer recess and was in charge of the president, Mrs. Larrie Wilson. The meeting opened in the usual way and the unfinished business was dealt with which included the appointment of Larry Wilson a bulletin editor.

Mrs. Jane Hughes won the flowering crab tree for obtaining the most new members during the summer months. This prize was offered by Larry Johnson, president of the Belleville Horticultural Society. The raffle was won by Mrs. P. C. Barrett, a beautiful bouquet of cut flowers and Mrs. George Griffin was the lucky winner of the door prize.

Several other items of business were discussed and laid over until next meeting, including the election of new officers.

Women's Institutes

REDNERSVILLE WI

Mrs. W. Green entertained the Rednersville Women's Institute for the September 23 meeting. There was a good attendance in spite of the wind and rain.

An interesting letter from Mrs. Austin Keller, Ontario WI president, was read. It included a plea for help from the branches of WI in raising the money to purchase the Erland Lee Homestead, where the Women's Institute originated. Total cost is $40,000, half of which has already been raised. It was decided the branch will send $10.00 to the fund.

Mrs. H. Bruiter extended thanks to those who had helped at Picton Fair, donating cookies, serving tea and cookies and demonstrating a turkey casserole. She also thanked the hostess, Mrs. W. Green.

Mrs. E. Osterdonk volunteered to represent the Belleville branch at the Area Convention held in Belleville on October 21 and 22. Others may help with the report. During the apple picking and other harvests it is difficult for many to be sure of time to attend.

Mrs. Gary Townsend gave an interesting talk on agriculture, beginning with a history of its progress across Canada. It started in Quebec and Ontario in the 1500's, but the prairies were much later being settled. She also spoke of the Agricultural Rehabilitation Development Association (ARDA) and some of their objectives.

Mrs. Townsend read a letter from Mrs. Craig, near Napanee, who has established a farm vacation business. Mrs. Craig described how she operates this and included a sample menu for a week in August. She bakes her own bread and uses the farm produce as much as possible. It sounded delicious. She mentioned quite a variety of businesses represented by her guests. Many of them return year after year.

This is a year-round vacation project and Mrs. Craig mentioned that her family also enjoyed using the snowmobiles, horses, ponies, etc. they have for the use of their guests.

Mrs. Dostator was a special guests at this meeting. She had recently moved from the district and has been missed. She was presented with a gift of a lovely cup and saucer.

All enjoyed the lunch and social time that followed the meeting.

Jewellery Inexpensive At Turn of Century

At the turn of the century it was possible to buy a solid gold, 8" chain-link bracelet for $15. The same bracelet in solid silver was $1.50. A 10 carat gold ring set with garnets and pearls was $2. An engagement ring set with garnets, pearls or turquoise was $1.35. The same ring set with diamonds, three large and 17 chips, cost $5.50. Solid gold keeper rings were as cheap as 35 cents each.

A great deal of Victorian jewellery remains. It turns up with regularity at house auctions. In many cases a lot of items of jewellery are thrown away before the auction begins because they are incomplete, one earring, one cuff - link, or have a damaged pin. If silver they are probably black and tarnished and thrown away as worthless.

Silver mounted dresser sets were once in everyhousehold. The mountings were usually over "French ivory" a type of celluloid that has probably long since yellowed and cracked or disappeared altogether. The silver mounts can be restored in a few months. Combs, clothes-brushes, nail buffers, manicure sets or shoe horns are still listed for another three generations.

Gold collar studs and shirt studs are often thrown out in the belief that they are brass. Not a few gold shirt studs are set with diamonds. Cuff buttons or cuff links in solid silver sold for 40 cents a pair in the 1890s. Set with pearls they cost 45 cents and top quality they were 75 cents.

Watch fob mounts on silk, (silk Alberts) or on woven hair, (hair Alberts) in solid blouse sets, also called Alberts started at 90 cents.

Hatpins and stickpins were popular and inexpensive starting at 10 cents. A mourning pin in solid gold set with pearls cost $1.50. Czarinas or ribbon slides for young ladies to wear on a ribbon around the throat were 50 cents.

In addition to all the small dress items in gold and silver and precious jewels there were many more elaborate items. Among the more bizarre is the piece illustrated, a parure of tigers claws and gold made in 1872.

A parure was a matching set consisting of necklace, brooch, earrings and bracelet. This one was probably made in India and retailed for less than $25 new and would be valued in terms of thousands now.

At auctions the place to look for Victorian jewellery is in bedroom drawers, glove drawers, men's collar boxes, sewing boxes (where all the czarinas, Alberts, and belt buckles ended up after the fabric wore out), and in the drawers of old sewing machines.

Gold and silver if unmarked, can be tested by nitric acid. The acid must be undiluted. There should be no reaction if a drop is put on pure gold. With lesser metals alloyed there will be a slight bubbly reaction. With brass, nitric acid fizzes avp anerrily and leaves a large hole in a matter of seconds. Silver reacts much the same way as gold except that pure silver will form a grey deposit that turns black in the sunlight almost immediately. Nitric acid is extremely dangerous and this test is not intended for the amateur. Take your jewellery to your jeweller and let him do it.

Club Activities

CROOKSTON 4-H CLUB

On Monday, September 20, the third meeting of the Crookston 4-H homemaking club was held at the home of Mrs. Donald Blackburn.

The discussion and demonstration was on how to make a dresser scarf. Mrs. Blackburn and Mrs. Francis demonstrated the basic steps in making a dresser scarf. For the next meeting, the members are to have the material there to start on their dresser scarf.

For group work, the girls made waste baskets, which they found quite difficult to cover. But finally they came up with a pattern, making it somewhat easier.

Surprise Party Given By Daughters

TWEED — A surprise party was held recently at the home of Mr. and Mrs. Harry Ashton, Durham Street, Madoc, to mark their 25th wedding anniversary, following a family dinner at the home.

THE ACHE OF MEMORY

It shall be no trespassing
If I come again - - -
In the grey disguise of years
Seeking ache of memory here.

—Robert Frost

* * *

"I remember as a youngster," recalls the driver of our car, as we pass by Clark's lush-green farmlands surrounding a small village; his birthplace and childhood home, "how horses fascinated me."

"I used to go over to that farm yonder, where there were two horses. One, a huge bay work-horse, the other, a lively, small, dark-brown, young colt, which had ways and means of letting his rider know how he felt about him. If riding in the woods, many a time he'd make for the tree with the lowest branches, under which he'd duck with the intent of sweeping his rider off in one neat brush. Or if riding along a rail fence, he'd manage in some subtle fashion to trot so close beside it that the rider's leg would be bruised and bleeding before he knew what happened. Yes, sir, he was like that! He had no patience with children.

"Whereas the big work-horse would stand patiently, while any of us children struggled upon his broad back (I went right on going to other side of the ground where I first attempted to get on him). But once on that vast expanse, he would turn his head around as if to see whether or not his rider was properly seated and took not a single step until he was satisfied. He seemed to love children. It was thus I learned that animals, like people, have likes and dislikes, personalities in their own right."

There was a pause. The road brought the car into view of another lovely farm-house, at the sight of which, our driver exclaimed:

"Many a piece of fresh, hot rhubarb pie have I had in the kitchen of that house as chum of the boy who lived there. We would follow his mother out to the creamery where lots of milk were kept cool. With a ladle, she would skim off some cream and pour it over the hot pie our driver speaks: "You know, on a Saturday night here as a child, I remember how all the farmers from miles around would gather; many came by horse and buggy. How they would stand in groups and visit and go up and down the little Mainstreet and stop at each storewindow to gaze and admire the latest items. Yes, in those days, those windows were their TV . . . And as he laughingly described his boyhood days and little events now more important in time than in space, there were traces of "an ache of memory" in his voice at another lovely farmhouse, at the sight of which, our driver exclaimed:

"Many a piece of fresh, hot rhubarb pie have I had in the kitchen of that house as chum of the boy who lived there. We would follow his mother out to the creamery where lots of milk were kept cool. With a ladle, she would skim off some cream

Young Girl Makes Decision on Braces

ANN LANDERS

DEAR ANN LANDERS: Two years ago we took Ellen to the orthodontist to have her teeth straightened. It was an expensive job but we were willing to put out the money. Ellen wanted a pretty smile more than anything in the world.

For the last year we have heard nothing but gripes. Ellen hates her braces. They are ruining her social life. They cut her mouth, they hurt. Last week my husband told Ellen that if the braces were making her that unhappy she didn't have to wear them any more. The next day she had them removed. The orthodontist was very displeased.

I believe my husband was wrong. He said it wasn't worth the aggravation — that he wasn't going to put out that much money to listen to all that whining. His last words were, "After all, it's her mouth." What do you say? — HAYWARD HASSLE.

DEAR HASS: I say it's too bad your husband let a 13-year-old girl make a decision as important as that one. He should have insisted that Ellen stay with the braces until her teeth were straight. In a few years she'll be sorry. And then she'll blame her father for letting her do such a stupid thing.

* * *

DEAR ANN LANDERS: In May my husband's sister was married. His folks gave her a wedding that cost at least $3,000. They also gave her the second family car which she had been driving. When Dan and I married they gave us a modest gift and their heartiest congratulations.

My sister-in-law is now pregnant and my in-laws are sending them a nice cheque for "medical expenses." This really burns me up. Dan and I are having a hard time putting ourselves through school and his folks are not helping worth a darn. Is it fair that parents go all out for a daughter and do nothing for a son? I am very resentful and the resentment is turning to intense dislike. Your opinion is wanted. — LEFT OUT.

DEAR OUT: It is customary for the bride's parents to pay for the wedding. From the sound of your letter it appears that you thought they should pay for their son's wedding, too. Sorry, but your wedding was your parents' responsibility.

About the gifts. I suspect the reason you aren't getting much is because you came across to them the way you came across to me. Avaricious and unpleasant.

* * *

DEAR ANN LANDERS: When our son was nine years old he exhibited unusual musical talents so we bought him a beautiful piano. Our three older children were working at the time so naturally their board money went toward the payments.

The piano-playing boy is grown now and although he did not make music his career he still plays the piano and enjoys it. He will be married soon and the question has arisen as to what to do with the piano. He has not asked for it but we think we should offer it to him. The older children feel we should either keep it or sell it and share the proceeds with them. (They do not need the money.)

The question is, does the boy who used the piano so well have a right to it? We want to be fair? — TORONTO.

DEAR T.: Leave the piano where it is. It's part of your home and should remain so. When you can afford to, you can buy your favorite numbers and bring back son e delightful memories of his youth.

Successful Living

Generation Conflicts Can Lead to Solutions

By DORIS CLARK

What is it like to be old?

One lady was overheard speaking of her mother to a neighbor: "If she would only stay out of my kitchen!" Apparently there are times when the gap between old and young is just intolerable; and the worst conflict seems to happen between the old and the not-so-young. Mother and daughter don't click as well as mother and granddaughter.

But conflicts can lead to solutions and three generations can live happily under one roof. This happens when each finds his place, is acknowledged as reigning supreme in it, and is turned to for appropriate counselling.

For the young one to make his way, he must first learn the old way — and then rebel. There has to be a pattern to rebel against. If there is none at home a youth may look to a neighbor for his example, whether it fits his principles or not. One has to seek advice from someone.

With parents it is much more likely the young rebel will be accepted, even if they disagree with him. And when mother is angry, grandma turns into wise counsellor and comforter.

Dear Doris: I'm crippled up in my legs and don't get much exercise so I put on fat no matter how little I eat or what I eat. I am five feet in height; 84 years old and weigh 187 pounds. I'm afraid of a stroke.

I would like a simple diet chart to go by. I'm not sick; only Uncomfortable and Worried

Dear Uncomfortable: Trying to get exercise when your legs are crippled isn't easy. Yet you can live longer if you develop some routines for keeping arms and fingers nimble, shoulders and neck flexible, waist twistable.

If an astronaut who is cooped up in a space module can keep arms and legs going by means of an elastic rope contraption, the physiotherapists can figure out something for you.

Ask your "doctor to guide you to the therapy you need; and show him the Simple Reducing Diet for his approval, before starting it.

When you get going on this send us your report. It will encourage other healthy Canadians in your age range to keep themselves on top of things!

Kitchen Tested Recipes

Large Quantity of Hot Rolls

By MARY MOORE

QUESTION: I hope you can help me. I had a recipe for buns I clipped from the paper some time ago and have lost it. It was for 150 buns and about all I can remember was they called for 8 or 10 eggs and I think 1½ lbs. shortening. They had a nice texture and flavor. — Mona D.

ANSWER: That was 10 years ago Mona.

HOT ROLLS
(Approximately 150)

SATURDAY

Dinner Menus

Steamed Wieners; Mustard Bean Relish; Soft Mashed Potatoes; Vegetable Slaw; Sliced Tomatoe and Cucumber Vinaigrette; Chocolate Date Layer Cake; Coffee.

4 oz. granular yeast (8 pkges.)
5 cups lukewarm water
5 cups lukewarmmilk
1½ lbs. (3 cups) shortening
3¼ cups sugar
3 tbsps. salt
2 cups (approximately 10) eggs
1 tsp. vanilla (optional)
8½ lbs. bread flour

Dissolve the yeast in 2½ cups of the listed lukewarm water (at 80 deg. fahr.) with ¼ cup of the listed sugar. Let stand 10 or 12 min. Scald milk then cool to lukewarm. Cream shortening and add to it the remaining sugar and salt and cream well. Add eggs gradually and best well. Add vanilla if used. Add remaining water and scalded milk. Add 5 lbs. of flour and mix well. Add risen yeast liquid, then remaining 3½ lbs. flour. Knead until perfectly smooth. Place dough in lightly greased large container. Grease top of dough. Let rise in warm place (78 to 82 deg. Fahr.) free from draughts, covered with a clean dry cloth. Allow to stand 2 to 2½ hrs. until fully risen. (Dough is light when an impression remains if pressed lightly with the finger.) Punch down dough, and let rise again. Cut off pieces of dough approximately the size of golf balls. Shape into smooth and round. Place on greased baking pans 2" apart. Cover with clean dry cloth and set in warm place to rise until doubled. Bake at 425 deg. Fahr. for 15 to 20 min. Remove from oven and brush with melted butter, if desired.

FIRE PREVENTION WEEK OCT. - 3rd TO 9th

- THIS . . . CAN CAUSE THIS -

Fire is not like the weather. Everybody talks about fire . . . but, everybody can also DO something about it. During Fire Prevention Week, October 3rd to 9th, The Fire Prevention Bureau of the Belleville Fire Department charges YOU to DO something about it! And there is a lot that you can do right in your own home.

Education in fire prevention and the proper procedures to follow in the event of a fire, is an important step for both you and your children. Information is readily available from your local department.

The best fire is the one that never started — so check out your home for hazards that invite trouble. Faulty wiring, improper use of electrical outlets, storage of unnecessary combustibles, lack of extinguishers . . . all are playing with fire. Rid your home of these hazards.

Fire prevention is most important, however it is wise to prepare for the event of a fire, in case it happens to you. Learn how to deal with small fires, post the Fire Department phone number near your telephone, plan escape routes from your home and carry ample insurance on your belongings. Don't just talk about Fire Prevention — Do something about it!

DON'T LET FIRE BREAK YOUR HEART!

Redskins Hope Defence Key to Winning War With Cowboys

By THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

Washington Redskins and Dallas Cowboys meet Sunday to decide the leadership—and just possibly the championship—of the National Conference's East Division while New England Patriots and Buffalo Bills have the unfortunate luck of running into angry teams in this weekend's National Football League action.

The Cowboys have put together the conference's most potent offence while the Redskins have thrown up its stingiest defence to remain undefeated going into the third game of the season.

Billy Kilmer has thus far been a more than satisfactory replacement for injured Redskins quarterback Sonny Jurgensen. He threw for 309 yards last week against New York Giants, hitting 23 of 32 passes, including Taylor.

The Cowboys' defence sparkled in their rout of Philadelphia Eagles last Sunday, coming up with a club-record seven interceptions, three by Herb Adderley.

Craig Morton, who took over at quarterback when Roger Staubach was jolted in dizziness, will start against Washington. He finished with completions on 15 of 22 passes for 184 yards and two touchdowns and ran for a third.

The Redskins will be trying to win their first three games for the first time since 1947 but will have to break a trend to do it. Dallas, defending division champion, has beaten them on straight times. If this game doesn't settle the Eastern title, perhaps their second meeting on Nov. 21 in Washington will.

In other NFC games, it will be Atlanta Falcons at Detroit Lions, Chicago Bears at Los Angeles Rams, San Francisco 49ers at Philadelphia Eagles and New York Giants at St. Louis Cardinals.

The American Conference games have Baltimore Colts at New England Patriots, San Diego Chargers at Pittsburgh Steelers, New York Jets at Miami Dolphins, Kansas City Chiefs at Denver Broncos and, in Monday night's game, Oakland Raiders at Cleveland Browns. Buffalo Bills are at Minnesota Vikings, New Orleans Saints at Houston Oilers and Cincinnati Bengals at Green Bay Packers in inter-conference contests.

Rookie quarterback Jim Plunkett couldn't move the Patriots consistently last week against Detroit and now he has the added problem of running up against a herd of Colts still seething over their loss last week to Cleveland.

Buffalo, too, has the handicap of catching a loser on the rebound. The Bills are winless and couldn't stop Miami's ground game last Sunday.

Now they face one of the most powerful running games and the Vikings will be out to make up for their upset loss at the hands of Chicago Bears.

Lions Looking for Advancement Sam Looking for Improvement

By THE CANADIAN PRESS

British Columbia Lions hope to become the sole holders of third place in the Western Football Conference and Saskatchewan Roughriders are looking for a chance to move closer to first-place Calgary Stampeders in Canadian Football League action tonight.

But Montreal coach Sam Etcheverry hopes the Alouettes will be angry enough about their 12-11 defeat at the hands of Edmonton Eskimos Wednesday night to take it out on the Lions in Vancouver tonight.

"I just hope that the players are boiling mad after the motion game and play as if they are," Etcheverry said. "A win would move the Alouettes into second place alone in the Eastern Football Conference.

Meanwhile, Winnipeg Blue Bombers will have their healthiest lineup this year when they play host to Saskatchewan.

Despite four new players in the Winnipeg camp, coach Jim Spavital said "we've had a good week . . . and I believe you can tell a lot by the way a team practises."

New faces in tonight's lineup will be defensive tackle Rock Pedrosi, picked up from Hamilton Tiger-Cats, and defensive end Sid Beadley, cut from Chicago Bears of the National Football League. Ether Craig McLeod or Paul Robson will fill the left linebacking spot vacated by Carl Crennel.

The Roughriders will be playing without Silas McKinnie, whose injured right knee hasn't responded to treatment. But they will have halfback Bob Pearce going both ways against the Bombers.

Montreal Alouettes will play without end Tom Pullen, who suffered a torn knee in Edmonton, but will have veteran Gary Lefebvre in his spot.

The Lions are adding new running back Lawrence James, who at 6-foot-2, 228 pounds will team with speedy Larry Highbaugh, 5-foot-8, 165 pounds.

Calgary, suffering since the loss of quarterback Jerry Keeling, hope replacement Jim Lindsey can put it together against Hamilton in interlocking play Sunday afternoon in Calgary.

The Stampeders Friday added Max Huber, an offensive guard and tackle, to the list of those on five-day trial. Huber was released by the Lions.

The Tiger-Cats have signed running back Max Anderson, a Buffalo Bills cut. To make room for Anderson, the Ticats released backup quarterback Wally Gabler.

The Montreal-B.C. game will be televised on the full CBC network at 8 p.m. PDT Saturday. The full CTV network will carry the Hamilton-Calgary game Sunday at 3 p.m. MST.

Duncan Armstrong's effort was short but sweet as Trenton High School swept a pair of Bay of Quinte COSSA contests from Centre Hastings yesterday.

The speedy Trenton backfielder was switched to half back from flanker for the senior contest after injuries felled starting backs Jim Ransom and Brian Weston.

Armstrong responded with a 20-yard touchdown run on the first offensive series for his team and added a 97-yard punt return when Centre Hastings were forced to kick on their first series of plays. He twisted an ankle on the punt return and was forced to leave the game, but Trenton had little trouble subduing Centre Hastings by a 40-0 count.

The Belleville Quinte's hope that their Senior A exhibition season, which began with a whimper Friday will end in a roar tonight.

Orillia Terriers were apparently unable to ice a team for last night's scheduled encounter with the Quintes in Trenton, forcing a last minute cancellation.

The Belleville club will be looking for better results tonight when they travel to Kingston to meet the Aces in an exhibition encounter.

Power Squadron Charts Starting Course Monday

The Bay of Quinte Power Squadron has a course set for Monday night — an initiation course.

Boating enthusiasts wishing to learn water safety and nautical lore in general are welcome to join the club, which conducts courses from October to March.

The nominal cost covers materials used in the course and those who pass examination may be invited to become squadron members.

Registration will take place 8 p.m. Monday evening at the Bay of Quinte Yacht Club.

Wellesley Sidelined

OTTAWA (CP) — Jack Gotta, coach of Ottawa Rough Riders, admits that quarterback Paul Brothers "was no Moses" when he tried to lead the British Columbia Lions out of the football wilderness.

But a desperate Gotta is gambling that Brothers can help Riders in their bid for a playoff berth in the Eastern Football Conference. Sunday they play Toronto Argonauts.

Riders won only three of 10 starts in the EFC this year. With only four games left, that puts them four points behind Montreal Alouettes and Hamilton Tiger-Cats for the final playoff spot.

Brothers was signed this week after Riders cut Garry Wood.

Although Toronto coach Leo Cahill has his club comfortably in the EFC lead, he is concerned about the rate of injuries.

Argo casualties include: quarterback Greg Barton, out with a broken finger; running back Leon McQuay, torn ligaments; lineman Ed Harrington, on th 30-day injury list with a leg injury; lineman John Trainer, one for the season.

Riders have lost halfback Terry Welleley for the balance of the year and Wayne Giardino, who has played both ways, is a doubtful starter.

Giardino might see duty on defence.

Marshall Happy In Toronto

TORONTO (CP) — The lot of a utility forward in the National Hockey League is often a frustrating succession of moves from one club to another and veteran Dennis Marshall has had his share of it.

The 30-year-old Verdun, Que., native says he was satisfied with his most recent move to Toronto ample Leafs but he still recalls the two low points of despair in his career with Montreal Canadiens ad New York Rangers.

"The first was in 1963 when Canadiens traded me away," Marshall said between workouts at Maple Leaf Gardens.

"I just couldn't believe it was happening to me and, without stirring up unpleasant memories after all this time, I'll just say I was hurt by the way it was handled, too.

"I was simply very upset to leave my home town and such a fine situation for a hockey player. I mean if this is the way you're going to make your living, Toronto and Montreal are the best cities to be in, eh? Or at least they certainly were then."

Montreal had won five straight Stanley Cups up to 1969 but then started losing in the semi-finals and Marshall was in one of the trades that followed.

"Perhaps my attitude wasn't the best and, what with all the complications of moving, adjusting and so on, my first season with Rangers was easily the worst of my life."

Marshall's points total dropped to 20 in his first year with Rangers when he got 11 goals and 12 assists.

"That led to my second low point I've experienced. Rangers did not include me on their list of protected players at the draft meetings in 1964 and, what was even more humiliating, not one club was interested in picking me up for the draft price. That really hurt."

The Leafs did want him and coach Johnny McLellan has been happy with his work in training camp.

Delvechio May Retire

DETROIT (AP) — Red Wing captain Alex Delvecchio has threatened to quit the team unless he is shifted from substitute status.

The 21-year National Hockey League veteran, angered by his demotion from a full-time roll, said: "That's the only way I'll play on the team."

Coach Doug Barkley and general manager Ned Harkness, however, have something else in store for the veteran centre.

"Alex is still advantageous for us," said Barkley. "He can play any of the forward positions but he's 39 years old and just can't keep up with a 78-game schedule."

"I've always been a regular," said Delvecchio, "and I want it to stay that way until the day I retire."

"This is probably my last year anyway," he added.

"We'll use him as an extra man," said Barkley, "and he'll work on the power play and penalty-killing team.

"We were going to do the same thing last year, but we needed him on the ice as much as he could play."

Delvecchio played in 77 games last season and scored 21 goals and 31 assists for the second-best record among the Wings.

'Pie' Earns Boston Tie

BY THE CANADIAN PRESS

The Boston Bruins' forward line of centre Fred Stanfield and wingers Johnny McKenzie and Johnny Bucyk appears ready for the 1971-72 National Hockey League season.

The line, which piled up 106 goals in the 1970-71 campaign, accounted for all Boston scoring as Bruins and Montreal Canadiens tied 3-3 Friday night in an exhibition game before 14,995 fans at Boston.

In the only other exhibition contest, Cincinnati Swords of the American Hockey League, strengthened by Eddie Shack and GilPerreault of the NHL's Buffalo Sabres, blanked California Golden Seals of the NHL 6-0 at Peterbrough, Ont.

McKenzie, a 31-goal scorer last season, tallied twice on Bucyk, with 31 goals in 1970-71, to get the other goal as Bruins forced Canadiens to come from behind three times.

The Bruins, whose pre-season record of two wins and four defeats includes 7-4 and 2-1 losses to Montreal, were outshot 33-26 by the defending Stanley Cup champions. The Canadiens now are undefeated in exhibition play with four wins and four ties.

"We looked a little better and I'm not worried, not yet anyway," Bruins coach Tom Johnson said. "We still have a way to go, but there's time before we open the regular season."

The teams meet again tonight in Boston.

At Peterborough, the Swords led 1-0 after 20 minutes and 3-0 after the second period. Rick Dudley scored twice. Cleland Mortson, Butch Deadmarsh, Tom Miller and Terry Bell got single goals.

Gabler Cut by Ti-Cats

HAMILTON (CP) — Quarterback Wally Gabler was released Friday by Hamilton Tiger-Cats of the Canadian Football League and his place in the import roster will be taken by (Mini) Max Anderson, former halfback with Buffalo Bills of the National Football League.

Gabler, a former Toronto Argonaut who came to Hamilton last year from Winnipeg Blue Bombers of the Western Conference, sparked Tiger-Cats to first place in the East with three wins and a tie in the last four games of the 1970 schedule.

He took over direction of the team after first-string quarterback Joe Zuger suffered a broken right forearm in a game against Vancouver Lions.

Gabler did not play in Hamilton's last two games this season but was prominent in two of the Tiger-Cats firt three victories.

His quarterback spot on the team will be taken by homebrew John Manel, who played briefly for the Tiger-Cats in 1969.

NHL Makes Loan

WINDSOR, Ont. (CP) — The International Hockey League announced Friday that the National Hockey League has approved the loan of a maximum of four young players to the IHL club in the 1971-72 season.

"All International League teams have working agreements with National League clubs," IHL commissioner Bill Regan said, "and I hope that within the next three years that the number of professionals allowed to play for each IHL team will go as high as 10."

The agreement allows only players under age 25 as of Dec. 31, 1971, to go on loan to the IHL.

The eight-team IHL consists of Columbus, Dayton and Toledo in Ohio; Flint, Muskegon and Port Huron in Michigan; Fort Wayne, Ind., and Des Moines, Iowa.

Dave Dapper, Vida Dour Before AL Playoff Opener

BALTIMORE (AP) — Dave McNally—pleasant, poised and with the confidence of a four-time 20-game winner—and Vida Blue—sullen, quiet and apparently feeling the glare of his first spotlight season—are the pitching rivals today in the first game of the American League playoffs.

VIDA BLUE

The contrast was evident as McNally, Baltimore Orioles' left-hander, and Blue, sensational young southpaw of Oakland Athletics, fenced with reporters Friday before rain-shortened workouts for the best-of-five series to determine an AL World Series representative.

McNally talked willingly about his injury-plagued season, expressed thankfulness for recovery from a sore arm that cost him 38 days, or in the parlance of a pitcher, eight starting assignments. He finished 21-5 with a 2.89 earned-runaverage, winning eight of his last 10 starts.

Blue, Oakland's 24-game winner whose name has been uttered in the same breath with Sandy Koufax after one full season in the majors, wasn't talking—period.

Baltimore, 1970 American League winner and World Series victor over the National League's Cincinnati Reds, ruled a slight favorite over the West Division champion Athletics.

The Orioles enter the playoffs with four 20-game winning pitchers—McNally, Jim Palmer, Mike Cuellar and Pat Dobson—and a power hitting attack which includes Boog Powell, Frank Robinson and Brooks Robinson, each with 20 or more home runs and each with better than 90 runs batted in. The Orioles won the East Division by 12 games over Detroit Tigers.

Baltimore manager Earl Weaver dismissed the Orioles season-ending, 11-game winning streak, declaring: "There is no such thing as momentum." He recalled the 1969 World Series when Baltimore defeated New York Mets in the first game and then lost four straight.

"If a guy is looking for momentum, he won't find it," Weaver said.

"It's day-to-day enthusiasm you have to keep up. The players themselves have to do it. It's pride, every player wanting to be the best individual player everyday. If you do that you're going to win ball games."

The Athletics can't match the Orioles in individual stars, but manager Dick Williams refuses to concede a thing to the defending champions, not even experience.

"We've had some games that were very crucial and we met the challenge," Williams said of his club, which won 101 games and finished 16 games ahead of second-place Kansas City Royals.

Williams said his brash young team wasn't psyched by the fact the Orioles had beaten the Athletics 7-4 in the regular-season series. He pointed out that the games were close, three of them decided in the ninth inning.

"There is confident without being overconfident," Williams said. He dismissed the chance of a three-game Orioles' sweep but liked Oakland's chances of doing it in three if they win the first game today.

The Athletics, who haven't won a pennant since they were Philadelphia Athletics in 1931, depended on the pitching of Blue, 21-game winner Jim (Catfish) Hunter and 15-game winner Chuck Dobson. Reggie Jackson, whose 22 home runs tied him for second in the league, and Sal Bando, a .271 hitter with 94 RBIs and 24 homers, supply the Athletics' power.

Injured Giant Stars Big Series Question Marks

SAN FRANCISCO (AP) — With one mystery solved, there is still more suspense in store when San Francisco Giants meet Pittsburgh Pirates today in the opener of the National League playoffs.

The Giants, who finally won the West Division title in a tingling finish on the final day Thursday, have other unanswered problems as they open the best-of-five series with the East Division champions.

But some questions remain: Will Bobby Bonds play? Are the best-of-five series to determine an AL World Series representative.

McNally talked willingly about his injury-plagued season, expressed thankfulness for recovery from a sore arm that cost him 38 days, or in the parlance of a pitcher, eight starting assignments. He finished 21-5 with a 2.89 earned-runaverage, winning eight of his last 10 starts.

Also in the Giants' scheme is redemption for Willie Mays, the youngest 40-year-old in baseball. An injured arm and the long season have taken their toll on the San Francisco veteran superstar.

"Me? I'm tired," he says. "I hope I'll be rested for the Pirates."

The Pirates, meanwhile, appear to be the better one of a pair of sluggish clubs. Pittsburgh, 97-65, was outscored and outhomered by the Giants.

Does the situation upset Murtaugh? Absolutely not, he says.

"I never look back," says Murtaugh. "I don't let history bother me. You can't let things like that bother you in a playoff.

"This playoff is really just a question of who gets hot. In short series, whoever gets hot is going to win."

Howe Gets Hair Removal
TORONTO (CP) — Marty Howe got a haircut this week.
It is a long-standing custom that rookies with Toronto Marlboros of the Ontario Hockey Junior A series receive haircuts—rough haircuts.
"For a week he came to practice carrying a hat, in case he had to wear it home," said team manager Tom Smythe.
"We made it a little hard for him tonight. He started the game for us. That meant he was on the ice when they played the national anthem and he had to take his helmet off."
The game was an exhibition contest against Tulsa Oilers of the Central Hockey League. Tulsa won 6-4.

Economy and Jobs Common Thread During Campaign

By THE CANADIAN PRESS

Economic issues were the thread which linked the major campaign statements of Ontario's three political party leaders Friday, even though the main subjects in two cases were pollution and a provincial natural gas system.

The economy was the subject discussed when Premier William Davis appeared before the Empire Club in Toronto to charge that the failure to develop a national economic policy was due partly to Ottawa's failure to seek advice from the provinces.

Liberal Leader Robert Nixon became involved with the issue when he met members of Pollution Probe in Toronto. One of his listeners charged he was being contradictory in promising a program of industrial growth to create jobs, while also espousing the cause of environmentalists.

The main portion of New Democrat Stephen Lewis's speech to a public meeting in Thunder Bay was devoted to his plan for a provincial natural gas system to provide gas to consumers at cost. But he also dealt with the subject of Canadian exports of energy resources, saying there should be a federal moratorium on such sales until Canada's needs are known.

Mr. Davis told 400 businessmen that federal proposals on tax reform, tax-sharing and social services will be "less than satisfactory" because they were not developed in co-operation with the provinces.

The premier said the Ontario Advisory Committee on Confederation will be re-organized to place more emphasis on economic problems. And he called for a new national policy that would ensure more processing of natural resources in Canada; compel foreign-owned companies to do more research and development here; channel savings into business investment; and exploit Canada's bargaining power when selling natural resources.

Mr. Nixon told the Pollution Probe group growth is necessary to create jobs and a Liberal government would create a growth plan for all of Ontario. He also said that the money spent on Toronto's ill-fated Spadina Expressway should not be wasted, and that some use should be found at least for the completed portion.

Dr. Donald Chant, a University of Toronto professor and a founder of Pollution Probe, said the group was "disappointed with these views" which seemed to indicate "exploitation of development through intensification of industry while hoping to maintain environmental integrity."

Mr. Lewis said an NDP government would establish a Crown corporation and gas distribution system similar to Ontario Hydro. Trunk lines would be owned and operated by the province with municipalities purchasing gas from the system.

Gas distribution would be integrated with Hydro "so that each of these major sources of power will be available for the purpose for which it is best suited."

The NDP leader said neither the provincial nor federal governments know Canada's specific needs in relation to natural gas, which probably would replace petroleum as the major energy source by 1980. He said an NDP government would take an inventory of resources and that until it was completed, would press Ottawa to stop any further sales of energy resources outside the country.

The campaigning slows down a bit over the weekend. Premier Davis campaigns in the Toronto area today but has nothing on his Sunday schedule. Mr. Nixon will spend he weekend in his home riding of Brant. Mr. Lewis will continue his northern tour with visits to Nipigon, Schreiber and Marathon today and will be in his home riding in Toronto on Sunday.

Nixon Analyses Davis, Lewis Strategy

HAMILTON (CP) — Premier William Davis is "on a public relations kick" and the approach of New Democratic Party Leader Stephen Lewis is too far away from the middle of the road, Liberal Leader Robert Nixon said Friday night.

He made the comments on a radio show as listeners phoned in to get his views on the campaign for the Oct. 21 Ontario election.

Mr. Nixon told a listener who said he was going to change his vote to Conservative from Liberal that there is plenty of room in this election for his party's middle-of-the-road approach that wasn't there in the 1967 election.

He urged the man not to change his vote "to save the province from the NDP."

"Meanwhile Davis is on a public relations kick which means really that he is tailoring his position to what his experts tell him the community wants to hear.

"Maybe he's doing it very successfully. Certainly this is the approach that all of the advertising is taking and he's taking the advice from public relations experts that . . . you know —the ones who elected Dalton Camp in the last federal election, the ones who elected Robert Stanfield prime minister of Canada, the ones who elected Al Lawrence the leader of the Conservative party—they all worked for losers.

"They really had great campaigns but never had a successful one yet. Well . . . they did get Stanfield elected leader of the Federal Progressive Conservative party.

"I feel that Bill Davis has made a commitment to the PR (public relations) approach to politics. You remember he fired (this speech writer) Martin Goldfarb after he said 'we're going to sell Davis like we sell a can of tomatoes'."

Mr. Nixon said that the NDP has strayed from the middle-line approach it had in the 1967 election when Donald MacDonald, member in the last house for Toronto York South, was leader of the party.

"He was trying to fulfil what you would call a responsible middle-of the road role," the Liberal leader said. "He thought that's the only way for the NDP to win, and frankly I think he was and probably still is right."

"Steve Lewis doesn't take that approach although he is trying to shake the radical image that came with him when he came into the legislature.

"He espoused some very radical causes and the guy is a very bright man indeed—no doubt about that."

Mr. Nixon said that Mr. Lewis is talking about nationalization of industry, an issue which Mr. MacDonald didn't discuss four years ago.

Mr. Nixon also said that voters between 18 and 20 years of age "will not do much for the Conservatives" and the ballots cast by this group—estimated at 412,000—will be "split between the NDP and the Liberals."

The voting age was lowered to 18 from 21 at the last session of the legislature.

Mr. Nixon said this was not the main reason he has been campaigning at university campuses. The questions asked by students "are pretty searching and pretty helpful."

He said young people add to the election and "we need a dash of idealism."

Action speaks louder than words.

Nobody's saying that words aren't important.

Dialogue is, after all, pretty central to our notion of democracy. People talk to other people, and listen to other people talk about the changes that could or should happen to our society.

But there's something else that's pretty central to our notion of democracy, and that's leadership. One person must act when all has been said. One person must speak for us. One person must listen, and very carefully, when there are difficult decisions to be made.

Bill Davis is not new to the challenge of leadership. During his seven months as Premier, he has acted to stimulate our economy, to create opportunities for Canadians and for Canadian enterprise. He has acted on a wide front to clean up our environment—air, land and water. He has acted to expand and up-grade a variety of government services, from day care centres to free medicare for those 65 and over. In all, more than 130 pieces of legislation have been introduced, debated, and made law in those seven short months.

In the course of the present election campaign, Bill Davis continues to listen and speak out, but his promises are few. Our economy can ill afford the tax increases to which others have freely committed themselves.

We may be sure that when action is called for, he will be both wise and decisive.

In what he has already done is the true promise of what is to come from the leadership of Bill Davis.

Inserted by the Ontario Progressive Conservative Association.

Davis is doing things...for people.

He listens, he understands, he acts.

On October 21st, do something for Ontario...Support Bill Davis.

To Your Good Health

Most Dermoid Cysts Benign

Dear Dr. Thosteson: You wrote that "a dermoid cyst of the ovary is a malignant type" and should be removed. My wife had one removed 40 years ago. It obviously was not malignant. However, your statement that they are malignant is very disturbing to her, as two relatives have developed malignancies. Could you publish a qualification to the effect that most dermoid cysts are not malignant? I am sure it would relieve many women who might be disturbed. — E. B. S.

Gladly, and I truly regret any needless worry that may have been occasioned by what I wrote. Most dermoid cysts of the ovary are not malignant.

As explained before, these curious cysts are made up of various kinds of tissue, including hair, bone, teeth, etc. Most are benign and are removed for quite different reasons.

It is true that some are malignant, but not a great number. I have seen various figures quoted, the highest being "less than 5 per cent," but I think that is much too high. One specialist in the field set the figure at "less than one per cent," which I am sure will set at rest the minds of women who have had such cysts removed.

* * *

Dear Dr. Thosteson: My husband found out six years ago that he was diabetic. The doctor told him to lose weight. He did, and he watches every bite he takes, but he starts drinking on the weekend and stops when he can't drink another ounce. He claims he is not an alcoholic because he just "drinks a little on weekends". — —

He was supposed to have his blood checked every so often, but hasn't been back to the doctor since he lost that weight six years ago.

Is he cured? Will the gorge of beer hurt him? By "gorge" I mean I have to get someone to take me to get him every weekend so I can drive him home. I go from 10 to 125 miles. — Mrs. A. D.

So let's label him a "weekend alcoholic". There are such.

No, his diabetes isn't cured. It never will be. The question is whether he is keeping his blood sugar levels controlled, and with all that beer, he probably isn't.

I'd want a blood-sugar test (taken two hours after a meal) before venturing an opinion on how much he is hurting himself. It has to be some. * * *

Dear Dr. Thosteson: My husband is 29 and gets severe leg cramps. He gets them so bad he in the middle of the night that he rubs alcohol on his legs, and cold towels, and tries to walk the cramps out. Sometimes he lies on the floor and has to have help to get up because of the pain.

He loses about an hour and a half of sleep when one occurs, and he gets them so often that I'm scared. He won't go to a doctor because he thinks there is nothing they can do for him.

He used to get them before we were married but not like he does now. He is a butcher and works in the cold all day. Does that have anything to do with it? — N. D.

This doesn't sound like the leg cramps that are so common (and annoying) in older folks. He's too young. He's obviously something is wrong and getting worse. Faulty blood supply in the legs? A possibility. Something deranged in the spine? Also possible. Probably isn't.

I rather suspect that there is effective treatment for whatever the cause may turn out to be, but he'll never know until he goes to the doctor and finds out what's wrong. proper footwear, and excessive smoking all are possible causes.

I'd say he'd be smarter to go to the doctor now, instead of waiting for the trouble to get still worse.

Western Provinces Ask for Cooling Out Period on Grain Bill

OTTAWA (CP) — Steps were taken Friday to cool off the great grain payments dispute and reimburse farmers hit by the 10-per-cent U.S. surcharge on dutiable imports.

To further brighten the farm picture, Statistics Canada predicted a record year for barley production—to 656.1 million bushels from 415.7 million in 1970—and a 57-per-cent increase in the wheat-yield over last year to 521.7 million bushels.

Prairie agriculture ministers and Otto Lang, minister responsible for the Canadian wheat board, met, then announced plans to seek a week-long halt in debate, scheduled to resume in the Commons Monday, on a bill to stabilize farm incomes in the Prairie grains industry.

The week would be used by farm leaders and governments to re-consider the stabilization bill and end a Commons battle that has raged since early last month.

Their announcement came shortly after Agriculture Minister H. A. Olson told the Commons the agricultural stabilization board and the agriculture products board would be designing aid programs for farmers hit by the U.S. surtax.

Mr. Olson, while declining to put an amount on the assistance program, said the surcharge could have damaged producers of non-processed agriculture products to the extend of $7.3 million a year, based on 1970 export figures.

The government has a bill, passed by the Commons and now in the Senate, that would make $80 million available to industries hurt by the surtax.

Assistance in agriculture would either go directly to farmers, through deficiency payments or purchases of products by the government, or by indirect aid to distributors.

Of the three, the payments issue remains the most unpredictable.

The three provincial ministers — Samuel Uskiw of Manitoba, Jack Messer of Saskatchewan and Alberta's Hugh Horner — asked for the suspension of debate to see if they could "build something better" into the stabilization plan.

Mr. Uskiw said they felt "the legality of the issue" should be played down for a week in order that leaders and governments could concentrate on a broader based system of aiding western farmers.

The new plan would pay all farmers a percentage of a $100 million transitional payment to compensate for the suspension of the reserves act and other subsidy programs, and bolster low 1970 incomes.

Then farmers would begin paying two per cent of their gross receipts for grain sales up to $15,000 a year into a joint account with the government. The government would contribute twice the amount put in by the farmers.

When the total gross receipts for the grains industry dropped below a five-year running average, a payout would be made to all eligible farmers based on their receipts during the preceding three years.

Opposition members have criticized this plan on the basis that it would stabilize farm incomes at a starvation level, that payments would seldom be made and certainly not in the immediate future.

CTV May Need Ottawa Aid

OTTAWA (CP) — The federal government may wind up subsidizing the television network, says John Reid, chairman of the Commons broadcasting committee.

Murray Chercover, president of CTV Television Network Ltd., says the principle of public assistance is valid but he would prefer an indirect method.

The two men were discussing in separate interviews the financial difficulties of the network.

Mr. Reid (L—Kenora-Rainy River) said that if the government believes a private television network is import to Canada, it will probably provide financial support within five years.

He said the CTV network is apparently in financial trouble. Cable television was cutting into Canadian TV audiences and advertising revenue was flowing to United States border stations.

This was coupled with pressure from the Canadian Radio-Television Commission to increase Canadian content in CTV programming and to extend the network to new areas in Canada.

Mr. Chercover said the government could provide microwave transmission facilities to carry television programs across the country. This would relieve the networks of a financial burden.

He said he has also proposed that the Canadian Film Development Corp. give financial aid to producers of television shows.

The CTV president told the CRTC in Toronto last week that Canadian programs attract less advertising revenue than U.S. shows.

He said CTV loses about $1 million replacing a U.S. once-hour show with a Canadian program over a broadcast season.

He appealed to the CRTC to delay implementing the requirement for 60 per cent Canadian content on private television, scheduled to go into effect Oct. 1, 1972.

Boards Don't Hear Refusals

TORONTO (CP) — Most hospital boards do not hear of applicants for medical positions who have been turned down, a member of the Scarborough General Hospital's board of trustees said Friday.

Carol Ruddell, a Scarborough alderman, told the committee of inquiry into hospital privileges in Ontario that the board gets its advice about privileges from the hospital's medical advisory committee made up of established medical practitioners.

"Do they not all have a potential conflict of interest?"

She said: "I would suggest that most boards only vote on the accepted. The denied—unless they fuss—never come to the attention of the board but die at the committee stage."

Dr. Elliott Siegel, a Toronto medical doctor who subsequently became an oral (dental) surgeon, told the committee a board of appeal should be set up to consider hospital privileges.

He urged that any reason for rejecting an applicant for a hospital staff post be given in writing and within a reasonable time. Some never get an answer, he said.

Dr. Siegel suggested that hospital boards be elected like school boards but with a few appointed medical men. He added a specific board for each hospital would have to be elected by the community.

Dr. Siegel said he had expected the association of Ontario oral surgeons to present a brief to the committee and found it "interesting" the association had changed its mind.

"The oral surgeons fear they will lose what few privileges they have if they present a brief," he said.

He said plastic surgeons feel oral surgeons are a competition in areas such as jaw disfigurements and that in some hospitals, oral surgeons are not allowed to practise except in the outpatient department.

Many Canadian oral surgeons have gone to the United States because that country gives them more professional courtesy, Dr. Siegel added.

Dr. Stanley Sober, an orthopedic surgeon, told the committee that interns and residents help the teaching staff at the Victoria Hospital in London, Ont., but not the non-teaching surgeons.

He said that once he was carrying out a complicated operation with only the help of a technician while two interns were assisting at a minor operation in the next room.

Gastown Riot Proves Need For New Approach: Lawyer

VANCOUVER (CP) — An entirely new police approach to civil disobedience was recommended Friday as an inquiry into a riot in the city's Gastown district Aug. 7 ended.

Joe Wood, lawyer for the British Columbia Civil Liberties Association, blamed the confrontation on a lack of police judgment and training in dealing with an increasing number of demonstrations.

He said the disturbance was the culmination of hostile moods building for some time between police and demonstrators.

The riot, in Vancouver's rejuvenated skid-road district resulted from a "smoke-in" at which demonstrators had gathered to protest a crack-down by police on drug sales and use in the area.

The inquiry, under B.C. Supreme Court Justice T. A. Dohm, was called following complaints of police brutality in dispersing the crowd, many of whom had not been participating in the demonstration.

Mr. Justice Dohm said he hopes to complete his report by the end of next week and send it to Attorney-General Leslie Peterson. It was up to Mr. Peterson to say when it would be released.

Mr. Wood rejected the contention of police union lawyer George Murray that the riot had been prompted by a conspiracy among members of the Youth International Party.

Mr. Murray said: "This affair was the result of a conspiracy between certain subversive elements in this community who are bound and determined to overthrow all authority."

He suggested the smoke-in was organized to cover up the real purpose of the confrontation.

"There isn't a tittle of evidence that this was an organized conspiracy," Mr. Wood said. "The people who were there were 90 per cent observers who had no intent whatsoever to engage in any violent confrontation."

He said the crowd had been given the impression of tacit approval by authorities, with uniformed policemen standing around and streets closed off earlier in the evening, when suddenly the order was given to clear the streets.

He described the following scene as "terror inducing" as a frontal assault was made on the crowd in the confined area. Flailed clubs policemen "beating demonstrators and dragging them off somewhere added to the general riotous confusion."

Thurston Found Guilty

TORONTO (CP) — David Thurston, 20, charged with non-capital murder in the May 19 death of Tracy Ann Brown, 2, was found guilty Friday of manslaughter and remanded for sentencing to Oct. 29.

Mr. Justice Donald Morand of the Ontario Supreme Court ordered a pre-sentence report.

The jury of 11 men and one woman deliberated for two hours and 27 minutes. Thurston, who had been living with the dead girl's mother, Jane Brown, 20, showed no emotion when the verdict was read.

During the trial, Dr. Barry Shadling, staff surgeon at the Hospital for Sick Children, testified that the girl died of internal bleeding in the abdominal cavity from a wound inflicted by the heel of a shoe or boot.

In a 45-minute charge to the jury, Justice Morand reiterated Crown counsel Frank Armstrong's submission that Thurston deliberately stomped on Tracy Ann May 18, and that the act was sufficient to justify a verdict of non-capital murder.

However, he also said that if the stomping "was done . . . to get at the mother," to punish her for something, then "it would be manslaughter."

Football Tactics Started Riot

NEW YORK (AP) — A convict at Attica state prison says that a guard's chance misunderstanding of the actions of two prisoners practising football moves led directly to the bloody four-day rebellion, the New York Times reports.

Both The Times and the New York Daily News today published lengthy background accounts of the Attica uprising.

The News, in the first of a five-part series on the revolt, says there exists "no single objective record" of the events during the assault Sept. 13 when most of the 43 deaths at Attica occurred.

Both The Times and The News tell of prisoners, accused by their fellow convicts of not going along with the rebellion, being found with their throats cut.

The Times says its 10,000-word chronology of events leading up to and including the assault was pieced together from prisoners, doctors, lawyers and legislators and from tapes, films, letters and notebooks.

The Times says the misunderstanding that sparked the rebellion occurred late Wednesday afternoon Sept. 8 as the prisoners gathered in the yard.

A white convict, Ray Lamorie, said to be a coach of the prison football team, was demonstrating a lineman's moves and feints to a young black, Leroy Dewer, The Times says.

At that moment, Lieut. Richard Mulrooney, a prison guard, stepped into the yard and saw what he mistakenly assumed was a fight between the two, The Times says.

The paper quotes an unidentified prisoner as saying that Mulrooney stepped up, put his hand on Dewer's shoulder and Dewer spun around and hit him in an apparent reflex action.

Lamorie defended Dewer, who was encircled by other prisoners for protection, and the guards did not press a demand that he leave the yard, The Times says. But it added that two hours later the two convicts were summoned from their cells and rumors circulated that they had been beaten.

The following morning prisoners on the way to the mess hall burst into rebellion, overpowered five guards, then moved down a passageway to Times Square—the intersection of four cellblock walls in the yard, The Times say.

At Times Square the lone guard on duty, William Quinn, was unable to secure the manual gate in time and the convicts fractured his skull in two places as they subdued him, The Times says. Earlier reports had stated that Quinn's skull was fractured when he was thrown from a window.

Later, convicts with "scores to settle" sought out and beat individual guards among the hostages until leaders of the uprising set up a security force to protect hostages, The Times says.

Pilot, Two Dead In Hijack Attempt

JACKSONVILLE, Fla. (AP) — Three persons from Tennessee, including an alleged air pirate and his wife, were shot to death today during the hijack of a posh private plane.

The FBI said the hijacker apparently shot his wife and the pilot before committing suicide. Another passenger and the co-pilot survived.

FBI agents on the scene when the plane landed at Jacksonville said they shot out both tires and one engine—prior to dodging a hail of bullets from inside the aircraft.

The dead were identified by the FBI as George Mallory Giffe and his wife; Susan, 25, and Brent Quinton Downs, 29, the pilot.

Bobby Wayne Wallace, 32, the other passenger, was arrested and charged with air piracy, the FBI said.

MONTREAL (CP) — A province-wide search is under way for six men who left a security guard in critical condition and hijacked two 17-ton containers of imported liquor from Montreal harbor early Saturday night.

A spokesman for National Harbors Board police said Sunday the 50-year-old guard, found unconscious near the harbor's east-end gate, was still in critical condition although somewhat improved. He was hit on the head with what police believed was a hammer.

The NHB spokesman said the liquor was valued at a minimum of $100,000 but "it can go up."

Money Back Pair Return

SUMMERSIDE, P.E.I. (CP) — With most of the money from Prince Edward Island's biggest theft back in the hands of the authorities, two young bank accountants wanted in the case gave themselves up to police here today.

Archibald MacLeod, 28, and William MacDonald, 29, sought by police in a three-week international manhunt, returned to Prince Edward Island from an undisclosed U.S. city during the weekend and surrendered to the police chief in this town of 10,000 at 9 a.m. today.

They were immediately arraigned on charges of theft of more than $50. Bail was set at $10,000 each, and the case was adjourned for one week.

More than $414,000 was missing from the bank Sept. 9 after authorities discovered the theft, believed to have taken place the previous evening.

The lawyer for MacLeod and MacDonald said the money was returned by courier last week and according to information he had received most of the missing money was recovered.

The lawyer, Charles McQuaid of Charlottetown, said he was contacted by the two men from somewhere in the U.S. last week. He declined to say exactly where.

Robin Hood Ransoms Painting

BRUSSELS (AP) — A modern-day Robin Hood demanded 200 million francs ($4 million) today for East Pakistani refugees in return for the missing Vermeer masterpiece The Love Letter which he claims to have stolen.

Belgian reporter Walster Schwilden reported in Le Soir that following an anonymous phone call he met a tall masked young man in front of a village church who blindfolded him. He was then taken by car and shown the famous painting by Johannes Vermeer.

Schwilden said the man identified himself as Thyl from the north Belgian province of Limbourg and compared himself with the mythical hero of Flanders, Tijl Uilenspiegel.

According to legend, Uilenspiegel gained a reputation for helping the poor against the rich and became the Flemish equivalent of England's Robin Hood.

Schwilden wrote that Thyl demanded 200 million francs be given to the Caritas charity organization for use among Bengali refugees. He said this was 50 million francs ($1 million) less than the painting was insured for.

Thyl also demanded Amsterdam's Rijksmuseum and the Palace of Fine Arts in Brussels finance a world-wide campaign against hunger.

Dismal Record Of Convictions

MONTREAL (CP) — Quebec Justice Minister Jerome Choquette says that while the War Measures Act was useful during last year's kidnap crisis he would not ask that it be invoked again.

"It was entirely necessary to have some legislation," he said in an interview on the eve of the first anniversary of the kidnapping last Oct. 5 of James Jasper Cross, British trade commissioner in Montreal. "But whether that legislation was good is debatable, we had at the time," the minister said.

"There was a duty to be prudent on the part of the government because terrorist activity was acquiring credibility, gathering momentum.

"We were faced with an aggression that appeared relatively organized. The escalation in the kidnappings appeared to be a real plan, and they were getting a certain verbal support."

Mr. Choquette said: "The police—and I don't blame them, it's their job—are often prone to go too far."

Although Mr. Choquette does not believe that placing charges under the act was a mistake, he says, he has drawn a lesson from the dismal prosecution record in those cases in the courts.

In August, the minister suspended proceedings against about 40 persons who still faced trial on such charges.

"Juries in my view are not ready to convict on a question of words unless there is an overt act. That's the conclusion I've drawn as to my own future conduct in the charging process."

Bodies of 2 Girls Found in Gravel Pit

PICKERING, Ont. (CP) — Police said today that two teenaged girls whose bodies were found Sunday in an abandoned gravel-pit ravine near here, were strangled to death.

Kathleen Potter, 13, and Lee Kirk, 15, wards of the Children's Aid Society of Metropolitan Toronto, were found about 24 hours after their foster parents reported them missing.

Police said both girls, still fully clothed, lay behind a small clump of bushes in the pit. The older girl had a cut on her head, they said.

The bodies were found by two men who were walking across the pit to watch young motorcyclists trailriding.

Police said the girls, who lived in nearby Toronto at a "group home" with other children under the supervision of Mr. and Mrs. Robert McMaster, left the home Friday evening with bus fare to visit Lee's father in a Toronto suburb.

Mr. McMaster said the girls were both "good kids" who had caused no problems at the home. Kathleen was in Grade 8 and Lee in Grade 9.

Parks Association Calls for Halt to Sandbanks Development

By MARGARET HAYLOCK
Staff Reporter

ATHOL — Further development of Sandbanks Provincial Park should be withheld until the government forwards a provisional master plan for the park and public hearings are conducted to examine all points of view.

The field trip, organized to show the public the effects of quarrying operations at the Sandbanks by the Lake Ontario Cement Company Ltd., attracted approximately 60 hikers guided by Harold Cantelon, area parks supervisor, Tweed.

The group walked to the quarrying site where Mr. Henderson pointed out the Sandbanks holds value not only to Ontario residents as a "magnificent recreational area "but also represents a natural feature of national importance.

"These Great Lakes sand dunes are the finest example of their kind in Canada, and as such should be protected and preserved as part of our national heritage," he said.

Mr. Henderson added, "Although Sandbanks is a provincial park, it has attributes that could qualify it for national park status. We are not suggesting that Sandbanks become a national park; we are simply insisting the government of Ontario recognise the special natural significance of this area and manage it first and foremost to preserve and perpetuate its ecological integrity over as large an area as possible."

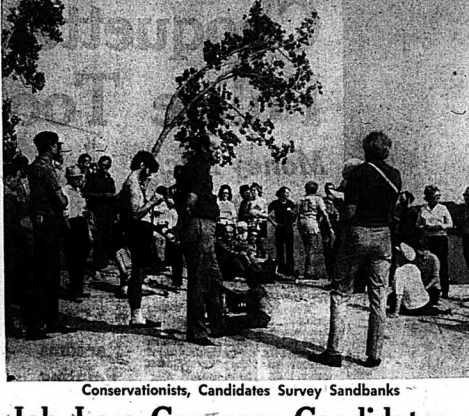
Mr. Henderson challenged a press report that the association he represents was trying to make "a political thing" of the issue.

He stressed the National and Provincial Parks Association of Canada is politically neutral concerning party politics but noted many of its aims at both the national and provincial levels hinge on political decisions by the government in power.

"By that I mean that what governments do in support of conservation, or what they leave undone, is always, you might say, a political decision. It is therefore the business of organizations like ours to make "a political thing" of every important environmental issue so that the politicians get the message that people in growing numbers are concerned about these things and are no longer willing to put up with the desecration of our environment for the sake of short - term political economic advantage," he asserted.

Mr. Henderson argued the government recognized the ecological importance of the dunes when the mixup over park boundaries was discovered more than 10 years ago but, presumably, for reasons of political expediency agreed the cement company a 75-year lease for quarrying at the Sandbanks.

In Ontario a government policy reversal now can be observed on issues such as commercial logging in provincial parks, the uncontrolled quarrying of sand and gravel on the Niagara escarpment, and the loss of prime recreational areas along the escarpment and Great Lakes shoreline owing to rising public opposition.



"To the extent, therefore, that we are trying to influence government action in a certain direction as a result of this field trip, I would agree that we are "trying to make a political thing" of it," commented Mr. Henderson.

The National and Provincial Parks Association realizes the need for safeguarding the jobs of workers at the Lake Ontario Cement Company Ltd. against any threat it may have to halt operations if it cannot get access to the raw materials it needs.

Jobs must take precedence if no alternate source of sand economically available to the company can be found.

"We sincerely hope, however, that the people of Ontario are not going to be blackmailed into the use of the dunes' formation and emphasized their uniqueness in this province after Mr. Henderson's remarks.

Dr. Peach noted the thousands of years taken for the dunes to form, should be contrasted with the time it would take to destroy them.

Conservationists, Candidates Survey Sandbanks

Minister Outlines Sandbanks History

PICTON (Staff) — Rene Brunelle, Minister of the Ontario Department of Lands and Forests has announced the government will do "everything in its power" to find an alternate source of sand supply for the Lake Ontario Cement Company Ltd., at the same time safeguarding jobs created by this industry.

In a press release issued Saturday concerning quarrying by the cement company at the Sandbanks, Mr. Brunelle said some persons mistakenly believe sand is being excavated from the park itself.

Commercial mining in any form is prohibited in all of Ontario's provincial parks and none is being conducted, he said.

The Lake Ontario Cement Company Ltd. is quarrying sand from a 15.6 - acre site adjacent to the Sandbanks Provincial Park under a 75-year lease from the Ontario Government.

"The company therefore has a legal right to this sand. The sand is vital to its operations and therefore essential for the preservation of jobs for some 250 employees," said Mr. Brunelle.

The press release issued during Saturday's field trip to Sandbanks Park stated that dunes have been formed by wave-action washing up glacial sands and winds blowing them into dunes. Beaches were established first and later, the dunes, when sand-laden winds were checked by obstacles such as pioneering vegetation.

Mr. Brunelle described the history of the Sandbanks from approximately 100 years ago to the present day, recalling recollections of a brick factory and a hotel now buried beneath the shifting sands. The dunes at that time were reported to be advancing at the rate of 40 feet a year.

In 1921 the Sandbanks forestry station was established and an extensive program of reforestation was begun. Reforestation continued in the ensuing years and the sands were successfully planted and stabilized.

In the 1950s the department of lands and forests discovered the encroachment on the boundary between properties owned by the Lake Ontario Cement Company Ltd. and the Crown.

The cement company did not wish to redirect its operations to the land it owned originally because of organic matter introduced in the sand by reforestation.

The department of lands and forests did not want to surrender the land because it would destroy the stabilized dunes.

An exchange of land was effected and the cement company was given a 75-year lease. At its expiry the land would revert to the Crown and would become part of the Sandbanks Park.

Mr. Brunelle concluded, "The department of lands and forests is carefully supervising the excavating operations, particularly for the safety of park visitors and the control of sand excavation. In the past, some people have mistaken the safety fence for a boundary fence and have wrongfully thought that the company was operating in the park. It never has and will not in the future. The department of lands and forests is also encouraging the company to make the operation as unobtrusive as possible and they are co-operating to the best of their ability."

Job Loss Concerns Candidates

ATHOL (Staff) — Candidates seeking the Prince Edward - Lennox riding in the October 21 election spoke briefly at Sandbanks park Saturday morning concerning quarrying now carried out there by the Lake Ontario Cement Company Ltd.

James Taylor, Progressive Conservative candidate expressed pleasure at seeing the more than 65 hikers who joined the three - hour field trip and said he interpreted their presence as an endorsement of his stand to support cessation of quarry operations.

Mr. Taylor outlined the history of negotiations between the cement company and the Crown which terminated in a lease which became a matter of public concern. When the came involved I could see the injection of commercial operations into a park situation and it is not a compatible interest," said the Conservative candidate.

He referred to the noise made daily by cement company trucks driving south from the park near a cottage area.

Mr. Taylor stressed the jobs of Lake Ontario Cement Company workers are important and added it is important there men not lose their livelihoods.

Negotiations between the province and the cement company should not be an attempt to polarize opposites. An effort should be made to work with industry.

Mr. Taylor said all negotiations for sale of the cement company's lease to the province should be "amicable" but again observed "not necessarily expropriation but expropriation if necessary".

He said he felt there was "a keen desire" on the part of the provincial government to acquire the Sandbanks property leased to the company and added that he used the word "advisedly".

"I feel we have begun the solution to the problem that confronts us. Now it is just a question of completing the transaction, I think" concluded Mr. Taylor.

Barry Young, Liberal candidate for the riding stressed he feels continued quarrying at the Sandbanks should be supported if no alternate source of sand can be found.

He said one of his prime reasons for introducing the issue was the appearance of letters in a Toronto newspaper written by concerned tourists. They were alarmed about the disappearance of the dunes.

Mr. Young said no letters have appeared regarding the preservation of jobs. The Liberal candidate said he thinks industry and ecology should work together and criticized the term "job blackmail" used in Mr. Henderson's remarks.

Mr. Young asserted if Midland is chosen as an alternate source of sand supply, the Lake Ontario Cement plant near Picton "in all likelihood will close".

He repeated his earlier proposal that the entire province should bear the cost of a transfer of quarrying operations.

If no alternate site can be found, then the cement company should be allowed to return to quarrying its original 16 acres at the Sandbanks. An area back of the dunes was suggested as a possible second site if it could be quarried without causing a sand sweep.

Mr. Young said the Lake Ontario Cement Company Ltd. could be faced with costs from one-quarter to one-half million dollars for the revamping of its sand source.

He urged a forgivable loan to offset this cost and said he is "very concerned" that by putting one extreme against another the situation might get out of hand.

Mr. Young said the history of negotiations between the Crown and the company indicates the government placed the company in its present position and not vice versa.

Bryan Beazer, New Democratic Party candidate for Prince Edward - Lennox said he is "very grateful" the Conservative government has seen fit to take action.

He observed this action year according to a nearby resident.

Mrs. Jean Barrett, West Lake, said during a question period on Saturday's field trip to the Sandbanks that trucks are now removing the sand as rapidly as possible.

She observed the company seems to have been removing sand in the past year than it has since its lease was granted by the Crown.

Views on Peace To Be Published

The Lester B. Pearson Peace Park is sponsoring a volume which will encompass a variety of views on peace in the world.

The anthology of peace, never before assembled, is to be made up of 500 to 1,500 word articles submitted by political and religious leaders as well as lay persons.

The Peace Park committee also requires a 3-4-inch glossy print photograph and a brief outline of each contributor's background to accompany the article.

The completed volume will be distributed at cost and will be made available to the public at the park as well as in libraries and book stores. It is hoped that such an anthology will become an important source of reference and that a final contribution be made.

Councillor Wants Mayor on Board

TRENTON (Staff) — Councillor Pete Aziz has served notice he will introduce a resolution at tonight's council meeting that may shuffle Trenton's representation on Quinte Planning Board.

The councillor said two weeks ago the town would be better served if it was represented by "the power and influence" of Mayor Duncan McDonald. However, for the mayor to serve someone must step down.

Mr. Aziz has said one individual representing Trenton "should take the hint and resign" to allow the mayor to assume a position on the Quinte Planning Board.

Pollution Abatement Is Inspected by MPP

A million dollars worth of pollution abatement equipment is going into the size of Domtar's Trenton plant and a representative of the government responsible for it all took a personal look at the operation Friday.

Dr. R. T. Potter, MPP f or Quinte riding and minister without portfolio in the Ontario government, toured the Trenton paper mill and heard about Domtar's pollution control measures from manager S. S. Hessian.

"We screamed so loudly about Domtar's pollution of the Trent and the B a y of Quinte, it's time we saw the other side of the story — what they're doing about it." said Dr. Potter of his tour of the plant.

The company is now digging out a holding lagoon across the road from its plant where effluent from the paper making process will be held.

When it is finished, Domtar's investment in pollution abatement will be $1 million. Eventually, by 1973, aerators will be installed to treat the effluent before it goes into the river, raising the company's expenditure to a total of $1.7 million.

The paper mill, one of Trenton's oldest industries, manufactures the paper that forms the middle, corrugated layer, of a corrugated cardboard box.

It uses hardwood logs for the purpose, 140 cords of them a day. The timber goes through a chipping mill and is then processed through digesters where it is mixed with chemical cooking liquor and heat processed for 15 minutes.

This procedure softens the chips and dissolves from the wood some of the lignin, the material that bonds the cellulose together to form a tree.

But in the process the cellulose fibres are impregnated with sulphur compounds. Some of this sulphur, some lignin and wood fibres form the effluent from the mill that is pumped into the Trent River.

In producing 130 tons of paper a day, the company employs 140 people and has an annual payroll of more than $1.5 million. It pays $51,000 a year to the town of Trenton in taxes and $288,600 a year for hydro, one-third of the annual total sold by Trenton PUC.

In an effort to meet Ontario Water Resources Commission requirements, the company is now contructing a giant lagoon, where the effluent from the mill will be pumped and held. It will be released from the holding lagoon in a regulated flow, geared to the river's capacity to carry it.

Now in operation at the plant is a pilot project in pollution abatement: a tank in which the effluent is aerated and another small lagoon where the aerated effluent is stored for regulated release. By aerating the effluent, it will be discharged into the river with the same oxygen content as the water in the river, Dr. Potter was told.

"Our effluent contains 50 solid parts (sulphonated lignin and fibres) per million," Mr. - Hessian told Dr. Potter. "The concentration is high, but the flow is well below OWRC requirements."

By 1973, the company hopes to have all the bugs worked out in the operation of the pilot project and will construct effluent treatment facilities for all the plant's waste.

The pilot project will determine, among other things, the proper size of the eventual permanent effluent treatment system.

Thirteen Agencies Benefit from Appeal

By COLIN BRUCE
Staff Reporter

A lot of people working and living in the city are asking, "Why should I give to the United Appeal? OR: "If I do give to the appeal, where do my dollars go?"

Throughout the 1month of October, the United Community Services will be conducting the appeal, to aid in sponsoring 13 agencies in Belleville that would not be here without the contributions of area residents.

Included in the list is the Belleville Family YMCA, Minor Sports Association, Belleville and District Association for Retarded Children, Canadian Arthritis and Rheumatism Society, Canadian National Institute for the Blind, Canadian Red Cross, Central Volunteer Bureau, Civic Action Committee, Community Counselling Service of Belleville and Distrit, Navy League of Canada, St. John Ambulance, United Community Services and the Victorian Order of Nurses.

"It would be extremely difficult not to benefit, in one way or another, with at least one of the agencies sponsored by the appeal," said one spokesman for the campaign.

"Several of the agencies provide services for the city that seldom reach the ears of the contributors," said Isidore Cooperman, director of United Community Services. "Agencies such as the Victorian Order of Nurses and the Central Volunteer Bureau are always ready to help anyone in the community."

There have been changes made in the campaign this year that organizers feel will "make for a more effective campaign."

Rather t han canvassing door - to - door, all contributions will be solicited at an individual place of business.

"A more efficient campaign can be conducted in this way for several reasons," said Mr. Cooperman. "It w ould take a great number of volunteers to completely cover the city, house to house, whereas, at the office or plant even residents are brought together and can be more easily canvassed.

Although residents of Trenton and some surrounding areas are not canvassed to contribute in their own areas, "if they work in the city they will be asked to make a contribution," said Mr. Cooperman, "They work here and receive the same benefits as city residents, and as we have previously said, derive benefits in their communities from Belleville-based organizations."

Another change in the public relations is the changing of the slogan "If you don't do it, it won't get done" to "If you do it, it will get done".

"It is a little more positive sounding and more appealing," said a spokesman for the campaign.

Each of the 13 agencies, under the administration of the United Community Services, in basic terms, submits a projected defict for the coming year.

"The agencies either work free of charge or simply do not charge enough to cover expenses (as in the case of the YMCA)," said Mr. Cooperman.

This deficit, or how much the agency is in the "red" is made up by the appeal.

"All of these groups need the help of the United Appeal and all who live in the area need these groups," said Mr. Cooperman.

There is a variety of ways that contributions can be made to the appeal including straightforward pledges of a fixed sum, or a weekly payroll deduction.

Spokesmen for the campaign could not disclose figures for the previous year's campaign but did say, "we still need more."

Instead of saying "Give at Least 10 per cent more," which had been the theme for last year, canvassers now say give your fair share, give what you can.

Work Anyone?

"Welfare kills incentive," as Ontario Liberal leader Robert Nixon so rightly said during his visit to Belleville last week.

Moreover, you can recognize how the welfare system has extended into virtually every corner of our social fabric when you look at the summer make-work programs for youth, to name one, not to mention the fact that some people find it easier and more profitable to live off welfare than to go out and get a job.

But perhaps no one has put it more vividly, this parasite something-for-nothing mentality, than the writer of a letter on this page today. In it you can see how the virtue of work, for one's own and family betterment, is lost on many people today. And not just among those of the younger generation who scorn both capitalism and the rat-race lifestyle which keeps our economy going, but those, as we have said, who also take advantage of the state's beneficence which in turn comes out of the pockets of their fellow man.

Yet, the economic health of the nation must be maintained, by those who still deem it necessary to develop their own capabilities to the utmost. We cannot do without the professional man or the worker who takes pride in his company and its products.

Maybe it is a rat-race, as they say, and it is disturbing that the mental and physical strain can be high. Maybe a man does not want to be a vegetable either, or a parasite; maybe some do, but they are the losers of this world.

A hotel chain is currently running a series of advertisements which is eloquent of this fast-paced North American lifestyle. One shows a businessman relaxing at a bar, in another he is ordering dinner. "After business in Peterborough, Ottawa, Barrie and Brantford . . . we'll take care of the rest," says the first ad; in the second the cities mentioned are London, Kitchener, Thunder Bay and Kenora. But not all in one day, we would hope, for even by air that would really be a rat-race.

In any event, without our businessmen, the executives who travel from place to place within Canada and overseas, and without our professional men, things would grind to a halt. Without their contribution we would have a depression the like of which we have never known. Similarly, without the work force in general, and their efforts, we could not go on either.

Success Story

You are an immigrant from Yugoslavia and work for a bakery in Hamilton. You have been here four years but decide to go and visit your mother in the homeland. You do so, boarding a ship in Montreal and disembarking in Europe from where you drive the 1971 Ford across Europe to Yugoslavia. Your wife and two small daughters meanwhile have flown from Canada to join you.

Well, all that is interesting enough in itself. A real success story one would say. Indeed it sounds just that for anyone to have come to Canada from Eastern Europe (where there are even fewer trees with money growing on them than there are here), and be able to return four years later with ones wife and two kids and a late-model car to boot.

Ranko Vukosavljevic, 30, is the handsome hero of this story but the rest of the tale has unhappy overtones. While driving to Leningrad to board the Alexander Pushkin for the return trip Vukosavljevic was involved in an auto accident in which a Soviet citizen was killed. The day he had set off for home his wife and children flew back to Canada and "all of a sudden," said Mrs. Vukosavljevic, "we didn't hear from him and didn't know what had happened."

Then came word from Intourist, the official Russian tourist agency, that Ranko was being held in Russia because of the accident near Kiev. Finally, Mrs. Vukosavljevic received a postcard from her husband saying he was with the ship in London en route home, but he made no mention of the accident, or that he had been held by police, or whether he still had his car.

A brother meanwhile had also been inquiring about him. As for Mrs. Vukosavljevic, "we just want him home," she said. "Susy and Joyce miss him and his employer had been phoning to ask if he is coming back to work."

We think this is a travel story with a difference. We are also intrigued by Mr. Vukosavljevic's evident affluence. How do you save that kind of money working for a bakery?

Farmer's Lament

Work—Where Does It Get You Today?

Editor,
The Intelligencer.

I moved here 21 years ago with a wife, a baby boy, and a crippled back, no money, and no credit. Luckily I had that amazing attribute of being able to get pleasure out of pure hard work and accomplishment, and so today my credit is good. In those first few years I was working for my family and me, and I could truly say, "My cup runneth over".

Now I'm getting old, I'm over 60 and I have to take it easier, so I just operate my farm and in my spare time I milk 20 cows twice a day, and care for 20 steers.

But now I don't seem to be working for me, wherever I look there are unemployed looking for benefits, and those on welfare looking for benefits. I try to hire these people to help me with the hay, but until my hay grows with a gold plating, I cannot compete with the income they receive for doing nothing.

All alone, in a morass of hay, with the sun beaming down, I straighten my crippled back, and picture these unfortunate people with nothing to do, sauntering into the beverage room for a nice cool drink, but bless their hearts, they keep the brewery people working, so that they in turn can buy my milk and beef.

Yes, I have learned to count my many blessings. I have one leg a little shorter than the other, but then the other is a little longer to make up for it, and as the day gets hotter, and the bales heavier, I can sit on a bale and think of Ottawa's travelling students, one wants the price of a meal, another complains that the bus he was in today for his sightseeing trip was an air conditioned one, poor lad finished the day famished, and just had to have the price of a "reefer" or a "fix".

Not so many years ago, when we were younger, how thankful we were to lie down in our uniforms, in the mud or snow of the Ardennes or Europe and snatch an hour's sleep but these young men complain that the mattresses in their hostels are not by Sealy. We would lie flat on our bellies in the snow, dodging bullets, and try to eat two or three hardtack biscuits for breakfast, but these young men complain that the coffee is not hot enough. I can't hire these able-bodied young men either, because our grand educational system has led them to believe that work is the most vulgar four letter word in our vocabulary.

Working for me, these people have to be fed, so I wipe the sweat out of my eyes, and go at the hay again, but the breeze has dropped now, and the sun is scorching and soon I have to pause again, and I think about the hundreds in Ottawa and Queen's Park who are sitting in air-conditioned offices, doing nothing, but because they won't admit it, my handout to them is known as a salary, instead of a benfit. The only people I can hire in ever-increasing numbers at ever increasing salaries with less per capita output are politicians, civil servants, and school boards, and although I'm paying them, none of them seems to have my interests in mind.

Now with OMSIP and OHSIP and several other sips, and that final big gulp for education, alas, my cup no longer runneth over. The clever people at top cannot seem to see that they are putting me against the wall, that before I drop dead in the harness, I too will have to stop being a producer and become a parasitic recipient.

And so my farm lies like a sleeping giant, at a moment's notice, with Mother Nature I can command it to produce larger crops than ever, but, alas, I'm getting old and a little cross-eyed too, which may be due to my age, but I rather think it's from taking in money with one hand and handing it to Mr. Benson with the other.

So, I will have to part with my little bit of heaven, and Mother Nature in her bribery will soon revert it to wilderness, a great loss to our economy, but a wonderful recreation spot for all the unfortunates, with nothing to do.

With all the proceeds from my farm and all its trappings, (again exclusive of Mr. Benson's share) my wife and I will take an extended world tour, a roundful only to keep enough for our return fares to Canada, "God's Country" where we will live in the lap of luxurious ease, on welfare, until we are old enough for the pension.

Maybe then, when the sun is beaming down, hot and dry, I too will have time to saunter in for a nice cool drink, but it will be because I have no one thing to do, for I can't live long enough to figure out how there can be nothing to do in a young country like Canada which has the greatest potential in the world, but I will die with satisfaction of knowing that at least four of my past and present employees namely Mr. Ben-

To Pay Other Mothers More

The Ottawa Journal

The old orthodoxy was that welfare programs such as family allowances should be universal. Selectivity was an administrative nightmare, it was said. The income tax man would catch up with those for whom the monthly family allowance cheques fit. 9th and 10th for each child could not really be justified.

Now a new enlightenment has set in and bureaucratic wisdom has changed. Selectivity becomes a good word. "More efficient use of the dollar by channelling more money into the hands of lower and middle income families," as Health and Welfare Minister Munro's information men put it, with the same omniscience as their predecessors pretended to in arguing for universality.

Certainly it was time to reform the family allowance program which started in 1945 and has been only tinkered with since. The consumer price index has risen by more than 100 per cent and whatever effectiveness family allowances had as an income supplement has been eroded.

The Commons will support the principle in the bill now before the Commons that family allowances be on a sliding scale based upon the income of recipients. It is fair that the bill does not repeat the mistake of last year's white paper on income security which had proposed that family allowances be cut whenever income was above $10,000, no matter how many children in a family. A household where there are five or six children and an income of $10,000 is more deserving of family allowances than one with one or two children and an income of $20,000.

The Government realizes that the country can't afford to raise family allowances for everyone. Much is made of taking back bonuses away from well-to-do families in order to increase the benefits payable to low-income families.

But that is not the whole story. The new plan is going to put about $150 million more in its first year than the old universal system. In all, the country will be paying out some $800 million in family allowances during the first year of the new scheme's operation.

That is redistribution of income on a large scale. But doubling family allowance cheques represents only a little levelling of the valley between rich and poor. The real challenge is to provide greater opportunities for more Canadians to prosper on their own land. The very need for larger family allowances and thy growth of the unemployment rolls show how far that challenge is from being met.

Political Scene

Handshaking: How It Is Done in the 70s

Queen's Park
By DON O'HEARN

In the 60s handshaking became a nigh political art.

Originally started by Leslie Frost, who turned old-time political meetings into "receptions" by having long receiving sessions before and after the speeches, laying on of hands developed into an essential part of electioneering.

In the current campaign it is thriving. And if you watch for it you might note this:

The basic technique is to grip, smile, ungrip and not get stuck. The point is to appear warm and interested but keep them moving, moving.

A slight salutation is called for, and almost always this is "how are you?" But while saying this you are already unslipping the palm and offering it to the next in line.

If you do get stuck you give a clap on the back and say "Great," "Wonderful," "Too bad," "Get in touch with me," "You don't say" or whatever else may be appropriate—and quick.

The Conservatives are using the technique most in the campaign.

But the Liberals seem to be best with it.

Premier Davis is coming across with a fairly good "how are you?" But with his smile he tends to use an on and off technique and doesn't peak to the Nixon candlepower.

New Democratic Party leader Stephen Lewis comes across low key, something mildly between a hello and a blessing. Of course, the NDP is more solemn.

If you happen to be at a leader's meeting watch the techniques, looking for the finer points, as you watch line play in football. You might even catch another "Winternoyer."

In 1963 John Wintermeyer was leading the Liberals and giving it the BIG effort.

John, of course, gave everything the big effort but he really was too much of a gentleman for politics, and particularly for handshaking. He was always getting stuck. He didn't have that little touch of pleasant rudeness you need to keep a line moving.

He was great on the hello. He really bounced out the "How Are You?". Three-great separate words: HOW! . . . ARE! . . . YOU!!! But he was always getting stuck, and would be thinking of the next hand while presumably listening to first.

This night in Oshawa he got really stuck. This elderly gentleman started: "Oh Mr. Wintermeyer, I hope you can help me. I hope you can help me."

Mr. Wintermeyer, really not listening, beamed and nodded, everything was good cheer—while looking out the corner of his eye at the line.

"I have just got out of the hospital," the man continued. "My wife died while I was in there. I have just lost my pension, my employer has gone bankrupt and now I have to take tests for cancer, and the medical bills . . ."

There was a pause for breath, the Liberal leader caught the break and he was on with his regular second line. Clapping the man on the back he said: "How are you? . . . FOR . . . YOU!!!"

Fortunately the man's other ailments included deafness. He moved on gratefully.

Apartments Close To Downtown Area Means Boost For A City's Core

Peterborough Examiner

Conditional approval by the planning board of the construction of three highrise apartment buildings within blocks of the downtown business section of Peterborough should be applauded.

Apartments close to downtown can benefit any city, its people and its business community.

Peterborough citizens have long been watching with quiet desperation the stagnation — if not deterioration — of the city's downtown section.

Many suggestions have been made to stop the trend, ranging from beautification schemes to tax concessions. But none of the suggestions pointed out that what downtown needs to keep it alive is people. Where there's people there is business, and where there's business there's no stagnation or deterioration.

It's people that bring in people. People create businesses and business forms the foundation of progress.

It isn't accidental that the downtown sections of so many North American cities have become like ghost towns. People moved to the suburbs and did not come back downtown to shop.

On the other hand, some cities were fortunate or wise enough not only to preserve but to enrich their downtown areas by encouraging the construction of apartment buildings.

Toronto is a good example. Fifteen years ago, downtown Toronto was beginning to show the signs of going the way of other large North American cities.

Then they began to build apartments buildings. They are beautiful, modern, clean and offer many advantages like underground parking facilities and greenery in place of shabby, old houses. They literally transformed the appearance of the city. They greatly contributed to the fact that what used to be called Hogtown has become a modern, internationally - recognized metropolis.

But those downtown apartment buildings more than just change the appearance of the city: They offered living accommodation for thousands and thousands of people.

Today, downtown Toronto's thoroughfares are full of people — and stores, department stores, restaurants, theatres and many other attractions, all doing a thriving business.

What Peterborough's downtown needs is the same thing people. As soon as there's more apartment buildings there will be more people and more business — and we will have an entirely different city centre.

It's time for a change.

ANAF News

It will be a big weekend for two groups of members this coming Thanksgiving when the Hasty-P Regimental Association holds its annual reunion in Peterborough and the 32nd Battery Association will hold theirs in Pembroke. It is hoped they have as fine weather as this past weekend.

The entertainment chairman Jack Fitzgerald, has arranged a special treat for those lovers of the wild music of the "ladies from hell", as the Fritzes called them. At next Friday's social evening the Duke of Edinburgh Unit Pipe Band will play a few choice selections and Wally Sawyer will again be at the piano with his song and dance music.

Chairman of the sick committee, Howard Calnan, had sad news for the members last Friday when he had to report the passing of a very well known and popular member, Bob Scott. He had been in poor health for some time. President John Browning and all members join in extending sincere sympathy to his bereaved family. He will be missed by all. The hospital list grows longer also with the following comrades in the Belleville General Hospital: C. Marriot, room 525; T. Adams, 316; A. Tuck, room 604; K. Hollands, room 701; J. Clarke, room 407; C. Kellar, room 716 and W. Shepherd still in intensive care. Cdr. Bob Mills is in Douglas 236, Kingston General Hospital. The chairman or his committee have visited all of them.

First vice - president W. J. Ford represented the president at the Provincial meeting held in Unit 227, London this past weekend. The president was unable to attend through previous commitments. A report on anything pertinent to the members will be made next week.

Night Classes At Madoc Oct. 5

Registration for night classes at Centre Hastings Secondary School in Madoc will be held Tuesday, Oct. 5, at 7 p.m.

Among the variety of courses offered are bookkeeping, drafting, sewing, physical fitness, art, electricity, ceramics, welding, small engines and upholstering.

Station Wagon Immobilized

TWEED (Special) — There is nothing more immobile than an automobile without a distributor and radiator.

That was learned over the weekend by Don Woods, Tweed furniture oil distributor who uses a McGowan Street property to park his vehicles.

Mr. Woods returned to his parking lot this morning to find that both the radiator and distributor had been taken from his 1966 model station wagon.

Two other break-ins were reported at Tweed over the weekend.

The Rashotte Lumber Company on Metcalfe Street and the Ontario Hydro garage on James Street were entered but nothing was reported taken.

Counterfeit U. S. Bills Circulating

The counterfeit and forgery section of the provincial police anti - rackets branch, has warned a new series of counterfeit American currency is being passed throughout Ontario.

Unlike the former series circulated in July of this year, the current $10 bills are of much improved quality and are more deceptive.

The serial numbers are: B 41947609 B, of front plate B36, and B 41947608 B and B 71947665 B of back plate 67.

The public is advised that if they should suspect they have received a counterfeit note, they should not return it to the passer, even if he or she offers to exchange it for a genuine note and delay the passer on any excuse, if possible.

Police should be alerted immediately and a good mental description of the passer and the licence number of his car, should be obtained.

Anyone receiving a counterfeit note is warned that if it is passed by them in an attempt to get rid of it, the sentence for knowingly passing a counterfeit note is up to 14 years in prison.

Two Charged

At 6:30 a.m. Saturday city police stopped two young men in the vicinity of North Front Street and Moira Street. In their possession was a leather shaving case containing a P .38 automatic pistol, a box of ammunition and two clips.

Charged with vagrancy and carrying a weapon offensive to the public are Randolph Haggarty, 17, of 61 Donald Street, and John Strand, 17, of 76 St. Charles Street.

New Ballot Makes Voting Easier

Returning Officer for Quinte Riding Gerald Joyce, right, and special poll enumerator Charles Smith, sort out the government's supply of special watermarked ballot paper and samples of the all new, white on black, printed ballots. The new ballots are designed to eliminate as many spoiled votes as possible. In 1967, of the more than 21,000 ballots cast in Quinte riding, only 89 were spoiled.

Truck Climbs Clerk's Porch

TWEED (Special) — Forced to swerve when another vehicle emerged from a side street, a half-ton truck driven by a 16-year-old Tweed youth damaged the front steps of a Bridge Street home and snapped off a telephone pole before it could be brought to a stop.

Tweed Police Chief Bill Carroll said the truck driven by Clark McDonald, was west bound when it went out of control and slammed into the front steps at the home of village clerk Garrett Morton.

The truck then struck the telephone pole and veered 120 feet down Metcalfe Street.

The driver, his sister Heather, and Peggy Palmateer, both passengers in the trek, all escaped injury.

Damage to the truck amounted to over $600, and over $100 to both the porch and telephone pole.

LUCKY THIRTEEN

IF YOU DO YOUR BIT the thirteen agencies who combine in the Belleville and District United Appeal are going to be lucky. They are going to receive enough money to carry on.

IF THEY ARE VERY LUCKY they may even get enough money to give better service or carry out much needed improvements.

BUT THIS WILL DEPEND ON YOU.

THE THIRTEEN AGENCIES don't trouble you thirteen times by having thirteen campaigns. They only have one. And this is it.

GIVE THEM A FAIR SHARE. But remember, each dollar you give has to be split thirteen ways - - - that's only seven cents apiece.

DON'T LET THEM BE AN UNLUCKY THIRTEEN.

Give generously - - - at work - - - this year.

If you do it — it will get done!

Hospital Administrator Speaks at First Graduation of Edith Cavell Nursing School

"The need to evaluate the social services is urgent, not only because of the vast sums of money that are being spent on them, but the question arises as to whether they are meeting the need," said Philip Rickard, administrator, Belleville General Hospital and secretary to the board of directors, Edith Cavell Regional School of Nursing in his address to the 32 first students who graduated from this school, on Saturday.

Mr. Rickard whose address dealt with the need to evaluate performance in any field and the difficulties of evaluating it in the social services where there is no profit criterion as in industry, stressed that in health care what is important is the quality of care. He commended that while no successful method has been devised to measure this, he was confident that this will be achieved shortly.

He remarked that standards and penalties for failing to meet these standards have been in vogue since the earliest times, though the approach was somewhat negative. For example, he said that according to the first code of medical ethics drawn up by King Hammurabi of Babylonia, a doctor was to be paid for various services but his hands would be cut off if he killed the patient or destroyed his eyesight.

He said that "when we have succeeded in scientifically measuring the quality of patient care it will be monitored daily by the nurse." He expressed the opinion that in hospitals there is a need only for nurses and super-nurses and that the traditional hierarchy of assistant head nurse, head nurse and supervisor is archaic. He pointed out that often the best bed-side nurses are promoted into administrative roles where their talents are not fully used. He said that in hospitals of the future it will be the duty of the super-nurse to make a daily record of the quality of patient care.

Referring to the students' desire for evaluation, Mr. Rickard advised them to preserve this desire, because they were entering a profession which for the first time this century has become competitive. He suggested two criteria for self evaluation, namely knowledge and compassion.

He pointed out that new knowledge will continue to burst upon us to such an extent that all professions will require re-certification every five years.

Defining compassion as the transmission of concern combined with a desire to alleviate the cause of the concern, he said that it is a characteristic of the best nurses.

He concluded by advising them to be aware of their weaknesses and try to improve and also to be equally aware of their strengths.

Later the valedictory address was given by Miss Mary Packard. She reminded her fellow-graduates that what was three years ago a dream, had now become a reality, and that they must accept the responsibilities that go with the privileges of being a nurse.

She pointed out that being the first has never been easy because one is constantly called upon to prove oneself. She said that being the first students of the Edith Cavell Regional School of Nursing had drawn the class closer together. She concluded by thanking their teachers, families and friends for their help and guidance.

At the end of the graduation exercises, Miss Pamela Gonu, another graduate, announced the dedication of the school's first year book to Mrs. M. Flindall, principal.

In the evening a reception was held in the Trent Room at the Four Seasons Hotel for the graduating class and their friends, followed by a dinner and dance in the Park Room.

An Eventful Day

Prior to the first annual graduation exercises of the Edith Cavell Regional School of Nursing held at Centennial Secondary School on Saturday, the graduating students line up for the processional. Giving them last-minute instructions is Mrs. M. McCoy, a teacher at the school.

Good Manners Always Show Thoughtfulness

By DORIS CLARK

Manners! They mean so much when it comes to keeping our human relationships well oiled.

I have a letter from a Sister, resident of a convent, asking for a resource to give the ladies guidance in how to sit, stand, mediate the voice when speaking. They need help in knowing how to sit and act at table, how to wait until one person is finished speaking before barging in with an answer.

These maladies are universal. No use poo-pooing small courtesies by calling them affectations. The way you walk, stand, sit, tells others what you think of yourself.

And your ability to refrain from that annoying practise of interrupting someone who is speaking gives a pretty good hint of your maturity and thoughtfulness — whatever age you are and wherever you live.

Dear Doris: I have just come through the harrowing experience of the carnival-like atmosphere of my father's death and funeral.

There was no drunkenness, but I was looking forward to a peaceful reunion with the members of my immediate family and their children. But the married sons and daughters and fiances began arriving, ready to be fed upon their arrival. I had no worry about the food supply as some of them brought a lot of food with them, but when we are exhausted from the care of my father and rushing up to the hospital to see him and then trying to get up to the funeral parlor during visiting hours, it is almost beyond human endurance!

I only hope, for the sake of others, that people will realize this is no time for cousins and boy friends to have a big, happy reunion. A lot of them would say this is a rare occasion to see each other but what difference does that make? I've got lots of relatives I've never seen and if I must see them this is certainly no time to do so.

Perhaps some day it may be a standing joke that attendance at weddings and funerals is to be by invitation only! The honors and respect paid to my father was far outweighed, and sort of pushed aside, by all of us in this carnival-like atmosphere.

Thank you for listening, Doris! Other people must have had this problem and I think the more it is discussed the sooner all these boundary relatives will realize that they are only adding distress to the occasion; and that in time it will be a case of 'this just isn't done' and the family can then enjoy the peace and quiet and dignity of a family death. — Distressed

DEar Distressed: I heartily agree that the occasion of a death and funeral is not carnival material — much as it may take on some of the features of a family reunion.

Probably the relatives thought they were being all-provident in bringing supplies of food. They could hardly have conceived the depth of your fatigue when they permitted the assembly to assume the proportions of a convention.

Perhaps your letter will remind others who face a similar family sorrow to shew consideration to the all-but-collapsing nearest and dearest; as well as stressing the unseemliness of abandoned gaiety!

Dear Doris: I am in love with this guy I went with for seven months until we broke up. I tried to forget him and go out with other guys but it doesn't help. We are both 20 years old.

Now I am going out with the guy I love but I want to know if he loves me. What should I do? Please don't tell me to forget him and go out with other guys, I can't. — How Do I know He Loves Me?

Dear How: Don't-ask. Wait until he tells you. But I'd say the fact that you are back together again is a good sign, wouldn't you? Send 20 cents and a stamped, self-addressed envelope for a copy of my leaflet What Is Love?

Kitchen Tested Recipes

Mary Samples Shepherd's Pie

By MARY MOORE

Some of you will remember reading the Jolley Roast Leg of Lamb I recommended so highly. At the time of serving it here we had some left over. My mind jumped to Shepherd's Pie. My testing program was so full that I asked my secretary Maureen to make one. She complained but said she had never made one so I would have to give her all details. She made it with flying colors and raved over to my house with a hot sample.

NOTE: If you want to use ground or chopped leftover

SHEPHERD'S PIE
(Serves 4 or 5)

1 cup diced carrots
1 cup Spanish onion chopped
3 cups mashed potatoes (packed)
1 large egg beaten
¼ cup milk (preferably warm)
2-3 cup canned peas drained (optional)
2 cups minced or ground lamb or beef (packed)
1½ tsps. salt — divided
¼ tsp. pepper
1 cup leftover gravy (see below)
1 tsp. Worcestershire sauce
¾ cup catsup

Cook the potatoes first in one pot. Cook the carrots and onions together until tender.

Drain and mash potatoes and measure. Season them with 1 tsp. of the salt and beat in the egg and milk until perfectly smooth. Maureen used her hand electric beater.

To the cooked drained carrots and onion add the peas (if used), meat, remaining ½ tsp. salt, pepper, gravy, Worcestershire sauce and catsup. (NOTE: If you do not have enough gravy make it up to 1 cup by adding hot water. If you do not have any gravy use 2 tsps. Bovril in 1 cup hot water.)

Butter sides and bottom of 2-qt. casserole and spoon in alternating layers of the mashed potato and meat mixtures starting and finishing with potato. Peak on top attractively with fork tines and actively with fork tines and sprinkle lightly with paprika (or grated cheese if desired).

Bake at 400 deg. Fahr. 25 min. until thoroughly heated through and tinged with gold.

Lyon – Turner

Holy Rosary Church, was the setting for the September 18 wedding of Margaret Frances Turner, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Houghton Turner and of David Rockwell Lyon, son of Mr. and Mrs. Harold Lyon. Father Warren Sullivan conducted the ceremony while Tibor Csaszar provided organ music for the occasion.

Given in marriage by her father, the bride wore a floor length empire style gown of silk crepe with small appliques of crocheted daisies. It featured long puffed sleeves, a small stand-up collar and a chapel length train. Her bouquet was a cascade of white daisies and red roses laced with green feather fern.

The matron of honor Mrs. Douglas Tall, the bride's sister wore a formal empire style gown of printed rose cotton overlaid with chiffon. She wore a matching floral head piece and carried a bouquet of light pink carnations and white daisies.

The best man was Richard Lyon, the bridegroom's brother while the ushers were Wayne Hopkins, the bride-cousin and Doug Hall, the bride's brother - in - law.

The reception was held at Gilead Hall, RR 1, Corbyville. The bride's mother chose an emerald green wool crepe dress with a beige wool hat for the occasion. The hat was trimmed in green. She wore a gardenia corsage.

For the wedding trip to New York State and Eastern Quebec, the bride changed to a beige linen dress with brown accessories and a corsage of red roses.

Upon return the couple will reside at 19 Elmer Street, Belleville.

Farmers' Wives Scarce

BONN (Reuter) — West German farmers have a problem which strikes at their hearts — they are finding it increasingly difficult to get wives.

Country girls, it seems, are more attracted to the cities, and there is a dearth of city girls prepared to settle for an agricultural life.

The situation is particularly serious in regions offering jobs in nearby industrial areas.

In the southwestern state of Baden - Wuerttemberg, an alarmed farmers' association has estimated that in the near future some 10,000 young men on the land will have scarcely a chance of finding suitable marriage partners because girls are becoming scarcer in the villages.

Farmers' associations in various regions have launched a campaign aimed at polishing up the negative image of the farmer's wife which is still stubbornly held by many in the cities.

They are also offering special courses to city girls, who have become friendly with farmers' sons, to make country life more attractive to them while familiarizing them with what it entails for women.

POINTS FOR PARENTS

BY MARY BRYSON

If a child's behavior goes over the limits, punishment may be needed to help him remember the next time. However, be sure he always knows why he is being punished. Even a rebellious teen-ager will be grateful for your control — if he feels you are being fair.

Policewomen Not Really Rare

EDMONTON (CP) — Policewomen may be something of a novelty to the public, but they aren't really rare, says Sgt. Eileen Finlayson of the Edmonton police department.

Fifteen years ago, when she joined the force, there were three women; today there are 17. When she joined the women did little investigative work, acting mostly as well-trained social workers.

Now, they do park patrol with male officers, work as narcotics squad members, investigate frauds and work in several other areas along with the men.

Sgt. Finlayson was the first woman sergeant on Edmonton's force, taking the exam six years ago when it was first open to women. She now also has passed her staff sergeant exam and is waiting on the promotion list.

She looks after all assignments for women on the force, although they work directly under the head of the detail they are assigned to, and she also is in charge of the matrons at the city jail.

Women hoping to enter the force must have several basic characteristics.

"They must like working with, and for, the public. I can't stress strongly enough how much they must enjoy and be able to work with people.

"I also think that a girl should have a balanced nature, with a good sense of humor. The police force is no place for a moody, temperamental, spoiled brat."

Being a policewoman also means having to submit to, and almost enjoy, discipline, she said.

Birds Beat Blue

BALTIMORE (AP) — Baltimore Orioles talked about heroes while the bitterly disappointed Oakland Athletics talked about an umpire after the defending champion Orioles beat the Athletics 5-3 in the opener of their best-of-five American League playoff series.

The teams go at it again today in the second game of the set with right hander Jim (Catfish) Hunter hoping to succeed where ace Vida Blue failed and gain an even break for the Athletics before the series switches to the West Coast Tuesday. Left-hander Mike Cuellar, one of four Baltimore pitchers who won at least 20 games this season, pitches for the Orioles.

Despite the key opening-game victory, Baltimore manager Earl Weaver wouldn't even talk about the possibility of the Orioles sweeping the AL playoffs for the third straight year.

"We have one and they don't have any," Weaver said when asked if he anticipated a sweep. "We'll be at the ball park today to play just that game. So will they. It doesn't help to think about a sweep one way or the other."

Weaver preferred to talk about the clutch performance of his players, who rallied for four runs in the seventh inning off Blue, the Athletics sensational 24-game winner.

"We battled Blue," said Weaver. "We kept our bat on the ball. We conditioned ourselves to step away from the pitch up and around the shoulders. We figured eventually he would slow down and the ball would stop jumping."

The ball stopped jumping for Blue in the seventh inning as Frank Robinson led off with a walk. After Boog Powell struck out, Brooks Robinson singled Frank to second. Blue appeared to have worked out of the jam when he got hot-hitting Andy Etchebarren to fly out as Frank Robinson took third.

Then came the first of Weaver's heroes. Light-hitting Mark Belanger ripped a single to centre, scoring Frank Robinson, Brooks taking second.

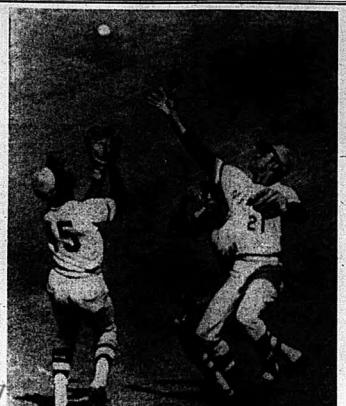
"That was the key to the inning," noted Oakland manager Dick Williams. "That put them behind only 3-2."

Now, Weaver turned to the bench that helped him win the AL East flag title by 12 games, sending up pinch hitter Curt Motton.

Motton slashed a 3-1 pitch from Blue into the left field corner for a double, scoring Brooks Robinson and tying the score 3-3.

At this point the Athletics got hot under the collar. They thought plate umpire Hank Soar made some dubious calls and that Motton should have been a strikeout victim.

"He (Soar) called what he saw to the best of his ability, I guess," commented Blue after the game. "Everybody makes mistakes. I'm not saying he made mistakes, but the umpiring wasn't the best."



Williams was even more specific.

"We thought he missed two strikes," he said. "It's our prerogative to think that way. But we're not calling them. There were some debatable pitches."

After Motton's game - tying hit, pitcher Jim Palmer ran for Morton. Paul Blair, 9-for-11 against Blue this season, then doubled down the left field line, scoring Belanger and Palmer for a 3-3 lead.

Trio Tries in Vain

Robertson Finds Range After Six Long Weeks

SAN FRANCISCO (AP) — Sunday was the day of the rabbit ball for Pittsburgh Pirates.

The Pirates tormented San Francisco Giants with 15 hits, including Bob Robertson's three home runs, to secure a 9-4 victory and deadlock the National League playoffs at one game apiece.

The best-of-five series continues Tuesday with game No. 3 in Pittsburgh.

"That guy on first base (Robertson) was nasty," said Charlie Fox, San Francisco manager Danny Murtaugh.

The brawny slugger hadn't reached the fences in six weeks. After hitting a double in the second inning, he went to work with circuit shots in the fourth, seventh and ninth.

"Six weeks without a homer is too long for a man with his power," said Murtaugh.

Robertson, himself, was just happy to be playing—let alone turn out to be the hitting hero. He once sat out a season with a kidney ailment.

While Robertson turned on the power, reliever Bob Miller helped to turn off the Giants with four innings of lofty work. His performance was almost lost in Robertson's herculean performance.

The right-hander had some tough work to do when starter Dock Ellis, the Pirates' 19 game winner, got in hot water in the sixth inning. The first two batters reached base, one hit by a pitch and the other with a base hit, and Miller came in to protect a 4-2 lead.

Miller got pinch-hitter Frank Duffy to bunt foul for a third strike, but slipped deeper into quicksand when he walked Ken Henderson to load the bases. Then he struck out Tito Fuentes and got out of the jam when Willie Mays lined to Roberto Clemente in right.

Miller served up three straight hits to open the ninth, including Willie May's two-run homer, before Dave Giusti came in to get the side out.

Along with the home runs by Robertson and Mays, Gene Clines also belted one in the fifth to give the Pirates and Giants a total of seven for the two-game set at Candlestick Park.

The Pirates' victory was the first ever in a playoff and only third here in the last 14 games.

In Saturday's game, Fuentes and Willie McCovey slugged a pair of two-run homers in a sudden explosion of San Francisco power that carried the Giants to victory.

Gaylord Perry, who pitched a nine-hitter for the Giants, fell behind early when a misjudged fly ball and an error by McCovey helped the Pirates to a pair of runs in the third inning. San Francisco got one back in its half of the inning on a double by Ken Henderson but Pirate starter Steve Blass was in control until the fifth.

Blass, who averaged only five strikeouts a game during the regular season, struck out nine Giants over the first four innings, setting a NL playoff record.

But in the Giant fifth, Chris Speier led off with a single and after a sacrifice and an infield out, Fuentes lofted a shot over the right-field wall to put San Francisco ahead. Fuentes, who had struck out his first two times up, homered only four times during the regular season.

Blass, shaken by the blow, walked Mays on four pitches to bring up McCovey, who unloaded a shot that tore into the upper deck in right field.

Winner Choosy

But the 27-year-old son of a French jeweler let it be known immediately that the United States Grand Prix was about the fourth choice on his list of places where he wanted to break into the winner's circle.

"I'd much rather have won the French, German or Monacan Grand Prix," said Cevert.

"But the U.S. Grand Prix . . . well, it's the most money paid on the Formula 1 circuit and that is good, very good."

Cevert, who joined world champion Jackie Stewart's Tyrell Ford team only last year, collected $50,000 from the $207,000 purse.

The Frenchman's first Formula 1 victory actually was an easy one. He started the race in fifth place among 29 starters, but by the end of half a dozen laps around the Glen's new 3.377-mile circuit, he was pushing Stewart for the lead.

Stewart, who already had clinched his second world driving title with six triumphs in 10 starts, suddenly slowed as the leaders made their 16th trip around, and Cevert bolted ahead—never to be overtaken.

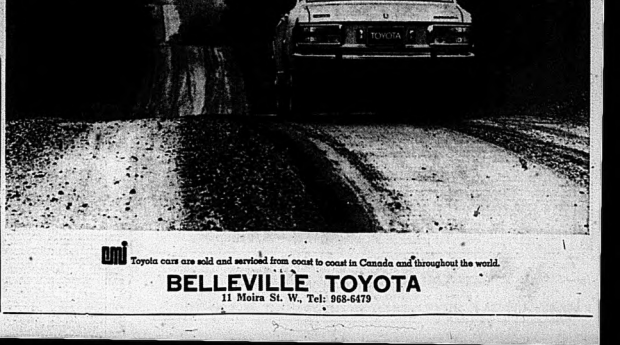
On a long lonely road it's nice to know what's behind you.

We know the thoughts that must be racing through your mind about buying an imported car.

After all, you've probably heard all sorts of truths and half truths.

We'd like to tell you about ourselves first hand. What's really behind you when you buy a Toyota.

First of all, the people at Toyota know and understand what it takes to make a great car. If you've seen any Toyota car, you'd know what we're talking about. The little things mean as much as the big things.



And the same pride we've taken in building Toyotas carries over to our parts and service.

It must be working, because now Toyota dealers stretch across the length and breadth of Canada and the list continues growing. Growing because Toyota is now the fourth largest car maker in the world, because of the quality of our cars and because of accessible, dependable service.

Jet Interceptor

Defensive back Tim Anderson of Toronto Argonauts shoots high in the air to intercept a pass from Paul Brothers Sunday in helping his team to a 12-3 victory over Ottawa Rough Riders. Brothers got into the game just long enough to throw two interceptions and an incompletion in three tries. Rider flanker Billy Cooper (23) was the intended receiver on this one. Argos Only Win One Place

OTTAWA (CP) — Ottawa Rough Riders beat Toronto Argonauts everywhere but on the scoreboard Sunday, losing 12-3 before 21,868 disappointed Eastern Football Conference fans.

The trouble was the Riders ran all but four of their plays from outside the Toronto 40-yard line and never appeared to threaten at any time during the game.

"We were lucky to win, we were so inept," Toronto coach Leo Cahill said while coach Jack Gotta of Ottawa complained:

"Our throwers aren't throwing and our catchers aren't catching."

The players dotted their dressing room benches like mute lumps—hands and heads hanging—and the fans showed their general feelings by a series of boos for Ottawa quarterback Rick Cassata in the second half.

Cassata had been spared this until last week when Ottawa put Gary Wood on waivers and brought in former B.C. Lion Paul Brothers.

Cassata threw one interception and Brothers two in the brief time he was allowed to lead what attack Ottawa had.

Two Ottawa points came on a fine defensive move by lineman Wayne Smith when he nailed Toronto quarterback Joe Theismann in his own end zone for a safety touch in the first quarter. Marcel De Leeuw punted 43 yards for a single.

The only real attack the Argos showed ended in a 23-yard touchdown pass to Mike Eben in the first quarter. Their other points came from Ivan MacMillan with a convert and a 38-yard field goal and from Zenon Andrusyshyn with two point singles.

The Riders had 18 first downs to nine for the Argos and a net offence of 271 yards compared with 200 for Toronto.

The one really bright spot for Toronto, perhaps of the game, was Theismann who completed 12 of 18 passes for 118 yards and ran 12 times for 62 yards.

But here too the Riders were on top with Cassata and Brothers good on 12 of 30 pass attempts for 161 yards.

Brothers tried three passes, completed none and had two intercepted.

On the ground the Riders netted 119 yards to 110 for the Argonauts, Dennis Duncan outrushing Theismann with 77 yards on 18 carries.

This all led Cahill to observe that Theismann "definitely was the difference for us today."

"I don't want to take it away from their defence, but we were lucky to win" he said. "We had absolutely no consistency—that's all there is about it."

The Argonauts, who lead the conference with nine wins in 11 games, meet the Alouettes in Montreal Oct. 10. The Riders, who have only three wins in 11 games are at home to British Columbia Oct. 9.

Ticats Trounced

Western Visitors Feel Unwelcome

BY THE CANADIAN PRESS

Familiar turf and the pleasant cheers of home had their effect during the weekend in the Canadian Football League, with visiting teams able to score just three points in three games.

Calgary Stampeders clinched a playoff spot by trouncing Hamilton Tiger-Cats 17-1 Sunday in an interlocking game.

The win over the Eastern Conference team left Calgary six points up on Saskatchewan Roughriders, who were thumped 35-2 by Winnipeg Blue Bombers Saturday night.

British Columbia Lions maintained their third-place tie with Winnipeg at 11 points each, one back of Saskatchewan, by dispensing with Montreal Alouettes 28-0 in another interlocking game.

In Calgary, the Stampeder defence gave up a measly 117 yards to Hamilton while hauling down quarterback Joe Zuger a half-dozen times as he searched in vain for an open receiver.

The Tiger-Cat ground game accounted for an insignificant 52 yards, including a 27-yard ramble by Bob Anderson.

Quarterback Jim Lindsey, filling in for injured veteran Jerry Keeling, split the gains between rushing and passing but went to the air for two touchdowns. He hit Rudy Linterman, who suffered a knee injury later in the game, from seven yards out, then put the ball into the hands of Herm Harrison for the other six points.

In Vancouver, the B.C. defenders kept a close guard on Montreal receivers and picked off five passes, two of which the offence turned into touchdowns.

Wayne Matherne intercepted three times and one of his catches set up rookie quarterback Don Moorhead for a four-yard scoring run in the final quarter.

Moorhead, who went all the way before 25,138 fans, passed to Larry Highbaugh and Jim Young for two of the other six-pointers.

Fullback Jim Evenson, who carried for 103 yards Saturday to become the first Canadian Football League player this season with more than 1,000 yards rushing, balled his way for the other touchdown.

Evenson, with 1,011 yards in 11 games, traded blows with former team-mate Bill Whisler and both were ejected from the game.

Ken Phillips completed the B.C. scoring with two converts and a single while Ted Gerela got another single.

In Winnipeg, the Blue Bomber defence broke a pattern of inconsistent play to go with another solid offensive showing by the club.

Winnipeg coach Jim Spavital said "the over-all performance was the best we've had all season. But Saskatchewan wasn't playing up to their capabilities, mentally."

Quarterback Don Jonas threw four touchdown passes, two each to Jim Thorpe and Paul Williams.

His 25 passes for a total of 360 yards set single-season club records of 207 completions and 3,437 yards passing.

Previous marks were held by Jack Jacobs who in 1951 threw 204 times for 3,248 yards.

Running back Mack Herron got the other Winnipeg touchdown on a one-yard plunge.

Jonas converted all six-pointers to push his season points-total to 100.

Saskatchewan scored on wide field goal attempts, one in each of the first two quarters.

Roughriders' fullback George Reed fumbled three times and lost each as he carried the bulk of the Roughriders ground game.

Winnipeg piled up 23 first downs to 13 by Saskatchewan and had a net offence of 473 yards compared with 264 yards.

Satchel Paige Reveals Secret : He's 65

Ol' Satch, whose age has long been a mystery, revealed Sunday night at a testimonial dinner in his honor that he was born July 7, 1906.

That means Paige, who played baseball 42 years, was 42 years old when Bill Veeck brought him to the major leagues for the first time, to pitch for Cleveland Indiana in 1948.

Paige won six and lost one in Cleveland's 1948 American League pennant-winning drive. Later, he was in the majors with the old St. Louis Browns in 1951-53 and with Kansas City Athletics in 1965, at age 59. Most of his career was spent in the Negro leagues.

Abel Passes Test

By THE CANADIAN PRESS

Sid Abel came through his first test as coach of St. Louis Blues with flying colors Saturday night—he won the applause of St. Louis fans when the Blues beat Toronto Maple Leafs 3-1 in a National Hockey League exhibition game.

Abel, who joined the Blues this summer after coming out on the short end of a power struggle in the Detroit Red Wing organization last season, has his work cut out for him in St. Louis.

"The pressure is on Sid, no doubt about it," said a St. Louis player who preferred to go anonymous. "Because this city has always had a winner."

"He steps in and takes over from Scotty Bowman, who made us a winner, and if we start losing watch out," the player said. "The people here know enough about hockey to boo as loudly as they cheer."

For Abel, who was chief of the Red Wings before he left as general manager, victory was sweeter because of a pair of weekend losses by Montreal Canadiens, coached by Bowman.

The defending Stanley Cup champions lost 5-3 to the Bruins at Boston Saturday and 3-1 to the Flyers at Philadelphia Sunday, ending an eight-game undefeated season string.

In other Saturday contests, the Canucks walloped Los Angeles Kings 8-4 at Vancouver, the Rangers nipped Detroit 3-1 at New York, Buffalo Sabres and Pittsburgh Penguins played to a 2-2 tie at St. Catharines, Ont., Minnesota North Stars and Chicago Black Hawks also deadlocked at 2-2 in Minneapolis and Philadelphia Flyers defeated the American Hockey League Bears 4-2 at Hershey, Pa.

In other Sunday games, Toronto blanked the Hawks 2-0 at Chicago, the Red Wings dumped California Golden Seals 5-2 at Port Huron, Mich., and Buffalo Sabres edged the AHL's Swords 5-4 at Cincinnati.

At St. Louis Saturday, Garry Unger, one of Détroit's players traded away after Abel was replaced by Ned Harkness, scored a third-period power-play goal that broke a 1-1 tie.

Gary Sabourin and Frank St. Marseille got the other St. Louis goals while Darryl Sittler scored for Toronto.

John McKenzie, with three goals, led the Bruins Saturday as they posted their first win against the Canadiens in preseason play this year. Canadiens won two of the previous outings and tied the third.

Reg Leach and Garry Peters got Boston's other goals while Jacques Lemaire, Claude Larose and rookie Guy Lefleur replied for Montreal.

Dale Tallon scored two goals for Vancouver and assisted on three others as the Canucks walked over the Kings. Mike Corrigan, Danny Grant, Bob Schmaut, Wayne Maki, Ted Taylor and Dennis Kearns got the others.

Bill Goldsworthy scored both North Star goals Saturday, including the tying marker. Dennis Hull and Stan Mikita got first-period goals for Chicago.

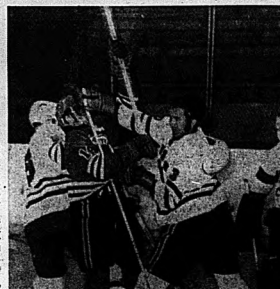
Joe Morrison got the other Philadelphia goal and Gil Gilbert scored twice for the Bears.



In Philadelphia Sunday, Clarke scored the winner for the Flyers when he beat Montreal goaltender Ken Dryden on a break away early in the third period. Lemaire's goal stood up for two periods for Montreal until Bill Lesuk's power-play goal with the final period just 23 seconds old.

Toronto goaltender Bernie Parent kicked out 28 shots and Red Berenson and Redmond lifted the Red Wings to victory Sunday. Tom Williams and Gary Croteau put the Seals ahead 2-0 in the first period.

Dick Duff was the hero for Buffalo again Sunday when he tied the score late in the final period at Cincinnati, vester to a victory in the first race and added another win with Simms Sam in the third, while Walsh's wins came with Victor Hal Direct in the second race and Lady Violet Direct in the seventh.

Two pacers set lifetime marks with Shelly Dawn turning in a 2:11.3 in the sixth race and Bay State Millie a 2:12 in the eighth.

Hefty Kingston Aces' newcomer John Law attempts to administer Exceedrin headache number 4 to Belle ville's Ralph Plane after the Quinte captain sent Law's helmet flying in a g oalmouth scramble during Saturday night's 4-2 Senior A exhibition win by Kingston. Linesmen broke up the minor skirmish before any punches could be landed. It was the first test under game conditions for the Belleville seniors this season.

Older Faces Prominent In New-look Quintes' Loss

KINGSTON — The 500 or so hockey fans scattered throughout Kingston's Memorial Centre Saturday night were anticipating the new-look Belleville Quintes.

They watched a number of new Belleville faces skating in the newly - purchased red and black travelling uniforms directed by a new Quinte coach. However, it was the old faces playing the most prominent roles in the same old bitter Kingston - Belleville rivalry as the Aces skated off with a 4-2 exhibition victory.

Kingston's familiar forward combination of John Mercer, Charlie Convery and Rod Grahant were chief architects of the Aces' victory, counting three of the four tallies including a pair by Mercer in the final frame to ensure the win.

For Belleville, most of the hometown fans' support was lavished on captain Ralph Plane, whose robust play and goal-scoring ability seemed to ensure his grip as Least Popular Player in the Limestone City.

The game was a chippy affair, certainly not unusual for a Belleville - Kingston encounter, with the Quintes drawing 10 of the game's 14 penalties.

Belleville coach Gene Poirier, like his Kingston counterpart Tom Thurlby, used a number of line and defensive combinations and didn't appear particularly upset about dropping the exhibition decision. "I thought we played pretty well for our first game," noted the Belleville coach. "There were some guys who didn't belong out there, but the only way to find out is to give everybody a chance. We'll just try and hit on the right combination."

Except for two unusual Kingston goals the score could have been doubled at 2-2. Meehan Bonnar had given the visitors a 1-0 lead during - period lead, snapping a 10-footer past Kingston goalie Bill Minnes. Some sharp goaltending by Steve Renzi and inaccurate shooting by Aces' forwards kept Kingston off the scoresheet until Convery's low shot from the right wing boards deflected off a skate and past the Belleville goalie.

The eventual winning marker by Mercer in the third period also bounced off a skate as Ron Jury attempted to cover the short side of the net.

Plane pulled Belleville to within one goal at the 7:09 mark of the third period, rapping a rebound past Jim Park to make it a 3-2 contest, but Mercer added a power play

The loss leaves CFB Trenton with a record of 2-3-1 for third spot in the four-team loop. Despite a strong effort by the Bronco defence, Trenton was unable to handle the Marauders' quarterbing of a fence thwarted their scoring attempts.

Four Attention Areas

Breakdown in Citizen-Government Liason Said Major Crisis

OTTAWA (CP) — All levels of government should co-operate to finance a string of national bureaus to tell Canadians of their rights in government programs, says the Science Council of Canada.

The information network could act as an advocate to ensure the citizens gets his rights. At the same time, it could feed back to the governments implications of how adequate are their programs.

The recommendation is in a council report to the federal government as one way to beat citizen alienation, seen as a growing threat to democratic participation in decisions.

Although the network sounds like an expansion of the Information Canada program, the council makes plain its model is the British Citizens' Advice Bureaux.

Breakdown in citizen-government communication is one of four crucial areas identified as needing immediate attention in building future cities.

The proposals stem from an urban development study by a committee headed by Dr. Pierre Dansereau, University of Montreal urban expert and the council's only social scientist.

Urban transport, housing and waste and recycling were three other areas in which the council suggested a variety of urgent steps.

On housing, the council said governments should stop fiddling with the construction industry as a means to speed up or slow down the economy.

Removal of this and other impediments would enable the industry to get on with providing more homes and experimenting with new techniques of construction and new kinds of dwellings.

Government also should assume ownership over substantial amounts of city-centre land and of land where the city will grow. This would end harmful land speculation and smooth planning and orderly development.

Urban transport should be improved before the automobile chokes off city centres. Federal and provincial governments should finance experiments and demonstration projects.

One such could be computer-controlled small buses to give home service to passengers within a community or to rapid transit stations.

Ontario's GO Transit last spring started such a dial-a-bus on its commuter trains which feed into and out of Toronto from Pickering to the east and Hamilton to the west.

Cities lack the funds to find solutions to urban transportation problems, FP$400 million, federal and provincial governments could take the first steps toward experimental programs and demonstration projects.

Highest possible priority should be given to studying waste recycling and disposal, either by government environmental agencies or the proposed urban analysis institute.

Canadian households produce 25,000 tons of solid waste a day and industry and commercial establishments five to 10 times that much. Equal amounts of wet sewage sludge are produced.

Yet 42 per cent of the population is not even served by primary treatment facilities.

Again financing corrective steps was beyond the ability of municipalities.

Delegates Enthusiastic About Hellyer's System

TORONTO (CP) — Members of the fledging Action Canada movement are heading back home today, apparently all keyed up to work for the new Canadian society which their leader, Paul Hellyer, outlined in ringing tones Sunday night.

But whether Action Canada will become the hoped-for bridge to unite some existing political forces in Canada remains to be seen. While Conservatives and Social Credit representatives attended parts of the three-day Action Canada convention, there was no indication they would work toward immediate unity.

There was obvious enthusiasm Sunday night as nearly 300 delegates heard Mr. Hellyer describe a proposed new economic system, with full employment, stable prices and without strikes. Old political divisions, in terms of "right" and "left" would be redundant.

Mr. Hellyer described himself as being "very pleased" with this founding convention. It had, he said, exceeded expectations.

Action Canada was born last May 25 after Mr. Hellyer, a one-time Liberal leadership candidate and a long-time cabinet minister, quit the party to form the movement of "ordinary Canadians."

This first convention was called for a broad discussion on general policies, for the purpose of approving the "economic package" of policies outlined by Mr. Hellyer and for attracting interest by existing parties.

The "package" was approved unanimously by 210 voting delegates attending the final plenary session. Another 846 members telephoned their approval through the local offices of a national trust company. Only five phoned in disapprovals.

There were no disapprovals for Mr. Hellyer's leadership.

The 210 delegates at the convention were supported by 852 members at home.

And George Skelton, a Calgary advertising executive, easily won the contest for deputy leader with 131 convention votes and 593 by telephone. Runner-up Marvin Wallace of London, Ont., polled 69 at the convention and 231 by telephone.

Although no radical resolutions were adopted, there were many heated discussions during the three days as various philosophical viewpoints clashed. The microphones seemed to be dominated by vocal reactionary voices which, convention officials said, overshadowed the moderate majority in attendance.

Generally, delegates were unanimous in defending the free-enterprise system. Many called for an end to social welfare as it exists.

THE BETTER HALF By Bob Barnes

"We'll fight this malady to your last penny, Parker."

Labor Split Over Market

BRIGHTON, England (AP) — The Opposition Labor party begins today its 70th annual convention, torn and troubled by disputes over Britain's projected entry into the European Common Market.

The official leadership under former prime minister Harold Wilson is seeking conference endorsement of its decision to oppose British entry on grounds that Prime Minister Edward Heath's Conservative government has negotiated a bad bargain.

Labor leaders argue that joining Europe will undermine British living standards. They want the party's six million members to back a demand for submitting the issue to the test of a general election.

But the party's deputy leader, Roy Jenkins, with a group of former cabinet ministers, has mounted a direct challenge to this policy.

Jenkins argued at a convention-eve rally Sunday night that British hopes of an effective world role rest on joining an enlarged Common Market. He called for a Labor party alliance with socialist parties on the continent to give West Europe a left-wing leadership.

The convention seems certain to support Wilson and those opposing market entry. But up to 40 of Labor's 289 members of Parliament are expected to rebel against the party and vote to join the market. Heath's Conservative party, with 328 seats, also is divided over joining Europe, but the government is expected to win by a margin of from 20 to 40 when the Common Market vote is taken Oct. 28.

Under British party practice, an MP risks his political future if he votes against his own colleagues on a vital issue. Jenkins nevertheless has vowed to do just that, even though it could cost him his post as deputy leader.

Besides the divisions within the leadership, Laborites seemed confused over what to offer the British people as an alternative to the Common Market—or whether there is any alternative.

Some delegates are urging the party to commit itself to the aid of a Socialist United States of Europe," meaning a sort of common market embracing East and West Europe. Others are saying the party should face the fact that Heath's terms for entry are not bad after all.

Greenpeace 800 Miles Away

VANCOUVER (CP) — The Greenpeace protest mission, forced to backtrack 200 miles to get fuel, was tied up at the Aleutian village of Sand Point today, more than 800 miles east of Amchitka.

The Greenpeace vessel, the Canadian halibut boat Phyllis Cormack, spent two days getting to Sand Point from Akutan, battling high winds and heavy seas all the way. At one stage, the Cormack put into a cove for shelter.

The U.S. Atomic Energy Commission plans to detonate a three-megaton nuclear bomb 6,200 feet underground on Amchitka, and is awaiting an official go-ahead from President Nixon. The Greenpeace mission plans to cruise three miles off the shore of Amchitka in the hope that the presence of the Canadians so close to the blast site will keep the Americans from conducting the test.

The Greenpeace crew called on Prime Minister Trudeau Sunday to "take the first plane to Washington" and make a personal protest against the planned Amchitka blast.

Thieu Wins Lone Race

SAIGON (AP) — President Nguyen Van Thieu won re-election by a far greater margin than the 50 per cent "vote of confidence" he sought, South Vietnamese election officials announced today.

But even as the final vote tally was reported, opposition politicians charged that the election was rigged. An election official in Saigon said he was ordered to replace anti-Thieu ballots with votes for the president.

The national election centre claimed Thieu was the only candidate—won 91.5 per cent of the votes cast, with 5.5 per cent of the votes against. They said there were unable to account for the remaining three per cent of the votes cast.

"Now, for the moment, we can't say where they are," said government spokesman Vu Khanh. "Maybe later."

LONDON, Ont. (CP) — Federal Labor Minister Bryce Mackasey said Saturday labor must accept technological changes in face Canada cooperative in world markets.

Mr. Mackasey, speaking at a luncheon before attending the opening of the Canadian Labor Congress union industries exhibition, said management must co-operate with labor so there is a minimum of inconvenience.

"It is important that technological change be accepted and indeed encouraged, and the effects of those changes must be anticipated as advanced technology can result in new jobs," he said.

The delegates included university professors, high-school teachers, students, trade-union women, social workers and secretaries.

The group, which has not named the new organization, also agreed to ask women's organizations across Canada to exert pressure on their local members of Parliament to try to get the law changed.

Sheffield Family Loses

LONDON (CP) — Manchester United, back at its best and bursting with determination, became the first team to beat Sheffield United when it topped the newly-promoted Sheffield side 2-0 Saturday.

A typically flamboyant goal by George Best, six minutes from the end, put Manchester ahead. The Northern Ireland wizard took possession of the ball nearly the halfway line and beat a crowd of defenders to score with a brilliant shot off the left foot. Brian Kidd added another goal to seal victory before a home crowd of 54,000.

Derby County is third with 16 points. It is the only unbeaten team in the division, but has been tied six times. Derby plays at home on Monday and Saturday to stay one point ahead of Manchester City, 20 winner over West Bromwich Albion.

Norwich City's lead in the Second Division was reduced to two points when it was held to a scoreless draw at home by Queen's Park Rangers.

An outstanding performance in the Third Division came from Shrewsbury Town, which defeated Blackburn Rovers 7-1 after Rovers' goalkeeper Roger Jones was injured in a collision before any scoring occurred.

Shrewsbury's Alf Wood netted four first-half goals and added another after the interval to bring his total to 14 from 12 league games.

In Scotland, Aberdeen emerged as the new First Division leader with a 2-0 win over Dundee United. Jimmy Smith scored on goal average, tied 11-1 at Motherwell.

Glasgow Celtic lost its place at the top and its unbeaten record when it lost 1-0 at home to St. Johnstone.

Glasgow Rangers were beaten 2-1 away to Hearts for their

In other games, the University of Ottawa Gee-Gees blanked University of Toronto Blues 21-0, Queen's University Golden Gaels shut out Carleton University Ravens 22-0 and University of Western Ontario Mustangs defeated University of Guelph Gryphons 15-1.

Ottawa's fifth victory in five starts left the Gee-Gees on top of the Northern Division with 10 points, eight more than Laurentian. York, winless in five starts, occupies the northern cellar.

Queen's, with four wins and one loss for eight points, leads the Blues by two points in the Capital Division. Carleton's lost left the Ravens two points behind the Yeomen.

With its victory, McMaster moved two points ahead of Laurentian in the Central Division. Guelph's is winless in five starts.

Windsor's win and Western's loss left the teams tied for first place in the West Division, each with six points, two more than Waterloo.

At Hamilton, the Mustangs rallied from a 16-7 halftime deficit, only to see Ken Baut boot a 22-yard field goal on the final play to erase the comeback. He was wide on his first try but was given a second chance when Western was called for an offside.

Baut also converted touchdowns by Ralph Dorrico on a 41-yard interception and Andy Roy on a one-yard pass.

Paul Knill was Western's big man, booting three field goals and converting a Terry Harvey touchdown.

The Lancers had to come from behind three times at Windsor before taking their contest.

Andy Parichi's eight-yard pass to Jim Wakeman with two minutes and 15 seconds remaining gave the Lancers the win at Windsor. Mike Urban caught a Parichi pass and scored on a play that covered 77 yards while Don Hollerhead returned a punt 68 yards to score the Lancers' other touchdown. Wakeman kicked two converts and Dennis Radwick, who booted three converts, kicked a 26-yard field goal.

Wally Parker scored a touchdown and kicked two converts and a 31-yard field goal for Waterloo. Tom Passmore got the other touchdown and added a single point.

At Sudbury, the Voyageurs went behind their rivals this season when Peter Kotyk grabbed a Gary McLeod pass and jumped 20 yards for a touchdown with less than three minutes left.

Tim Morton and Jim Nordin turned interceptions into touchdowns for Laurentian and Doug Radwick, who booted three converts, kicked a 26-yard field goal. The other Voyageur point came when York was charged with rough play after Laurentian intercepted a Yeoman pass in the Laurentian end zone.

Party St. George returned a Blues punt 80 yards early in the second quarter to begin the Gee-Gees scoring at Ottawa before a crowd of 3,000. Michel Chinnick and Dave Gibbs booted a pair of field goals, a single and two converts.

At Kingston, the Ravens only penetrated the Gaels' 30-yard line once in the final minute of play. Fullback Dave Hadden scored the first of his two touchdowns on a 35-yard, first-quarter jaunt, Doug Cozac with a convert, and Brian Warrender and Tom Taylor with a touchdown each plus a safety touch accounted for Kingston's other points.

Brian Beghostian picked up nine of Waterloo's points at Guelph, kicking a field goal, five singles and a convert. Rick Woodcombe returned a punt 30 yards for the Warriors' only touchdown.

Don Westlawe's 65-yard single in the second quarter was Guelph's only point.

Windsor travels to Western Saturday, Ottawa to Laurentian, Guelph to Laurentian and Queen's to York.

In Quebec Association, Bishop's thrashed Loyola 41-7 and Sherbrooke defeated College Militaire Royal 40-20 to take command of the Blue and White Divisions respectively with two victories each in many starts.

Redskins Turn NFL Tables On Favored Cowboys

BY THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

"The future is now," said George Allen after being named head coach and general manager of Washington Redskins last January—and he wasn't kidding.

In Allen's first season at the helm, the Redskins, perennial losers in the National Football League, are off to their fastest start since 1943.

For the first time in 28 years, they have won their first three regular-season games, their fastest triumph a 20-16 upset over Dallas Cowboys Sunday in the Cotton Bowl.

"This should make up for the Senators' coming to Texas," said the smiling Allen, referring to the recently-announced shift of Washington's baseball franchise to Dallas-Fort Worth for next season. "We had to make the folks back home proud of us."

Charley Harraway's 57-yard touchdown run in the first quarter, Bill Kilmer's 50-yard TD pass to Roy Jefferson in the second quarter and second half field goals of 25 and 32 yards by Curt Knight accounted for the Redskins' scoring.

The victory put the Redskins into sole possession of first place in the Eastern Division of the National Football Conference and left them as the only unbeaten club in the NFC.

In Sunday's other NFL games:

Detroit Lions held off Atlanta Falcons 44-40, Baltimore Colts whipped New England Patriots 23-3, Minnesota Vikings overpowered Buffalo Bills 19-0, Los Angeles Rams downed Chicago Bears 17-3, San Francisco 49ers battered Philadelphia Eagles 31-3 and Kansas City Chiefs trimmed Denver Broncos 16-3.

Both New York teams won. The Giants nipped St. Louis Cardinals 21-20 and the Jets downed Miami Dolphins 11-10. Green Bay Packers bopped Cincinnati Bengals 20-17, Pittsburgh Steelers defeated San Diego Chargers 21-17 and New Orleans Saints and Houston Oilers struggled to a 13-13 tie.

Detroit defensive back Mike Weger, who scored on a 52 yard fumble return, described the Lions-Falcons game as a "free for all." Wide receiver Ken Burrow, who grabbed six passes for 130 yards, scored two touchdowns for the Lions.

Earl Morrall and Johnny Unitas combined for 19 pass completions in 24 attempts, veteran Tom Matte and rookie Don Nottingham each ran for a touchdown and Jim O'Brien kicked field goals of 41, 42 and 50 yards in Baltimore's victory over New England.

Minnesota, Vikings dumped Buffalo quarterback Dennis Shaw for seven losses totalling 59 yards, giving the Bills only eight net yards in the air. Dave Osborn sparked the Minnesota offence, rushing 19 times for 92 yards, catching five passes for 65 yards and scoring once.

Los Angeles Victory over Chicago was its first in three games under new coach Tommy Prothro and ended the Cinderella heroics of quarterback Kent Nix.

Nix, after replacing injured starter Jack Concannon, completed only five of 23 passes for 60 yards and had three intercepted against the Rams' tired defence.

San Francisco, in handing winless Philadelphia its third lopsided loss, rolled up 310 total yards, including 208 in the air.

Fran Tarkenton scored one touchdown and passed for another, while rookie Rocky Thompson streaked 73 yards with a kickoff return for another TD, sparking the Giants' upset over St. Louis.

The Jets recovered a punt that bounced off Miami safetyman Dick Anderson with five minutes left to beat the Dolphins. Following the recovery, the Jets went 37 yards, with George Nock scoring from the two for backfired with two minutes remaining enabled Steven Bay to his second touchdown.

A Cincinnati gamble that edge the Bengals. With the Packers leading 20-17, the Bengals had fourth down and two at the Green Bay seven.

Bengal coach Paul Brown decided to go for the first down or the touchdown rather than a tying field goal. But the Packers' stopped rookie quarterback Ken Anderson at the line of scrimmage.

Pittsburgh turned a San Diego fumble and a pass interception into touchdowns and stopped three Charger threats in the closing minutes to nip the Chargers. John Fuqua scored twice for the Steelers.

Charley Durkee, released earlier this season by Houston, got revenge by kicking a 37-yard field goal with nine seconds left, giving New Orleans its tie with the Oilers.

Mark Moseley, who had lifted Houston into a 13-10 lead with a 44-yard field goal with 59 seconds remaining, missed a 50-yarder with four seconds to go.

Deserontо Bantams Best

Deserонto Centennials showed they had the best Bay of Quinte bantams, taking an 8-5 decision from Trenton Canders to capture the district minor baseball title.

Hefferman came through with an 11-strikeout pitching performance for the winners, not walking a single batter. Craig Empey, Bruce McDonald and Ross Given worked for Vaders yielding three walks and recording six strikeouts between them.

Kemp had a triple and two doubles for the winners with Wagar getting a double and single and Dennison and Layfield adding doubles. Farley Vader rapped a double and single for the losers while Dave Andrews added a triple.

West Best In Soccer

VANCOUVER (CP) — Vancouver Eintracht defeated Windsor Maple Leafs 3-1 Sunday to capture the Canadian soccer championship and the Challenge Cup.

Peter Arnett sparked the Eintracht attack with two goals, with Ady Becken the other marksman. Neil Stewart scored the Maple Leafs' only goal.

Stewart got the equalizer at six minutes of the second half with a long drive from 30 yards out. Arnett scored the winner at 16 minutes from a goalmouth scramble and Becker completed the scoring at 40 minutes with a hard drive from the right wing.

Muscle Strain Brings Back Pain

By G.C. THOSTESON MD

Dear Dr. Thosteson: Many of my friends and I have trouble with our backs. It can happen suddenly, while using a dust mop or bending over for something, and can be uncomfortable for a week or more.

Then perhaps several months later with no warning it happens again. My trouble always comes in the same place, just below the waist line. Why should this be and what treatment do you recommend?—K.E.N.

If you ever studied an anatomical chart of the muscles of the back, that would explain some of it. The muscles are criss-crossed, and at angles, with one set of muscles balanced against another, so that movement, though it seems simple to us, is really a matter of tightening one set of muscles while relaxing another.

Back pain usually is the result of muscle strain. While there are many causes of back pain, about 80 per cent are muscular.

When we're young and limber, and all our muscles are in use quite frequently (you've seen the outlandish contortions that kids get into) it takes a lot of strain on a muscle before it goes into spasm."

When we're older, we fall into patterns of movement— and some muscles don't get much use. Put a strain on such a muscle, and it doesn't take much to make it rebel, tighten up and give us a backache.

Add to that the changes that come as we grow older. Some degree of arthritis, or thinning of the discs in the spine, or a curvature or other faulty alignment of the spine can put extra strain on a muscle, or make us habitually "favor" certain muscles until an unusual movement or position causes spasm.

Obesity is a very common factor in back pain. Less common but worth considering and often overlooked is a shortening of one leg. A half inch can throw the back out of kilter with certain bending motions. But a heel lift can correct it.

A strain while dust-mopping can be because twisting of the back exerts a particular type of strain, just as bending forward and reaching (as when making a bed) is a greater strain than just bending. In picking up things, squatting and using the leg muscles causes less strain than bending at the waist. Tricks like that can prevent a lot of recurrent back troubles.

For an acutely stretched muscle, rest is important—I don't mean bed rest, but avoidance of further strain. Some support (girdle or corset) helps. So may a bed board between mattress and spring, to prevent sagging.

Heat (hot packs, infrared lamp, etc.) can help relax a muscle. Sometimes ice packs relieve pain. Aspirin is enough for most strains. In severe ones, muscle relaxants or stronger pain relievers may be needed.

There are many types of exercises for back muscles, because there are so many muscles and so many possible movements. Just careful bending and twisting exercises are good. Or lying on your back and raising the legs; or lying face down and raising the head. The purpose is to use (and strengthen) muscles not used in most daily activities.

Continuing pain, or constantly recurrent pain, may indicate something more than muscle spasm, of course, in which case a detailed examination is in order.

Dear Dr. Thosteson: I am diabetic. Is there any possibility of transmitting diabetes through sexual contact?—J.B.

None whatsoever.

Two Land Registration Systems Used in Canada

Sydney J. Harris Says

There are two basic systems of land registration in Canada — the registry system and the Torrens system.

Under the registry system, there is no one document giving a clear, up-to-the-minute picture of the state of ownership. Deeds, mortgages, etc., dealing with any particular piece of land are registered in the land titles office or registry office, and a solicitor of the registration is made in a book generally referred to as the "Abstract Book".

To determine who owns any particular piece of land under this system and what it is registered against it, one must go through all entries in the abstract book dealing with that piece of land right back to the original grant from the Crown.

Under the Torrens system, which is not in effect in some parts of Canada, the situation is much simpler and clearer. When land under the Torrens system is sold, a government-guaranteed Torrens Title, commonly referred to as a certificate of title, is issued in duplicate, in the name of the purchaser giving his description, the description of the land and a list of all encumbrances such as mortgages, easements, etc., registered against the land.

The certificate of title supersedes any previous Certificate of title, which must be surrendered to the land titles office when the property is sold, and so the current certificate of title is the only document that needs to be looked at to determine the state of ownership.

Another safeguard in this system is that when the land is subject to a mortgage, the land titles office will not release the owner's copy of the certificate of title to him. The result is that there is never more than one certificate of title in duplicate in existence at any one time, and the owner cannot attempt an illegal sale of his property when the land is mortgaged.

All Canadian land was originally under the registry system. The Torrens method was introduced in most parts of Canada at a later date. Since its introduction more and more land is continually being brought under the operation of he Torrens system through application by the owners. Although still in the distant future, the time will probably come when all Canadian land is under this more efficient system.

Because of the guarantee features of a Torrens title, many, if not all, large moneylending institutions will refuse to grant a mortgage loan on land that does not have a Torrens title in those areas where effect.

This is of particular significance to farmers purchasing land with the assitance of the Farm Credit Corporation. If the land being purchased does not have a Torrens title, the corporation will still approve the loan, but only on the condition that this title is obtained prior to registration of the mortgage.

That's the law!

Long Hair Merely Symbol

So you don't care for "hippies"? Well, that's your privilege. You don't like kids who mock the Establishment and thumb their dirty noses at the old-fashioned, all - American virtues. O.K. then.

In that case, you must like boys who play baseball, and take it seriously. Even more, boys who play on teams sponsored by the American Legion. How much more home-grown, old-fashioned, and all-American can you get?

But wait a minute. Something's wrong here. The picture's out of focus. In Orlando, Florida, where a 14-man teen-age baseball squad voted to forfeit its remaining games in an American Legion tournament rather than cut the hair and shave the beards from eight of its members.

The tournament director, inspecting the players as they stood at attention for pregame ceremonies, refused to let the Orlando team play in the second round until eight of the players got haircuts or sideburn trims. The boys—all high school seniors — turned him down, and were supported by their coach, who pointed out disgustedly that the tournament director himself "has a big moustache under his nose".

How stupid can the Establishment get? The current fetish for long hair is a sign of "belonging" to modern youth, a symbol of being "with it," and nothing more. Hair long ago ceased having any political or social or sexual significance on the youth scene; even the squarest of squares are wearing their tresses far longer than they did a half - dozen years ago.

This example, trivial as it is, nevertheless has importance in indicating how Establishments invariably drive people into the camp of the "enemy" by pushing their own conformity to a dangerous and idiotic excess.

Boys who play baseball for the American Legion belong in the same category as apple pie and milk; they are about as threatening to the stability of the nation as a plastic water-pistol. Yet, by demanding that these rosy-cheeked athletes trim their hair to some arbitrary length, the guardians of our national manners aid- mongers simply disenchant such lads and drive them into common company with other dissidents.

By invoking such senseless rulings, the adult powers prove to the apolitical youths that the activists have a real point in opposing the dead weight of the Establishment. More controls to a faith are recruited by the blind stubbornness of authority than by the siren song of revolutionaries — a lesson Czars never learn until they are deposed.

Jeane Dixon's Horoscope

For October 5

Your birthday today: Current expectations should be high. Critical testing of your abilities and the reality of your plans comes quickly so that the first three months are full of incidents, make-or-break opportunities. Then your year settles in steady upward development. Today's natives understand the need for persistent hard work, prefer to organize so that their share is largely the thinking and planning.

ARIES (Mar. 21 — Apr. 19): Impulse moves everybody this morning, including some who aren't due to stir. Keep track of what's happening; do as little as your situation allows until you get the whole picture.

TAURUS (Apr. 20 — May 20): Morning action runs into crosscurrents, needless duplication if you let it. Afternoon clarity puts you at special advantage for a fresh start.

GEMINI (May 21 — June 20): Pause and look about you rather than depend on the skills and alertness of others. Work as nearly alone as your situation allows; be ready for delays, interruptions.

CANCER (June 21 — July 22): Clearance activity should be your main concern. Get rid of useless belongings, equipment serving no purpose; abandon failing ventures.

LEO (July 23 — Aug. 21): Long-term plans are not yet feasible — more groundwork needs to be done. Declutter your schedule.

VIRGO (Aug. 23 — Sept. 22): Just staying abreast of current developments and carrying your end of the stick will be enough to manage.

LIBRA (Sept. 23 — Oct. 22): What may seem to be intervention turns out to be novel sort of help. There's more to any situation than you imagine.

SCORPIO (Oct. 23—Nov. 21): Setbacks or should be a rare exception from which you learn a great deal and rebound with even stronger motivation and morale.

SAGITTARIUS (Nov. 22 — Dec. 21): Concentrate on the reasons why things are as they are and what you plan to do that will make them better.

CAPRICORN (Dec. 22 — Jan. 19): See the moment of relative austerity in perspective. Realize that better times and higher achievements are earned by hard work and thrift now. Change is on the way.

AQUARIUS (Jan. 20 — Feb. 18): Reason and system enjoy a field day. For once everything seems to work smoothly.

PISCES (Feb. 19 — Mar. 20): Review your position and make an added touch to improve or defend it. Everybody else is watching to see how you thrive, further strain. Some support (girdle or corset) helps. So may a bed board between mattress and spring, to prevent sagging.

Heat (hot packs, infrared lamp, etc.) can help relax a muscle. Sometimes ice packs relieve pain. Aspirin is enough for most strains. In severe ones, muscle relaxants or stronger pain relievers may be needed.

Lewis Maintains Pace As Campaign Slows Up

By THE CANADIAN PRESS

The campaign for the Oct. 21 Ontario election slowed down to a crawl over the weekend for two of the major party leaders, but New Democrat Stephen Lewis made two policy statements.

Premier William Davis made a hand-shaking tour of Toronto-area ridings Saturday but took the day off Sunday, while Liberal leader Robert Nixon spent the weekend in his home riding, mainly in private meetings with his staff.

Discussion of issues was left largely to Mr. Lewis, who began Saturday with a statement in Schreiber promising a review board with power to require industry to justify the disparities in the cost of goods between southern and Northern Ontario.

He said the board would not seek to impose cost parity between the two regions but use transportation costs would always make goods more expensive in the north. However, a more equitable balance would be achieved.

On Sunday, Mr. Lewis told a news conference at his Toronto home that an NDP government would establish a rent review board to protect the rights of tenants.

The NDP also would establish a standard form of lease which would cover items such as advance payment of rent, repairs, notice of rent increases and evictions.

Mr. Lewis said he would revise the Landlord and Tenant Act to provide for collective bargaining between landlords and tenants on rent and other matters, and would give tenants representation on the board of directors of Ontario Housing Corporation.

"Adequate penalties" would be provided to enforce the legislation.

Liberal leader Nixon had his second consecutive weekend away from the hustings. His last appearance before the weekend was on an open-line radio show in Hamilton.

Mr. Nixon charged the government was on a "public relations kick" and that the NDP approach is too far away from the middle of the road—which the Liberals have staked out as the most appealing to voters.

Mr. Nixon said former NDP leader Donald MacDonald had taken a middle-of-the-road approach and that "frankly I think he was and probably still is right."

The main item on the campaign agenda today is a meeting of the three party leaders for the taping of a television debate to be broadcast at 10 p.m.

Club Destroyed

TORONTO (CP) — Fire raced through the multi-million-dollar Tam O'Shanter golf, curling and skating club here Sunday, reducing it to smoke and rubble.

About 1,000 persons, mostly children, were at the club when the fire broke out, but there were no reports of injuries.

Cause of the fire was not determined and there were no official estimates of damage.

James Craig, music operator of figure skaters, said most of the crowd was at the club for skating and dancing tests.

Later, thousands of people crowded on to the golf course to watch the fire despite warnings of possible ammonia-gas explosions from the artificial ice equipment on the rink.

Rope Breaks – So Does Arm

WOODSTOCK, Ont. (CP) — A giant tug-of-war held to launch this city's 1971 United Appeal campaign came to an abrupt end today when the rope snapped and the campaign chairman broke his arm.

A total of 600 men — 300 on each end of a 1,200-foot long rope — took part in the tug-of-war, which was billed as the largest in the world.

But the 14-inch rope snapped after only a few minutes bringing the event to an end.

Campaign chairman Wes Magill, who was at the front of one of the teams, suffered a fractured arm when the rope broke.

Premier Dunks Girl At Markham Fall Fair

TORONTO (CP) — Premier William Davis visited big-city shopping plazas and a country fair Saturday on a hand-shaking tour of Toronto and area ridings in his campaign for the Oct. 21 election.

A 10-hour campaign day took him from northwestern Metropolitan Toronto, where a few sparks flew over the local issue of the defunct Spadina Expressway, to Markham, where he dunked a 14-year-old girl in a barrel of water at a midway booth.

The premier and his wife Kathleen spent most of the day grasping hands and signing autographs as they strolled through crowds of Saturday shoppers at four plazas on Metro's northern fringe.

At Ajax, 20 miles east of Toronto, he delivered the only formal speech of the day, repeating his contention that this is no time for promises entailing unnecessary tax increases or higher government spending.

He reiterated his statement that the central issue is one of leadership in the face of "the tough decisions that this province will face in the 1970s."

The relaxed day, before a day off the campaign trail Sunday, ended with a five-minute visit to a high school dance here.

Mr. Davis joined the fun of the fall fair at Markham, 20 miles north-east, here, riding a ferris wheel, buying tickets on a steer and a $100,000 lottery, as well as trying his skill at several games of chance.

A barker talked him into trying to throw a baseball through a small hole, in hopes of dunking mini-dressed Sharon Denning of Markham, in the rain barrel. Mr. Davis missed several tries.

But he crawled over a barrier, announced it was time for "direct government action" and hit the trip-lever with his hand, sending the teenager off her perch and down out of sight in the barrel.

The premier started back to the barrier but his wife ordered that he "go help that girl," and Mr. Davis assisted the dripping Miss Denning out. She said later she would vote for him if she were old enough.

Some minor protest incidents interrupted the day.

At Yorkdale shopping centre, within sight of the end-of-pavement on the Spadina Expressway, about 20 young people chanting "we want Spadina" tried to drown out an equal number of young Davis supporters shouting for the premier.

The Conservative government vetoed further expenditure on Spadina this year after an outlay of $60 million, stopping work on the highway that was to reach into the downtown area.

Wayne Novak, 22, a political science student at York University, protested reduced student awards and other factors which he said were curbing Canadian graduate studies but not hurting Americans studying here. Mr. Davis said Canadian graduate students were getting an equitable share.

At another plaza, a middle-aged Hungarian immigrant pressed the premier to say why Ontario "couldn't have separate schools", when they existed in other provinces. An aide to Mr. Davis led the man way.

The government has decided not to extend aid to separate schools past the current level of Grade 10.

At Markham, a booth operator at the fair told the premier that the decision on separate schools would bring the Conservatives his vote for the first time.

Mr. Davis flies to Ottawa today.

Rogers Wants Two-China Policy

UNITED NATIONS (CP) — Secretary William Rogers delivers the main United States policy speech today and in it he will call for seating Peking in the United Nations while stalking his own prestige on retaining a seat for Taiwan.

Despite the considerable power of the U.S. in the world organization, many diplomats believe the "two-China" proposal will fail. Canada has said it cannot support such a policy.

In addition to this plea on the Chinese question, Rogers is expected to urge an interim Middle East peace accord and reopening of the Suez canal. He is expected to emphasize there is no other alternative to the long-simmering crisis.

It will be the first time in many years the secretary of state himself has delivered the annual policy statement. Traditionally, the U.S. permanent representative, who has cabinet rank, has made it.

Rogers's decision to speak reinforced the impression in diplomatic circles that the U.S. is fighting an uphill battle for its "two-China" or "dual representation," policy. It is assumed that he wanted to place his personal prestige behind the attempt to save UN membership for Taiwan.

Although U.S. officials have tried to convince other delegates that Peking would be flexible and not spurn an invitation to enter the UN if Taiwan remained, the widespread view is that China's entry demands that Taiwan be excluded.

The representation debate is expected to begin about Oct. 19. Nearly 100 speakers already have been listed, officials said.

The U.S. generally is the second speaker in the annual debate on world affairs, which opened a week ago. However Rogers was unable to take the customary place this year because he accompanied President Nixon to Alaska to meet Emperor Hirohito and Empress Nagako of Japan.

Gromyko replied that it would be difficult to stop nuclear tests without an agreement among all nuclear powers.

It was the first meeting between the Canadian and Soviet foreign affairs chiefs since Prime Minister Trudeau visited the Soviet Union in May and signed a protocol providing for increasing contacts between Canadian and Soviet authorities.

Ontario Legal Aid Said Passive And Too Costly

OTTAWA (CP) — Legal aid for the poor in Ontario costs $264.13 a case compared with $51 for a more effective system in the United States, a federal study says.

The study for the National Council of Welfare rejects judicare systems such as Ontario's as passive and costly and says they can't be justified when compared with the storefront lawyer program in the U.S.

"The Ontario plan would be pressed to point to a list of achievements which have done anything to substantially alter the position of their poor clients," the study says.

"Lack of any outreach policy, less accessibility and little effort to educate the client community create a situation in which important problems are less likely to be brought forward."

Larry Taman, law clerk of Mr. Justice Bora Laskin of the Supreme Court of Canada, was commissioned by the council to study "legal services for the poor."

The council, not to be confused with the older Canadian council on Social Development, was created a year ago by Welfare Minister John Munro.

It is intended to give a bootstrap view of welfare policy and procedures and its membership includes a number of welfare recipients.

The bootstrap view, expressed at the Poor People's Conference here in January, says:

"Legal aid in Canada is a system by the legal professional for the legal professional with total indifference to the client—the poor."

Storefront Concept

The conference rejected the "traditional indifferent legal aid system" and recommended aggressive poverty law and neighborhood law offices.

The Taman report says at least two provinces—Nova Scotia and Manitoba—appear on the verge of adopting the neighborhood legal services concept.

It criticized the three-year-old Ontario system for leaning heavily toward litigation with almost no preventive work.

It was limited to criminal or divorce cases and rarely helped with many daily problems of the poor, says.

Rented premises that don't meet local housing standards; welfare benefits given on terms that aren't in the law; vague eligibility standards for public housing; confusing regulations on workmen's compensation and unemployment insurance; vulnerability to unscrupulous finance contracts.

"Furthermore the Ontario plan was costly because judicare lawyers "are remunerated at nearly the rate to which the profession has become accustomed."

"These rates are kept high by law association tariff schedules which lawyers in private practice are not permitted to breach," the report says.

Overhead Too Costly

"As well, the (Ontario) plan's overhead of approximately 25 per cent, a large part of which is spent determining eligibility and reviewing billings, is in addition to the normal 45 per cent involved in running the lawyers' own offices."

Also, there was no poverty law section of the Canadian Bar Association to keep lawyers abreast of the field, as there is on corporation or tax law. This meant costly duplication of effort.

Divorce costs were so high that the attorneys-general's committee on legal aid in Nova Scotia has recommended salaried lawyers be retained.

Law was meaningless unless a person had access to it. Yet a Halifax study found only 30 per cent of those interviewed felt they could afford a lawyer.

Ontario legal aid offices tended to be in the business areas, mainly not easily accessible but also psychological barriers against the poor.

The provincially-financed Ontario system is administered by the Law Society of Upper Canada with a legal aid advisory committee reporting to the attorney-general.

A full-time director is aided by 46 area directors, only one working full-time. The area director hears applications for aid and decides whether a legal problem exists. Then a welfare officer assesses eligibility.

The area director then decides whether to issue a certificate. The successful applicant may choose a lawyer from a panel, but the lawyer doesn't have to take the case.

The lawyer is paid 75 per cent of an established fee schedule, plus his expenses.

Discretion Questioned

In practice, the report says, this gives the area director considerable discretion. Some restrictions have been placed on certificates granted for divorces, even where the applicant qualifies financially.

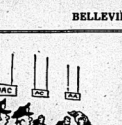
The plan drew 84,091 people to area offices in the year ending March 30, 1970, of whom 61.6 per cent made formal applications.

The average cost of a case was $194.12.

But the 19 per cent law society administrative overhead, raised the figure to $197.21 and the cost of the eligibility test — administered by the department of social welfare in most cases — brought the cost to $264.13.

If spending on civil cases — mostly divorce—alone was considered, the average cost was $288.03.

The U.S. Neighborhood Legal Services Programme cost $51 a case, and the report says:



"There is no evidence to suggest that service . . . is of a lesser quality than that given the judicare.

"Indeed, existing evidence would seem to point in the opposite direction."

The report concluded that the most effective answer to the many problems inherent in the Ontario plan was decentralization and "the use of full-time lawyers who will accept as part of their work . . . the task of reaching beyond those barriers."

Grain Truce Ends

OTTAWA (CP) — Hope for a week-long truce in the Commons grain-payments dispute were shattered Monday as New Democrats and a handful of Conservatives lunged into debate against the government's grain-income stabilization bill.

The three Prairie agriculture ministers Friday asked that debate on the bill be adjourned a week while they and other farm leaders attempted to make it more acceptable to critics.

But the government again put the matter up for Commons consideration because, said Otto Lang, minister responsible for the Canadian wheat board, the Conservatives refused to agree to the ceasefire request.

Conservative House Leader Gerald Baldwin (Peace River) said he would have supported the postponement had the government agreed to significant amendments to its bill.

The bill would set up a joint fund into which the government would contribute twice the amount put in by farmers each year.

The plan would replace two main subsidy programs now in effect: The Temporary Wheat Reserves Act, under which the government pays the storage costs for surplus wheat, and deal whereby the government makes up any deficits in wheat board payouts.

Mr. Lang said last week he would withdraw the bill if the opposition continued a series of procedural attacks stalling its passage. He reiterated his intention Monday.

Later, Conservative Leader Robert Stanfield issued a statement saying his party will abandon attempts to balk the bill by procedural manoeuvres.

But Jack Horner (PC—Crowfoot), long opposed to the legislation, predicted in an interview that the bill would die anyway under the weight of 14 amendments already on the agenda.

Four of the amendments have been put forward by the Conservatives.

PM 'Too Busy' For Talks Now

OTTAWA (CP) — Commons exchanges Monday aroused suspicions that the cabinet has decided to use Canada's energy resources as a bargaining counter in its campaign for relief from United States trade restrictions.

The suspicion among MPs were fuelled by cautious government replies to a series of questions on how Canada could obtain exemption from the 10-per-cent supplementary duty the U.S. has placed on imports and other measures of economic protectionism.

Government ministers also denied they are considering yielding to U.S. requests for revision of the 1965 Canada-U.S. auto pact and 1962 defence purchasing agreement in order to win relief from the extra duty.

Trudeau Agrees To Discuss Jobs

OTTAWA (CP) — Prime Minister Trudeau promised Monday to consider making representations to Soviet Premier Alexei Kosygin on behalf of Jews in the Soviet Union.

Andrew Brewin (NDP—Toronto-Greenwood) said that so far this year 50,000 Soviet Jews have requested exit vitas but only 7,000 have received them.

PCs Capture N.B. Riding

RICHIBUCTO, N.B. (CP) — The Progressive Conservative party, in a provincial byelection upset, Monday captured the Kent seat held for nearly 19 years by Louis J. Robichaud, former Liberal premier of New Brunswick.

Shattering a voting tradition that had kept the predominantly Acadian riding Liberal since 1917, Conservative Omer Leger, a 40-year-old St. Anthony insurance agent, upset Liberal Omer Cormier, 48, a Ste. Marie farmer, by a majority of 2,048 votes.

Davis Asks Early Date

TORONTO (CP) — Premier William Davis said Monday night he has sent a telegram to Prime Minister Trudeau suggesting that a planned federal-provincial conference on the economy be held earlier than the scheduled dates of Dec. 6-8.

Mr. Davis said he had suggested that the conference "be moved ahead any time, well any time after the 28th (of October) preferably, because we think it is urgent and we're suggesting in that communication that the emphasis be on job situations and on the economy."

Ontario has a general election Oct. 21.

News Briefs

UNITED NATIONS (CP) — The United States indicated Monday it is willing to make a contribution to help the UN out of its financial difficulties, although it made it clear its difficulty was caused by others, State Secretary William Rogers said in a speech to the General Assembly that if other countries make "adequate contributions," the U.S. will add its assessment. That left the Soviet Union as the only big power that has not promised to help the UN out of a situation that Secretary-General U Thant says has the organization near bankruptcy.

LONDON (CP) — Emperor Hirohito of Japan received a royal welcome today as he began a three-day state visit to Britain that has aroused a mixture of curiosity and bitter memories of the Second World War. Princess Margaret greeted the emperor and Empress Nagako aboard their special Japan airlines DC-8 at Gatwick Airport, 26 miles south of London.

Wilson Vows Fight

BRIGHTON, England (CP) — Former prime minister Harold Wilson vowed today to fight Britain's projected entry into the European Common Market on present terms every inch of the way. He demanded total backing of all labor MPs in that fight.

"We have no room for passengers or faint hearts," he told cheering delegates at the party's annual convention. "There is not one Labor member of Parliament who could have been elected by his own efforts."

Wilson was plainly warning Deputy Leader Roy Jenkins and a band of followers who have signalled their intention of voting with Prime Minister Heath's Conservative government when Parliament makes its choice on the issue Oct. 28.

Reconciliation Within Decade

Economics Before Environment to Be Ottawa's Position at UN

OTTAWA (CP) — Canada has told other nations that in the debate over economic growth versus environmental quality, economic growth is essential.

This is a key point of the preliminary Canadian position submitted to the United Nations environmental conference to be held next June at Stockholm.

So long as jobs are needed for one or two members of a family, "economic growth is necessary," says the position paper which may be revised before next June's meeting.

At the same time, the Canadian paper says apparent conflict between growth and environmental quality can and must be resolved, adding that "such reconciliation . . . is probable in the Canada of the next few decades."

The Canadian position, made public Monday, clashed sharply with views of the Science Council of Canada in a report to the government which also was distributed Monday.

Dr. Pierre Dansereau, who headed a Science Council committee whose recommendations were the basis for the report, told a news conference he does not believe economic growth as now defined can be reconciled with improving environmental quality.

He said the Science Council has "all sorts of reservations" about economic growth as the primary goal in Canada.

Dr. O. M. Solandt, Science Council chairman, said that initially the Council had accepted "rather uncritically" the economic growth goals set out by the Economic Council of Canada.

Since that time, a major change had occurred in the council's views on the subject. This had been reflected in various reports offering advice to the government.

In a letter attached to the urban development report, Dr. Dansereau, a University of Montreal professor, attacks the concept of economic growth as failing to take adequate account of undesirable by-products of consumption such as waste and pollution.

He argues that design, re-shaping and development of the urban environment cannot be achieved within the social and economic system as it now exists.

However, at the UN conference, Canada has indicated that its position may be that, with an aroused public opinion and other factors, economic growth and a better environment can be achieved over a period of time.

The Canadian position paper says the benefits of growth can finance efforts to enhance the environment. In addition, Canada has only just started to harness research and technology to this task.

The paper catalogues environmental measures taken in the last few years, from a new water act to agreements with the United States to fight Great Lakes pollution.

It expresses support for multi-nation attempts to take action against pollution of the seas, over-fishing or other factors beyond the control of any one nation.

Vandals Hit Four Schools

By IAN ROBERTSON
Staff Reporter

Four area public schools were heavily ransacked during an overnight series of break-ins in which desks and filing cabinets were rifled, quantities of cash were removed and as one school principal put it, "they did a lot of stupid things."

Bayside Public School, the most heavily hit, was entered after vandals broke a window in a rear door and unlatched the crash bar. As principal Arno Hall opened the main office door this morning, he had to apply pressure in order to clear the piles of filing cabinet papers from in front of the door.

Microphones, electrical cords, piles of office records and an assortment of school equipment were strewn across the office floor to such an extent, that only one or two small areas of tile were left clear.

"They really did a good job of it," Mr. Hall told reporters.

OPP Constable Thomas Hume, a member of one of two teams investigating the break-ins, estimates cash loss from school insurance envelopes collected from pupils at between $25 and $30. Damage to the door has been placed at $50.

Deputy Minikeljohn, principal at Carrington-Corbyville Public School, described what he found this morning:

"They had broken in a lower door, smashed the glass and forced the bar down. there was a little bit of cash taken, But I won't know how much until I check.

"They ransacked the office pretty well and got into the file cabinets; however, there was nothing taken there," he told The Intelligencer in a telephone conversation this morning.

"They did a lot of stupid things, like placing an aquarium on the floor. The bass squirrels in the aquarium escaped, but we got them back."

Mr. Meiklejohn said a separate classroom was broken into, but damage was minimal. All money taken was contained in insurance envelopes.

At Centenary Public School, principal Robert Butcher thinks entry was gained through a window in the office, but this has not been proved.

Mr. Butcher described the situation at his school as one of "just a general mess. Three small bits of glue and paste spread around; this school is small so they don't have such a big area to work in."

The fourth school entered, Harmony Public School near Foxboro, was, in the words of principal John Emerson "really turned upside down."

A stone used to break open a door window was still lying in the floor when staff arrived this morning. A gaping hole was mute testimony to the damage which lay beyond it.

"Nothing was actually taken, but file cabinets and office files were ransacked.

"I think they were looking for insurance money," said Mr. Emerson, "but we've been taking ours to the bank."

Damage estimates for the window and office door have been placed at between $40 and $50.

All principals expressed the hope that this series of break-ins could be cleared up in a manner similar to the more serious damage inflicted on schools in Prince Edward County.

Two Belleville youths were convicted Sept. 24 of malicious damage and breaking and entering at Kente and Massassaga public schools in July. The youths received one year and three months, respectively, in reformatory.

Skeptical New Arrival

Canada Manpower's James Stavely (right) yesterday brought the last of Ontario's quota of Tibetan refugees to Belleville, swelling the local Tibetan community by four to a total of 18. Newest arrivals are Gonam Samang (left) his wife and 20-month-old son, who took a wary eye of Mr. Stavely. Standing at right is Sangey Samang, who arrived with his brother's family from New Delhi. Belleville received the first and last Tibetans to be brought here from Indian refugee camps.

Two Alternatives Selected

Traffic Committee Zeroes in on Problems

By ROY PEACOCK
Staff Reporter

Site alternatives for proposed new structures and road ways to alleviate the city's northsouth traffic problems at the upper bridge and on Cannifton Road have been reduced to two by the city traffic committee.

Earlier, consulting engineers Totten, Sims, Hubicki Associates Ltd., in a north-south corridor study report had proposed six different choices three each for the two problem areas.

The report was presented to city council at its regular meeting last week and was referred to the traffic committee for consideration.

The report suggested either one or two new bridges over the Moira River at the north end of Pinnacle and Church Streets and two locations for either a subway or overpass across the CN double tracks to replace the present level crossing on Cannifton Road.

Yesterday the traffic committee favored construction of only one bridge at the end of Pinnacle Street to relieve traffic congestion in the upper bridge area.

And it all but ruled out construction of either an overpass or subway over the CN tracks at the present Cannifton Road crossing.

Instead the committee opted for a grade separation location east of the present crossing, the proposed route to cross the CNR's park and link up with Emily Street.

The proposed grade separation location and roadway system favored by the committee is one of the three alternatives given by the consultants.

Committee members felt that the present Cannifton Road crossing was too close to the CN railway river bridge to build a subway, while ramps for an overpass would destroy many of the properties both north and south of the railway.

If a subway was to be built at the Cannifton Road crossing, a temporary railway bridge would be needed over the river to allow diversion of rail traffic while construction was in progress.

Consultant George Totten estimated such a bridge would cost at least $400,000.

However, priority is expected to be given the Upper Bridge traffic problem but committee members are still not decided on the route traffic should take north of the proposed new bridge.

The consulting engineers proposed the route should be along Cameron Street with the roadway to join North Front Street at about Strach Street.

Some traffic committee members wondered, however, if the new Pinnacle street bridge could not be angled toward the intersection of North Front and Moira Street.

This, it was felt, might result in less property acquisition being required.

In the end, committee members decided to look closely at both possibilities and directed the firm of consultants to prepare conceptual plans for both alternatives, following which a decision would be made.

Engineers said a conceptual plan for the alternate routes could be ready in from four to six weeks.

Also it directed preparation for alternate conceptual plans for a subway and overpass across the CN double tracks to replace the present Cannifton Road level crossing.

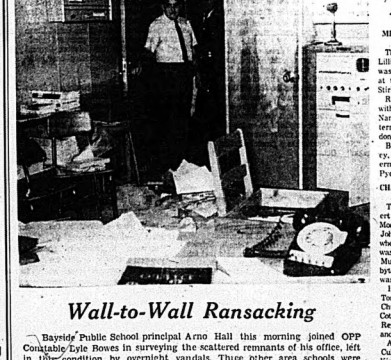
Hopes are that the necessary highways department approvals could be obtained by next June with a tender call to be made later next year.

Police Chief Douglas T. Crosbie favored the one bridge concept and also recommended a by-pass be angled to allow joining up with North Front Street just north of Moira Street.

This, he said, would keep traffic in its normal alignment and the present upper bridge could be maintained for one way southbound traffic.

Church Street, the Chief felt, should be a one-way, one-way northbound artery.

Referring to the Cannifton Road problem, the Chief concurred with the engineers' report that the grade crossing facility must be maintained during actual construction.



Parking Fine System Changed

TRENTON (Staff) — A new overnight parking bylaw came into effect here last night and it brings a substantial change in the method of punishing those who leave their vehicles along the roadways during snow removal hours.

Last year the procedure followed here was for police officers to record the names of violators and send them court summonses through the mail.

Although no change was made Monday in permission to check roadway parking, the summons procedure has been rejected.

Summonses will be replaced this winter by parking tickets that will be left on the car. Fines of $5 for a first offence and $15 for repetitions may be paid by placing the fine in one of the collection boxes located around town.

Wall-to-Wall Ransacking

Bayside Public School principal Arno Hall this morning joined OPP Constable Lyle Rowes in surveying the scattered remnants of his office, left in this condition by overnight vandals. Thice other area schools were similarly struck.

Town Garbage Service To Get Trial Period

TRENTON (Staff) — Trenton Sanitation Ltd. will be awarded a five - year contract for the collection of garbage in the town but not before a set of preliminary problems is ironed out with the firm.

Council had been prepared last night to give final approval to $30,999 yearly contract but delayed giving third reading to the covering bylaw on the recommendation of Councillor Pete Asiz.

Mr. Aziz suggested holding off on acceptance of the contract to allow "a few days trial of the new service."

Councillors brought to the floor during Monday's regular meeting a series of complaints against the new service that began last Friday.

According to George Greer, all garbage is not being collected along Sidney Street.

Councillor Stan Ketcheson reported a Dundas Avenue business has been asked to pay $14 a month for one garbage pickup, $17.50 if it wants two.

"Some businesses cannot afford this . . . I think it is a pretty heavy charge," he said.

Councillor Ted Parks' suggested that he did not think Trenton Sanitation was asking businesses to pay additional fees for garbage collection and suggested the $14 a month proposition comes from another company offering supplemental service.

Another problem with the new garbage service is that many businesses in the downtown area assumed collections would continue on Mondays as in the past but this will not be the case. Trenton Sanitation will collect in the core area Tuesdays.

Refuse from businesses was placed on the street to be carted away yesterday morning but stayed along the roadways through Monday for removal today.

It is expected council will approve the new contract within 10 days but first the problems will be settled.

Council had received two bids for the garbage contract when tenders closed last week — one from the former operator, Ross Wilman, and one from Trenton Sanitation. According to committee of the whole minutes, "Mr. Wilman's bid was unsigned, did not have a bid deposit, or a performance bond as required."

Wilman had told council previously he was quitting garbage service to the town but did, at least, enter a proposal to continue his collection operation after he had said he wanted to end his service here.

Ruddy Donates Sign Spaces

This year's fire prevention week campaign is receiving aid from the firm of E. L. Ruddy Ltd. which has donated space for billboard advertising.

The signs at the recreation centre and at the corner of Dundas and Coleman warn passersby of the dangers of fire.

Tape Player, Tapes Stolen

TRENTON (Staff) — Thieves broke into a locked car on a municipal parking lot here overnight and made off with a stereo tape player and 10 tape cartridges.

The car, owned by Robert Baylis of RR3, Roseneath, had been parked in the Front Street municipal lot and police say a side vent window had been forced open to gain access to the $150 worth of contents.

Store Robbed

Entry was gained by forcing a rear window. Approximately $175 in cash was stolen, together with a Cooey 22 calibre repeating rifle, valued at $40, and 1,000 rounds of mushroom shells, valued at $20.

Hasty Pees Win Shooting Trophies

CAMP BORDEN (Staff) — Belleville's Hastings - Prince Edward Regiment scored top targets in the annual Ontario Rifle Association, Service Rifle matches held here over the weekend

"We expected to pick up one or two team trophies, but to walk away with six was astounding," team Captain J. B. Thompson of Belleville said following announcement of the six individual and one overall team win.

"We'll have to go back next year and try to keep it." he added.

The Hasty Pees took honors in six separate matches, including:

— Amiens Match, sharpshooter class, won by CWO Howard Adamson of Belleville.

— Arnhem Match, master class, won by WO L. W. Dinsen of Peterborough and in the sharpshooter class, Sgt. G. T. Douglas of Peterborough placed first.

— Sgt. Douglas also came out tops in the Cooper Match, sharpshooter class.

The regimental team shot a top score of 820 of a possible 1,200 to win the Cole Team Match, originated 15 years ago by the Essex and Kent Scottish Regiment.

A total of 340 service riflemen took part in the weekend Ontario Rifle Association matches, sunny skies and warm temperatures.

This is the second year the Hasty Pees have attended the ORA and Department of National Defence matches at Camp Borden. In 1970, the local riflemen took home two individual match trophies.

The two - foot Cole Team Match trophy will be on display in the Belleville Armories for the first six months, after which it will be given a place of honor at the Peterborough headquarters of the Hastings - Prince Edward Regiment.

Recreation Is Studied

The old physical education classes in high schools are getting a new look with the institution of recreational leadership courses.

The objective is to give selected students at about the grade 12 level an opportunity to study the organization and administration of recreational facilities in their communities.

One such class is now under way at BCI, under the direction of teacher Brian MacKenzie. Fifteen students are involved in exploring the recreation outlets in Belleville and district and in sampling all sports and athletic opportunities available.

Last week, for instance, the group was guests of the Belleville Lawn Bowling Club and were instructed by John Avery and other members in the fundamentals of lawn bowling.

Other activities being investigated include winter sports, golf, canoe tripping, gliding, horseback riding and gymnastics.

The students will organize athletic events and work with children at Queen Victoria Public School in the administrative and instructional end of community recreation.

IN MEMORIAM

VAN DEREN — In loving memory of our dear mother and grandmother Mary Van Deren who passed away October 5th, 1967.
If I had all the world to give,
And it were mine to own,
I'd give it all most gladly
And count my self alone,
But still I can do, dear mother,
In act and tend your grave,
And leave behind flowers of love,
To the best mother God ever made,
To the best mother God ever made,
Forever loved, forever missed,
Forever known as kind,
That she'll be standing at the door
In there in heaven we find.
—Sadly missed and lovingly remembered by daughter Joyce, Peggy, grandchildren.

JOHNSTON — In loving memory of a dear aunt and uncle Anna and Thomas Johnston who died on the same day, October 4th, 1967.
Two of our mothers one years ago, October 4th, 1967.

By the valley of rest so fair,
Somehow, someday, we know not when,
We'll meet you both up there.
—Always remembered and sadly missed, Frank and Helen O'Brien and family.

SINK, Nellie Irene — In loving memory of a dear mother and grandmother who passed away October 5th, 1966.
God looked around His garden,
And chose the loveliest place,
He looked down on the earth,
And saw your tired face,

And lifted you to rest,
Your work was done so beautiful,
And your life was best.
—Ever remembered by daughter Irene, Freddie and children.

Resistance Workers on Tour

The sounds of O Canada and The Marseillaise blended yesterday at Prince Edward Yacht Club, when 62 men and women, all former French resistance workers, were luncheon guests of Prince Edward Chamber of Commerce. The group, on a self-sponsored tour of Ontario and Quebec, was welcomed by Mayor Margaret Ackerman and County Warden Allan Anderson.

Picton Mayor Objects To Permit Routine

PICTON (Staff) — Mayor Margaret Ackerman termed last night's presentation of requests to council for building permits "a farce" since several of the permits in question already had been issued.

Earlier in the meeting Mrs. Ackerman demanded to know why routine requests for building permits cannot be handled by town building inspector, Leonard Tripp.

She said unusual situations such as the proposed construction of sectional homes on Simeon Street understandably might come before council but questioned the efficiency of confronting councillors with routine applications.

The mayor said she considered it a duplication and felt the applications could be handled through the public works committee if necessary.

She was supported by Picton reeve Albert Piroth who said monthly presentation of commonplace building permit applications is "making a rubber stamp out of council."

Mayor Ackerman unsuccessfully moved that council amend its existing bylaw to permit the building inspector to authorize the issue of building permits, now the town clerk's job.

Several councillors suggested this plan could place too much responsibility with Mr. Tripp who verified he is liable for permits he might issue.

Under the present system council remains liable for the permits it approves.

Shortly before the close of last night's council session, reeve Piroth successfully moved that Picton's building permit bylaw should be reviewed by the town solicitor and discussed at council's next meeting in November.

In the meantime, building permits approved by Mr. Tripp will be issued as usual by the town clerk.

Mr. Tripp observed that he has held the job of building inspector for nine years and is puzzled by present protests to sectional homes on Simeon Street.

He said he does not feel the complaining residents object to the buildings themselves but to the fact they will be erected on their street.

Mr. Tripp added he cannot refuse the sectional home builders a permit because "they are within the letter of the law."

Cleanup Starts Next Weekend

More than 500 Belleville elementary and secondary school students on Saturday, October 16 will be out to prove that fighting pollution can be fun.

That is the day for the planned Moira River cleanup from Highway 401 to the new Dundas Street bridge being planned by the city's anti-pollution group, PAGE (People Against a Contaminated Environment).

Monday evening an organizational meeting for the river cleanup was held at the Sir Mackenzie Bowell public school in west Belleville.

The students will assemble at the Federal Building at 9 a.m. on the 16 and will march up Station Street and Cannifton Road to break off at preselected points along the river.

Following the river cleanup the participants will take in a free dance on the market square with the fun to start at 8 p.m. A number of local bands have offered their services for the event.

But October 16 will not be the only day for fighting pollution.

Mayor J. Russell Scott will proclaim the week of Oct. 11 as Fighting Pollution Can't Be Fun Week with different days of the week to be designated for specific activities.

Tuesday Oct. 12 will be "don't throw it on the ground" day. Wednesday will see a survey of the city for the different types of "sign" pollution. Thursday will be "clean up your yard" day and Friday "start a compost pile" day.

School Building Forecast A 'Hot Potato'

by LENNY WILLIAMSON
Staff Reporter

The regional office of the department of education in Kingston will finally get Hastings county's list of required new schools — but only after the board agonized for 3½ hours last night over the five-year capital works forecast.

The capital works forecast was issued to trustees a week ago, but they deferred discussion of it until a special meeting.

The department of education requires approval of the forecast by Oct. 15, as an aid to planning and appropriating money from the Capital Aid Fund. But trustees found so many ifs in the predictions of school needs that they balked at approving the 1972 to 1976 forecast.

A weighty book outlining the reasons and needs for school buildings, prepared by the administration, showed that elementary enrolments are declining and secondary school enrolments starting. Although two new secondary schools will be needed by the mid 1970s, enrolment of senior students is expected to fall off drastically by the 1980s, resulting in empty classrooms in newly built high schools.

But, trustees were told by director of education Eric Runacres, by 1977 there will be 1,829 high school students with no place to go to school unless a secondary school building program gets under way next year.

In addition, 2,130 pupils are now in classrooms rated substandard by the department of education, and these must be replaced.

Trustees agreed with James Clarke that "we can't really do a five-year forecast", with so many unknown factors compounding the problem.

But the department of education insists on having the forecast by Oct. 15.

"The department is not aware of the implications of what it asked for," said Mr. Runacres.

The impact on the taxpayer was uppermost in trustees minds, especially the effect of building a new $4.5 million secondary school in Stirling, to begin next year, and another shortly afterward in east Belleville.

"Education can only take so much of the tax dollar; people are beginning to object," said Mrs. Miriam Graham. "I don't give a damn what the department says because there's no way I can approve this forecast." I don't want the press to go out and say the board of education approved this because I don't."

But Mrs. Jean Hutchison implied that too much attention is being focused on board of education spending across Ontario, and not enough on other areas.

"Hasn't the department produced a man to look at community college and university spending?" she asked. "That is the area that needs to be looked at."

Trustees finally compromised by moving to "submit the attached projected five-year capital building forecast" to the department, with a clause drawing the department's attention to the accompanying information regarding population shifts and stating that each building proposal would be carefully reviewed before requesting approval from the department.

"How can we submit something we haven't approved?" asked Macdonald Smith. He requested a recorded vote and voted against the submission.

Along with the forecast, the board will submit a list of schools for which it wants approval next year. In addition to the controversial Stirling secondary school, the board will ask approval of an elementary school in Foxboro and renovations, alterations and additions to Tweed-Hungerford Senior Elementary school, Moira Secondary School, Queen Elizabeth School in Trenton, Queen Alexandra and Queen Elizabeth in Belleville, Maynooth School and Bridgewater School.

But construction of the Stirling Secondary School is by no means certain. A committee will be set up to explore other ways of accommodating the students.

"The department is prepared to look at innovations," said Mr. Runacres. "But we're not ready as a county to launch into these other choices."

"The public will have to decide if it wants utopia or practical economics," commented Ralph Weaver of Trenton.

PECI Students Hear Views of Candidates

PICTON (Staff) — Provincial candidates for the Prince Edward - Lennox riding in the Oct. 21 election met with Prince Edward Collegiate Institute students yesterday afternoon to outline party policies and answer questions on their platforms.

Bryan Bearer, New Democratic Party candidate reminded students two issues in the coming election are vital to those who can vote this month.

He mentioned auto insurance and the need for its cost reduction and also spoke of unemployment among young persons.

Mr. Bearer emphasized auto insurance and employment are interwoven since without a job it is difficult to own a car.

He said his party is willing to introduce a compulsory, universal, no-fault driver scheme for a family of four, at approximately one third of the present cost.

Mr. Bearer claimed Canada has been sold "lock, stock and barrel" to the United States by political leaders in past generations.

The situation can be reversed by achieving control of the economy and the creation of job opportunities, he said.

Mr. Beaver suggested his party would make a winter works program available with $15 million to be paid out to the fact they will be erected on their street.

Mr. Tripp added he cannot refuse the sectional home builders a permit because "they are within the letter of the law."

"This is tantamount to a sin in trying to keep in contact with the people," he suggested.

A chemical review board to test and supervise the introduction of all potentially harmful chemical products in Ontario will be set up by the Liberals in the fight against pollution. Non-returnable bottles and non-destructable plastic containers will be banned.

Pollution groups also will receive financial support in their efforts to research cases. Citizens' groups without funds can be "shot down" by government and industry since "you can't fight city hall."

Education will be tackled by the Liberals with plans to abolish grade 13 over a four-year period.

Efforts will be made to tie the community with its schools and schools will be governed experimentally to discover the best approaches to education.

Premier William Davis evidenced his faith in today's young people when he lowered the voting age to prove he is not afraid to involve youth in the political process.

Mr. Taylor said the Conservatives have established ceilings to control educational spending both at the elementary and secondary levels. As of January 1, 1972, the province will pay 60 per cent of the total education costs.

He remarked other parties can promise complete takeover but if 80 per cent of the cost is assumed by the Liberal government, the present bill of $1.5 billion will become $2.5 billion, a figure he termed "a pretty big payroll".

Mr. Taylor noted the extra funds can be raised through increased taxes and sales tax.

The candidate stressed young people are "our finest natural resource" and said the best teachers are needed for them.

He referred to youth-gear ed programs such as the 1968 Inter - departmental advising committee set up on youth and chaired by Dr. Richard Potter, militster without portfolio.

The Conservative party is concerned with pollution and last June passed the Environment Act covering even unknown pollutants.

A no-fault auto insurance program concerning personal injury will be introduced next year.

Mr. Taylor disagreed with the need for an ombudsman and stated that each MP should serve his riding in this capacity.

He challenged the NDP stand that today's youth is faced with "a mess" involving unemployment.

The Conservative candidate cautioned, "Don't be crepehangers, you have a great country and you are going to be its leaders."

He added nationalization is a policy the NDP creates only more civil servants and referred to a takeover of the news media in western Canada. He called this "the first step of a dictator."

"There is unable more precious than the person and the dignity of man," he finished.

Student questions touched on regional government and Mr. Taylor candidate's future plans concerning their present jobs if elected.

Yesterday's discussion was organized by a group of six PECI students representing each of the three political parties. Chairman was Ana Lynn Walker, a PECI student involved in student politics.

WHAT COUNTS MOST IN BUYING A HOUSE?

The dominant consideration is where it is located. Construction problems can usually be remedied but where you live can only be changed by moving.

To most people location usually means a spot on the map. It is much more than that. It includes the character of the neighborhood, the economic and social standards and the type of community with its shops and schools and local government.

It is for these reasons experienced Realtors usually give it top priority.

But despite the obvious weight of this all-important factor in judging property, many buyers may confuse it in importance with such things as the heating and a dozen other points of lesser significance.

Location means anything that bears on marketability and a property's price except the type and condition of building and grounds.

A professional Realtor is a location expert. His knowledge of location underlies every assessment. It is being up-dated daily by experience and information-gathering and it is yours for the asking.

Developer to Get PO Project Brief

TRENTON (Staff) — Councillor Ted Parker reported to council last night that a brief has been forwarded to post office project developer David Linden outlining the positions of owners of properties that must be assembled for completion of the scheme.

He said that he and Councillor Pete Aziz had discussed the possible sale of the lands to Mr. Linden and that Mr. Linden will be sending council a letter outlining his position sometime this week. The matter will be discussed at next week's regular committee of the whole meeting.

Mr. Linden told The Intelligencer this summer that asking prices for properties around the old post office on Dundas West were unrealistic. Without securing them the post office project as originally planned would not go ahead.

The Name Game

What's in a name? The Ontario Hospital Service Commission has a point when it suggests the "Lodge" in Queen's Lodge sounds too much like an old folks home.

A new name is being sought for the Queen's Motel on Dundas Street East, scheduled for conversion into a convalescent, extended care hospital allied to Belleville General Hospital.

We do not know who has the final word — the OHSC apparently, for according to hospital administrator Philip Rickard the commission has not officially approved any name. One that has been mentioned, however, is Queen's Pavilion, but that sounds equally unimaginative; pavilions, if no one in the OHSC has thought of it already, are related more in the public mind to sport — although, admittedly, the dictionary has it also as "any of the separate or connected parts of a group of related buildings, as of a hospital or sanitarium."

So what other possibilities are there? Queen's Annex . . . Queen's Acres . . . Queen's Concourse. Or maybe some completely different name would be appropriate, but whatever the choice it should be that of the hospital administration and board here whether the OHSC likes it or not. When it comes to having the bureaucrats in Toronto pick a name for such establishments then we must surely be closer to 1984 than we had imagined. However, we do agree with the OHSC's thoughts on "lodge."

As for the Queen's Motel, its life as a motel and restaurant drawing to a close, there is a sense of loss to the many people locally and from beyond, tourists and businessmen, at its passing as a fine hostelry and eating place.

Fires Costly

There is a billboard ad on display at the moment which points out that fire can break your heart. An unusual analogy perhaps, but is there anything indeed, more heartbreaking in its devastation and material loss, not to mention the lives that are often taken?

A note in the current bulletin of Belleville Rotary Club says that property loss in Canada in 1970 was $203,000,000. This was $6 million more than in 1969 and far ahead of the $160,-000,000 of 1968. Nor do these figures include losses from forest fires and government establishment fires.

According to the Dominion Fire Commissioner indirect losses from fire, including production stoppage and unemployment, are five times the direct loss. Overall loss to the economy, he says, is $1,000,000,000.

Lottery?

Faced with the need of two hospital elevators at a cost of some $206,000, a third of which would have to be met by the city, Mr. Joyce feels this could be readily and more fairly met by establishment of a lottery.

For one thing lotteries have the sanction of the provincial government; for another thousands of dollars are going out of the country as it is — notably to the Irish republic for the benefit of its hospitals, as well as to European lotteries.

Why not provide an opportunity to channel such funds into areas of need at home?

A chance exists to do just this, to provide Belleville General with its new elevators.

Police Patrols

The current need for two-man police patrols at night in Belleville may be just another sign of the times, or it may be only a sudden flare-up in nocturnal misbehavior by some of the more rowdy elements in the city.

Certainly we are aware of the increasing instance of break-ins and theft, not to mention the occasional outbreaks of vandalism; but for all that Belleville remains one of the most law-abiding communities in the province. In the sense at least of being relatively free of homicides and serious assaults against the person.

Chief Crosbie's decision nevertheless is a wise one. We have an efficient police force here, and a busy one. They deserve our support; as a community this means backing any measures aimed at facilitating the work of the force. The two-man patrols at night are in line with this premise.

P.M. Better Off the Cuff Than at Set Speeches

By RICHARD JACKSON

OTTAWA — So Donald Peacock, newspaperman-turned-political - publicist - turned - government-information-czar, dreamed up "The Just Society".

Offered it first to the boss at the time, then Agriculture (now Energy, Mines and Resources) Minister Joe Greene, was told he was nuts, so gave it to Pierre Trudeau when he joined the Prime Minister's staff.

And you know what Pierre Trudeau did with the "Just Society" — did not explain it or make any promises as to what it would bring, but used it as the star-phrase to which he hitched his winning campaign wagon.

The "Just Society" was — and it if still exists, remains — well, OK, but to be blunt about it, a gimmick.

A speech-writer's gimmick.

A good one, though, chosen by the phrase-wise Prime Minister in preference to another goodie, the "Enterprise of Integrity".

What do they mean?

Who knows? Or cares? As long as they sound well and conjure up good and positive thoughts.

So who is gimmicking the gimmicks now?

Well, the leaders all — except Social Creditiste Réal Caouette — have their wordsmiths.

Pierre Trudeau has a staff of them headed by, an appropriately - named hood, Ivan Head.

A former Calgary University professor, he does what the Prime Minister's staff calls the "biggies" in the speech department.

It is the thing to say — and even Liberals do not mind saying it — that Pierre Trudeau cannot make a speech.

He cannot.

The speech, usually, is first rate, good, solid, sense-making stuff with nice turns of phrase.

His difficulty is he cannot read it without making it sound like a written classroom lecture.

He "whizzes along," one sympathetic staffer in the PMO powerhouse related, "so damn fast you lose the punch-lines".

But off the cuff, especially in question - and - answer dingdongs, he rings a bell.

With an election racing or careening ever closer, the speech-writer is becoming The Big Man in any party leader's office where campaign itineraries and entourages are being roughed out.

Conservative Leader Stanfield relies on a team of writers who have become attuned to his quiet wry wit and increasingly able to pace his speeches more and more on the upbeat.

The "Top Typewriter" could be Tom Sloan, former Toronto newspaperman - turned - university - professor. Big on hard-facts.

He is backed up by former radio station program manager Bill Grogan. Slick with the punch-lines.

Rod McQueen, former London, Ontario, newsman and columnist-writer, and Murray Coolican, who came out of university to go with Robert Stanfield when he won the leadership, look after the research and are free to do what they can as "joke men".

Stanfield, insists the team, takes the co-operative effort-and refashions it after his own style, with a touch here and a switch there.

New Democratic Leader David Lewis has two on his staff who insist all they do is "research" the speeches, coming up with the required factual and statistical background required for whatever the chosen subject.

Both are former newsmen, Murray Weppler, who covered the Ontario Legislature for The Ottawa Citizen, and Lewis Seale, graduate of the Toronto Globe and Mail's big Ottawa bureau.

"David Lewis does the writing," says Lewis Seale, "Murray and I are only the legmen."

Former Prime Minister John Diefenbaker had the hottest speech-writing team going in years, ex-newspapermen Thomas Van Dusen and Gregor Guthrie.

Van Dusen now bats it out for Privy Council President and Government House Leader Allan MacEachen, being versatile and hyper-talented enough to turn the stuff out for anyone, Liberal or Conservative, although perhaps not New Democratic.

Guthrie and Van Dusen "talked" rather than actually wrote Dief's speeches. There the three of them would sit, vastly enjoying the exercise, kicking around fighting phrases and honing honeyed words, cackling out wisecracks and dropping apt quotations from Churchill, Lincoln, Washington, Gladstone, Eisenhower, Ghandi, Socrates, Joe E. Lewis and Jack Benny alike.

It was tremendous fun. And Dief would jot random thoughts, theirs and his, down on slips of paper and lay them like tiles on his office floor, gathering them up later, all in order, to make a well-structured — if loose enough for improvisation when timely — speech.

Somebody usually opened the office door before it was all done and the notes scattered like Autumn leaves in the breeze, an accident that sometimes accounted for a certain lack of continuity. But the raw material was always there in loose-leaf form, and Dief knew how to use it with greatest impact.

"Speech - writing is a ghost profession, but some of the phantoms back of the men on the podium are livelier than others.

The Comparison with Europe

North America's Crummy City Core Areas

Whaley Free Press

In the ancient cities of Europe the old city centres age gently, become quaint, picturesque, something to be admired and photographed by tourists. In North America the old centres become repulsive and dangerous slums. Much thought and money have been expended on projects to restore American city centres to their old role. In Winnipeg, millions were spent by the Centennial Corporation and the city of Winnipeg, and the Main Street area is now resplendent with a concert hall, a museum, a planetarium, a theatre, a city hall and even a glorious police station with up-to-date lock-up facilities. Yet all this multi-million dollar splendor sticks out like so many sore thumbs amidst the pawn-shops, junk shops, wooden shacks, and, above all, cheap beer parlors.

One of the reasons why the Royal Alexandra Hotel could not be converted into a hospital, or so we are told, is that no nurse would dare to go on or off shift in that neighborhood. When performances take place in the huge complexes, dead during the day and at week-ends, people hurry through the underground tunnel to and from their cars or hurriedly cross the street from or to the waiting buses, if get out of the region as fast as possible. There is no lingering there in pleasant after-theatre supper restaurants, or in cafes, as there is in almost every other capital. It is a huge wasteland.

The question has never been answered whether a city, which is a living organism, can really be rejuvenated, whether those limbs that have died can be restored with new life pulsating through them. The Lincoln Centre was a huge debacle. Winnipeg's centennial centre threatens to become a similar debacle, and the Main Street Merchants' Association is only too right in pointing to its members' plight. There is a blighted area and there is only one way to attempt an improvement — to eliminate all the multiplicity of cheap hotels which are really nothing else than glorified beer parlor hang-outs of the city's alcoholics. A bylaw that would keep each such hotel at least a mile apart from its nearest competitor would do much to clean up the neighborhood.

Whether it would be sufficient is hard to say. But it would be a beginning. The general idea that if there is enough money everything will turn up roses just does not work. Eight-million dollars or more spent on the centennial buildings did nothing for the area. The beer parlors would have to go first. Only then could one begin to plan for parks, apartment blocks, shops and restaurants that might bring new life to Main Street. Whether or not they would, or whether city life has definitely moved out west, leaving this area as a decaying slum, is something only the future will tell.

Hunters Must Observe Property Rights

Kingston Whig - Standard

The guns of autumn have begun to sound once again. The invasion of the countryside is under way.

Hunting is not a right, but a privilege granted by licence. It is a privilege which too often is abused by those whose least concern seems to be for the safety and property of others. Once out of the city they seem bound to adopt the attitude that the rules of safety and decency no longer apply.

Some hunters, for example, seem to believe that all land in this province is theirs to use or abuse as they see fit. They trespass on private property and are outraged when any farmer or other land - owner has the temerity to forbid, by sign or otherwise, entry on to their property. These persons — while a minority — are becoming a decided nuisance; a menace to property and the lives of other humans as well as livestock.

The curious fact about this whole problem is that most private lands are accessible to hunters — just so long as they ask permission to enter and observe the rules of safety and decency. Each year countless pleas are made to hunters to respect the rules. It seems obvious, however, that the pleas have fallen on too many deaf ears to ignore the seriousness of the situation. The result is that more and more rural landowners are denying hunters the privilege of hunting on their property.

As we have pointed out many times, right, in this matter, is all on the side of the property owner. Hunters have no right to enter any man's property should that man deny permission whether by voice or sign. Considering the selfish and dangerous attitude displayed by a number of hunters each year, the farmer or land-owner can be blamed if he bars all hunters from entering his property. And if he needs official help in ensuring that his wishes are respected it should be given willingly and with determination.

A Look at Sesame Street

Brockville Recorder and Times

What's this?

First the British Broadcasting Corporation bans Sesame Street as "too suburbanian." Then a homegrown psychiatrist slams the highly acclaimed series for children as "too stimulating."

Were we all led astray by the almost universal praise lavished on Sesame Street when it first appeared? Or is it merely a case of a few belated sour grapes?

In the first instance, British supporters of "Street" do, indeed, suggest that the BBC is jealous.

"Obviously, it's hard for them to conceive that anyone can do anything better than the BBC," says reading researcher Sir James Pitman.

However, Monica Sims, head of BBC's children's programming, says she is "particularly worried about the program's authoritarian aims. Right answers are demanded and praised . . . "

As for the psychiatrist, Dr. Natalie Sahiness, her criticism is that program elements come at children "at such a rapid rate that they have hardly time to absorb it, let alone think what it is.

"There is a kind of keyed up quality that these children will develop from watching this program over and over," she told a U.S. Senate subcommittee. "They will have no tolerance of an empty second anywhere."

Kids will learn, she says, if we will just leave them alone and make reading or other things interesting and show that we like to do it ourselves.

It is the problem at least as old as Socrates: How on the one hand do you import great quantities of dry knowledge to kids without making schools into "grim and joyless" places, as some critics claim they are today, and how on the other hand do you make learning the exciting adventure without succumbing to the superficial and the flashy?

The 2,000 years no one has come up with an answer acceptable to everyone, including the kids themselves. Thus we shall probably still be experimenting with teaching gimmicks and arguing about their effectiveness 2,000 years from now.

Ann Landers

'Model' Son Behaves In A Brazen Manner

Dear Ann Landers: I am heartsick and I need your opinion. Did I do the right thing?

Bud is nearly 21, the oldest of three boys. He lives at home, attends college and worked full time all summer. All our friends consider Bud a model son.

My husband suspected that he had been bringing girls to the apartment which he occupied since June. (The apartment is actually part of our home and has a separate entrance.) He talked to the boy about moral values and promiscuity but did not make any accusations since he had no proof. Aug. 1, the apartment was rented and Bud moved back to his room in our home.

Two weeks ago I went to Bud's room to awaken him for school. I found him sleeping with a strange girl. This was two days prior to a family reunion. The house was full of relatives. I ordered the girl out, but said nothing to my husband for fear he'd take the roof off the place, regardless of the relatives. I told my son I wouldn't tolerate such bizarre behavior in the future and if he did it again he'd have to leave.

This morning I found him in bed with another girl. I ordered them both out and told my son to get out—for good. Tonight I had to tell my husband and he backed me up.

What a bitter decision for a mother to make. I am heartsick. But there are two younger children to consider. I am sick with worry about the boy's future. What would you have done? What can we do now?—No Name Please.

Dear N.N.P.: You did the right thing. That "model" boy behaved in a most brazen and inconsiderate manner. I can't see that you had an alternative. You had to kick him out.

If the boy wants to come back—with the understanding, of course that he will never again repeat the insult—I would give him another chance.

Dear Ann Landers: If I am paranoid, infantile or just plain nuts I wish you would tell me. I'm beginning to question my own sanity. Here's what happened.

My husband and I, were invited on short notice to a party at the home of some friends. My day became unbelievably crowded (the dog got sick, my mother-in-law broke her glasses, the bank called me to come down and verify a signature) and I had to cancel my beauty parlor appointment. My hair was a mess so I decided to wear a silk turban which matched my dress. When we arrived, the hostess asked me if I wanted to remove my hat. I said no. A few minutes later she asked again—adding, "Aren't you roasting?" I said, "I'm just fine." Soon she was at me again. I told her my hair was awful and I wanted to keep the hat on.

By this time several other guests had arrived and my hair became the main topic of conversation. Finally the hostess said, "Oh, your hair can't be that bad—let's see" and tried to remove my turban. Another guest said, "You're overly sensitive. Shame on you." The more they talked the more upset I became. I left after a lousy time and went home with a terrific headache. My husband says I should have removed my hat and ended the discussion. What do you say?—Alpena

Dear Al: I say the hostess behaved like a clod. If you had appeared in a football helmet she should have kept her mouth shut. Your only mistake was not telling her off and enjoying the evening.

Dear Lisa: Mother may bold with the fiction that boys shouldn't wash dishes or do "women's work". She may also think of him still as "the baby". Mothers do have blind spots, you know.

But for what comfort it is, you are the one who gains in the end, with or without an allowance, for what you are learning to do. Some day that same spoiled brother may wish he had the sense of responsibility and a job well-done you are developing right now.

You have the edge on him for age. Try making him your friend.

Is it a point of etiquette that is troubling you? Dorothy can tell you how it's done in Canada.

Pitted Black Cherries Make Excellent Pie

By MARY-MOORE

For years I have yearned for one of our Canadian canning plants to pack sweet black cherries without the pits. Now one of them has done it and opened up a whole new field of easy cherry cookery.

I am a perennial timer and timed myself pitting a can of black cherries and it took me 12 minutes and stained my fingers. Now an ingenious machine is doing it for us.

cherry pie that I predict will have a long run in Canadian cuisine.

SWEET BLACK CHERRY PIE
(one deep 9")

Pastry:
2 cups sifted but not sifted cake and pastry flour
1 tsp. salt
⅔ cup shortening
2 tbsps. butter
2 tbsps. cold water

Filling:
Two 14-oz. cans pitted sweet black cherries drained
1 cup cherry syrup (measured after draining above)
½ cup sugar
3 tbsps. minute tapioca
½ tsp. almond extract

Make filling first for it is cooked and has to be cooled: Into medium saucepan measure the 1 cup syrup drained from canned sweet black cherries. Mix sugar with tapioca well and stir into syrup and cook stirring until thick and 2 min. longer. Cool to room temperature by standing pot in ice water. Add almond extract and drained cherries.

Meanwhile make Pastry by cutting shortening and butter into flour and salt until size of peas. Drizzle in water, tossing with fork until you can pack it into a ball between two spatulas. Roll out half on well-floured board and line 9 deep pie plate. Pour in cooled filling. Cover with remaining dough rolled out to fit top and gashed. Seal and trim edges. Brush top with 1 tbsp. milk and 1 tbsp. sugar mixture. Bake at 425 deg. Fahr. 13 min. then reduce heat to 350 deg. Fahr. for 15 or 20 min. longer. Remember the filling is cooked and this pie does not take as long to bake as a pie filled with raw fruit such as apples or rhubarb.

The Experts Say

Advance Clothes Promotion Unfair

MONTREAL (CP) — Women who are fed up with seeing bathing suits in the stores in February and wool knits in July have an unexpected champion in Montreal manufacturer Irwin (Dizzy) Dizgun.

Besides being unfair to consumers who don't like having either to buy out of season or put up with last year's rejects, he said in a recent interview, fashion is too volatile now for the customary habit of designing and selling three months in advance.

Furthermore, since store buyers commit themselves in May to clothes designed for September, they are forced to proceed with plans to advertise the garments even though a sudden switch in clothes fads has made them outdated.

For example, Mr. Dizgun said, hot pants are the biggest thing going last May. Since the style which finished second among traditionally reads the next season as well, designers planning their fall lines had little reason to fear that hot pants would not still be extremely popular in October.

But by June, the trend was shifting to warm pants, blazers and pleated skirts which hadn't been seen for years.

"Hot pants were out, he said, and "I was embarrassed to see in August a full-page ad for fall hot pants that we had manufactured."

Promoting even slightly out-of-date clothes as up-to-the-minute styles just because a store is stuck with them is unfair to the customer, Mr. Dizgun continued, adding that he was this realization which prompted him to transform the entire manufacturing set-up of Manty K Fashions Ltd.

Since June, his designers and assembly line have been working on an abbreviated schedule—six weeks from design to delivery and market.

What it means is that "we used to have 98 or 100 styles for spring buying and now we're down to 45 or 50."

"Instead of waiting for customer reaction, we must decide for ourselves what is so-called 'in' and right.

"It took a little courage and perhaps a little more money in the bank to begin with, but we find the operation extremely easy now.

"True, we may lose a little business now, but I'm confident we will catch up later on."

Mr. Dizgun said that whereas department store chains used to commit 60 per cent of their clothing budget to advance purchasing, this amount will drop to 50 per cent next year and "I advised them to go to 40 per cent."

The remaining 50 or 60 per cent of the budget will be used for reorders of popular items and mid-ips from manufacturers "who have seen the light" and are on the six-week plan.

Mr. Dizgun said his company is not the only one to break into the shortened regime, but there still a lot of holdouts who are, in his words, "just a little pig headed."

Their stubbornness in clinging to the method of designing three months ahead, he explained, arises from a fundamentalist of trying to be first with a new style by rushing the season.

This worked for many years, Mr. Dizgun said, but now that fashion is so fickle, manufacturers and stores can't afford to sink their funds into styles which may be old before they reach the rack.

Asked about the potential of a four-week schedule, he said it was not technically possible at present.

"Besides, there isn't any need—what woman can afford to change her wardrobe every month?"

MOUNTAIN VIEW — The highlight of the September meeting of Mountain View Women's Institute was a tour through the Brooke Bond Foods Ltd. plant at Belleville.

There were 27 members and one visitor in attendance for the tour arranged by convenor of Canadian Heritage Mrs. Burle Summers. All found the event most interesting and the group was also invited to have coffee at the plant.

On return to the home of Mrs. Clifford Parker, a business meeting was conducted. At this time a committee was appointed to prepare for the short course to be held Oct. 28 at the Wesley United Church.

The hostess was thanked for the hospitality after which she served lunch prepared by the lunch committee, Mrs. Richard Wilson and Mrs. Ken Woodall. A social hour was enjoyed.

Neighbors Are Upset By Sectional Homes

PICTON (Staff) — A group of Simeon Street ratepayers has petitioned town council to halt the construction of sectional homes in their neighborhood protesting alleged discrepancies in zoning and building bylaws and deed restrictions.

Spokesman for a delegation of approximately 15 persons, Stewart Kerr told council Simeon Street residents would like a restrictive bylaw governing the type of housing permitted in the Greenwood subdivision.

Mrs. Mervin Haight, a resident of the Simeon Street neighborhood added that a town bylaw prohibits trailers, and movable or temporary dwellings except in authorized trailer parks and charged that the sectional homes fall in one of these categories.

Town solicitor Jack Ward explained the term "trailer" is expanded by the other references and, in fact, the bylaw applies to trailers, not other types of housing.

Mrs. Haight countered the sectional homes presumably were advertised as movable dwellings and was reinforced in her opinion by Mr. Kerr who said they had been described this way in local advertisements.

Two of the sectional homes proposed for construction on Simeon Street already have been erected but comply with the town's building bylaw and a land use bylaw.

Mr. Kerr remarked he did not object to issuance of building permits but said council must agree when homeowners invest "upwards of $25,000." then develops an interest in future real estate values.

William Lane, chairman of the planning and development committee informed the delegation that solicitor Jack Ward had confirmed council could exercise some control over the type of housing on Simeon Street using discrimination.

Window Smashed

A good night arm is always valuable for baseball and soft ball pitchers but apparently it proved a bonus to a local artist, who made splinters out of Frank's Cigar Store on Victoria Avenue, over the week-end.

The store window with cost $98 to replace, was the best thrown in as an added bonus.

Other minor police action over the weekend included a theft of a stereo player and record tape from a car owned by Gordon Adams of RR3, Picton.

Mr. Adams parked his car on a Front Street parking lot and discovered his damaged window and the theft at 1:23 a.m. Sunday.

Damage to the car was estimated at $15 and value of the stolen goods at $125.

Mr. Kerr balked at the term "discrimination" but was reminded by councillor Lane that it becomes discriminatory when only $25,000 houses can be built on a particular street.

The problem, referred to the planning and development committee for further investigation, was described by Mr. Lane as a matter requiring "a lot of study."

He suggested outside experts probably will have to be consulted to assist council in its decision.

When pinpointed concerning specific objections to the sectional homes, Mr. Kerr said he felt their cost was their strongest fault.

A second member of the delegation said the chimney on the sectional home near her was inferior to her chimney.

Leonard Tripp, Picton building inspector, said he has inspected the sectional house and admitted it does not fit its foundation. Although it is approximately four inches "out", the house passed inspection.

Mr. Tripp remarked a regular house with the same fault would have passed too, since such a variance is the individual home builder's prerogative.

A Simeon Street homeowner complained at this point that construction for the sectional home's foundation began in August and no mention of it was made in a list of building permits presented to council in September.

Mr. Tripp commented the properties were going through the committee of adjustment at the time.

Chairman for last night's committee of the whole session in council, Ross Cruickshank, suggested disturbed homeowners should meet again with the planning and development committee and said he did not support the concept of construction without a permit.

Television Debate Flat As No New Policy Made

By THE CANADIAN PRESS

A televised debate among the leaders of the three major parties dominated the Ontario election campaign Monday, but initial reaction to it consisted of criticism of the format, rather than comment on the subjects discussed.

Economic issues and the subject of grants to separate schools dominated the hour-long program which saw Premier William Davis, Liberal Leader Robert Nixon and Stephen Lewis, leader of the New Democratic Party, restricted to limited answers to questions from two interviewers.

No new statements of policy were made. The only news to come out of the session was the announcement by Premier Davis that he has asked Prime Minister Trudeau to set an earlier date for a federal-provincial conference on the economy now set for Dec. 6-8.

Mr. Lewis had his own ideas about economic conferences Monday, and announced them to a meeting of party workers in Galt. He said an NDP government would hold a conference of government, business, agriculture and labor leaders shortly after coming to power. They would be asked to plan a course for a job-producing economy.

Liberal Leader Nixon also concentrated on economic issues during the day. He criticized the government for taking power from small municipalities, an action which sometimes frustrated their attempts to boost their local economies.

During the TV debate, the opposition leaders and Mr. Davis took familiar stands—on opposite sides of the fence—in discussing the government's recent decision not to extend aid to separate schools beyond the present cut-off point of Grade 10.

Premier Davis reiterated an earlier charge that Mr. Nixon had misrepresented the government's policy. His main point was that grants should not go to the higher separate school grades because they are part of a private school system—and the government does not want to finance the educational system by aiding such schools.

Both Mr. Nixon and Mr. Lewis rejected the premier's stand, saying it was unfair that all separate school grades should not be put on an equal footing with public schools.

On economic issues, the opposition leaders criticized Mr. Davis for not taking any immediate action to relieve unemployment and often the efforts of the United States supplementary duty on imports.

Mr. Davis noted that the government is planning a winter works program and will continue its policy of giving tax credits to corporations for equipment purchases.

The government was willing to wait to judge the effectiveness of proposed federal legislation which would give financial aid to companies affected by the U.S. economic measures. The province was making plans of its own should Ottawa fail, he said.

Out on the hustings, Premier Davis arrived in Ottawa Monday night and was met by a delegation of senior forestry industry officials who said strin gent regulations on logging in Algonquin Park could force many companies to close down.

After the private meeting, Mr. Davis said the government is awaiting the final report, expected in about a month, of the advisory commission on the park before deciding on long term policy.

Mr. Nixon took his campaign to the town of Paris, north of Brantford and in his home riding, where he visited industrial plants and a local hospital.

He blasted the government over a proposal that could see the hospital consolidated with hospitals in Brantford, saying that the maintenance of such community services "is one way that the government can convince industry that the town is a viable economic force."

He continued that theme in Galt, where he attacked government centralization and the regional government program under which "citizens are poorly served."

Mr. Lewis told the Oshawa meeting that his economic conference would not involve any "grandiose grandstanding" but would set out to achieve an inventory of manpower requirements, an estimate of economic growth rates and productivity. It also would try to establish a permanent advisory committee to work with the government's economic planning board.

He also blasted government economic policy earlier in the day in speaking to party workers and later to students at Trent University in Peterborough.

Mr. Lewis will be in Toronto today. Mr. Nixon visits the Stratford area and the Niagara Peninsula. Mr. Davis will tour several communities in the Ottawa area.

House Fails Again To Debate Test

OTTAWA (CP) — The Commons failed again Monday to speak with one voice against nuclear-weapons tests and the planned United States test in the Aleutian Islands in particular.

Liberal and New Democrat MPs have tried three times in the last two weeks to have the Commons condemn the U.S. test proposed for this month on Amchitka Island in the Aleutians.

Such motions require unanimous consent to be put to debate or a vote.

The first motion was denied by voices that seemed to come from Liberal ranks, the second by Donald MacInnis (PC—Cape Breton-East Richmond) and the third by Jack McIntosh (PC—Swift Current-Maple Creek).

In a turnaround Monday, Mr. McIntosh proposed a motion that would protest against nuclear tests by the Soviet Union, China and France, as well as the U.S.

This time, unanimous consent was denied by a shouted "no" from James Jerome (L—Sudbury), parliamentary secretary to Privy Council President Allan MacEachen.

Mr. McIntosh had said last Thursday, when he denied consent to consider a Liberal motion protesting against the Amchitka test, that the Commons should get single out the U.S.

Mr. MacEachen, meantime, made no move to bring in a government-sponsored motion opposing the Amchitka test. He had said last week he would do so Monday provided MPs agreed to limit debate to one speaker from each party.

An all-party group of MPs was being organized in the absence of a clear-cut stand by the Commons to sign a protest against the Amchitka test.

Mark Rose (NDP—Fraser Valley West) would present the protest to President Nixon if a meeting could be arranged.

Pacific coast MPs in particular have expressed fears that a nuclear blast in the Aleutians, situated near a natural earthquake zone, might cause damage along the West Coast.

China Wants Taiwan Ousted

UNITED NATIONS (CP) — The People's Republic of China is expected to say through its spokesman today that it will not sit in the UN while Taiwan is present.

The statement will be made when Albania speaks in the 130 country General Assembly, just a day after State Secretary William Rogers made a strong plea for acceptance of the American two-China proposal.

Albania, long has been the Peking spokesman here and for many years has carried the fight for the expulsion of the Nationalist Chinese of Taiwan and seating of the Communists of Peking.

Accountants Initiated Return of Money

SUMMERSIDE, P.E.I. (CP) — Two men accused of stealing $414,000 from the bank where they worked are free on $10,000 bail each after returning here to face charges.

Accountants Archibald MacLeod, 28, and William MacDonald, 29, returned Monday from the United States without police knowledge and surrendered following a manhunt which involved the RCMP, the U.S. Federal Bureau of Investigation and Interpol, the international police organization.

They were immediately charged with theft of more than $50 and remanded until next Tuesday for plea.

Police Chief S. D. A. Wannamaker of Summerside, who took the pair into custody when they walked into the police station early Monday, said police forces were "in the dark" about their whereabouts and plans to return.

"I knew nothing about it until I got the phone call this morning from their lawyer," he said in an interview.

Charlottetown lawyer Charles McQuaid said one of the suspects made contact with him from "somewhere outside Canada" last week asking that he represent them.

Chief Wannamaker said the pair planned their return last week when MacLeod telephoned his wife here and made arrangements to have Mel Simmons of Toronto, a security agent with the Canadian Imperial Bank of Commerce, meet him in Boston Sept. 28.

MacLeod and Simmons then flew to Phoenix, Ariz., and met MacDonald there Oct. 1.

The three flew to Los Angeles where some money had been deposited in a bank and returned to Buffalo, N.Y., rented a car and drove to Toronto.

Chief Wannamaker said they flew to Saint John, N.B., rented a car and arrived here shortly after midnight Monday. After making contact with Mr. McQuaid they surrendered to police about 7:50 a.m.

Police said they all but $3,900 of the $414,647 taken in the theft was recovered. Except for $11,000 in U.S. funds, the money was in Canadian currency.

Neither man would answer reporters' questions when they appeared in court and their actions also refused comment.

The MacDonalds have four children and the MacLeods two.

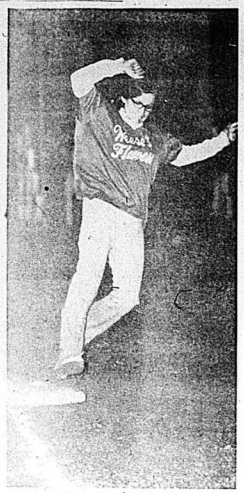
The theft, described by police as the largest in the province's history, was discovered by officials of the Canadian Imperial Bank of Commerce branch here at about noon Sept. 9 after MacDonald and MacLeod, the bank's accountant and assistant accountant, respectively, failed to report to work.

Not Easy Picking

Even when they held a 3-0 lead in their Women's Softball finals series, Cosy Grill must have been aware that they weren't picking any pansies by meeting Weese's Flowers.

Weese's had won the regular season pennant and then staged a comeback win in the semi-finals after trailing Dairy Queen 2-1 in the best - of - five series to prove they were quite capable of bouncing back.

Monday night they bombed Cosy 10-2 to stop the Grill team for the fourth time in their attempt to capture the league championship.



The final series now stands at three wins apiece with one game tied.

Donna Brant hurled a seven-hitter with three strikeouts and one walk to best second opponent Sandra Claus who yielded 12 hits for the losers. She fanned three batters and issued no walks.

Brant aided her own cause by slamming two triples while Irma Barberstock and Charlene Quinn each had two doubles and a single. Centre fielder Lil Barberstock added a pair of singles and made the outstanding defensive play of the game with a running, one-handed grab in the fourth inning.

Verna Hill paced the Cosy attack with a homer and single while Sharon Pearce had a double and single.

The deciding game of the series will be played Wednesday at the Alemite Swimming at 6.30 p.m.

Well Armed

Irma Barberstock of Weese's Flowers gets plenty of arm action as she rounds first base in last night's Women's Softball finals contest. The whole Weese's lineup appeared to be up in arms as well, topping out 17 hits for a 10-2 victory to square their series with Cosy Grill at three wins each.

Novices Open Minor Hockey Season

The minor hockey season will officially start in Belleville Saturday morning when Towers Food City Novice all-stars hold their first open practice at 7.30 in the Memorial Arena.

The city's representatives in Ontario Minor Hockey Association play will be conducting open tryouts on an open basis for the next two weekends, and on an invitational basis after that.

Rollins Construction peewee hopefuls hit the ice Saturday at 9.15, followed by the Kinsmen Bantams at 11 Sunday, the Blake Kerr Imperial midgets hold their first practice at 9 a.m., followed by the Western Tire juveniles at 10.45.

The Wilson Concrete Tykes, coached this season by Ted Scoke, will be formed from house league players later.

Scoke, Food City's Leroy McBrien, and the bantams' Doug Murray are new faces on the all-star coaching scene this winter. Leroy Hedge will manage the novices, while Murray will be aided by assistant Dave Jones and manager Ron Hutchinson.

Ken Brooks will again be at the helm of the Rollins peewees, who will be managed by Carl Cozns. Robb Burrowes returns as coach of the Imperial midgets, with Jerry Murphy as manager, and coach Lou Steeke and manager Marsh Hopkins will again operate the Western Tire juveniles.

Meanwhile, minor hockey executives are up to their knees in house league participants. The annual registration, which closed last weekend, enrolled 1,375 house leaguers, 210 more than last year, and organizers are working them into 82 teams.

Only One Helped

TRENTON (Staff) — Bayside Secondary School generated a pair of touchdowns, but all they were able to manage for their efforts were a 6-6 tie in their Bay of Quinte COSSA junior gridiron battle with Napanee yesterday.

A major score by Al McIntosh gave Bayside the lead, but their offensive unit fumbled the ball in their own end zone later in the game to allow Napanee to salvage the 6-6 deadlock.

It was the second game ever for Bayside, who opened the season with a 14-6 win over Centennial. Napanee now carries a record of 1-1-1.

Bruce MacGregor, who thought of retiring from hockey last February after being traded to New York Rangers by Detroit Red Wings, showed Monday night that the summer layoff has not hurt him a bit.

The right winger notched a pair of goals on home ice as the Rangers breezed to a 4-1 win over Boston Bruins in the only National Hockey League exhibition game Monday.

KINGSTON (CP) — Kingston Aces of the Ontario Hockey Association Senior A series scored two goals in the final three minutes Monday to eke out a 4-4 tie with Tuba Oilers of the Central Hockey League in an exhibition game.

CLEVELAND (AP) — Oakland Raider coach John Madden cited two interceptions, including one which set up a field goal at the end of the first half, as turning points in his team's 34-20 victory over Cleveland Browns before a sellout crowd of 80,285 in a nationally-televised National Football League game Monday night.

Orioles Threaten Sweep

Powell Power Too Much for A's

OAKLAND, Calif. (AP) — "When we're playing our kind of baseball, ain't nobody gonna beat us," says Baltimore first baseman Boog Powell.

Powell, playing his kind of baseball—which is power hitting —despite a sore right wrist and hand, slammed two home runs Monday as the Orioles beat Oakland Athletics 5-1 in Baltimore.

The Athletics were down to their last chance today in the American League playoffs.

The Orioles' eighth victory in as many American League playoff games over three years gave them a 2-0 lead in the best-of-five series which moved here for the third game today.

With Oakland's two 20-game winners—Vida Blue and Jim (Catfish) Hunter—beaten, the role of stopper was assigned to 19-game winner Diego Segui. Baltimore manager Earl Weaver countered with Jim Palmer, one of his four 20-game winners.

"We want to get it over with if we can," Weaver said Monday. He added that he wasn't counting on a sweep.

Williams admitted that he had said, after the Athletics had clinched in the American League West Division, that the Orioles wouldn't win in three straight, but he pointed out: "You haven't heard me say it the last two days."

Powell almost did not make the second game because of a reinjured right hand which was hit by a pitch late in the season and strained while sliding in Sunday's 5-3 victory.

In fact, the 260-pound slugger who had been left-fielder Mike Cuellar a 2-0 lead with a home run in the third inning, tried to bunt before he hit his clinching, two-run homer in the eighth.

"Earl told me if you can't swing the bat, lay one down," said Powell, who said he couldn't grip the bat well. The left-handed slugger fouled off a bunt attempt before homering to right-center field.

"Even though his hands hurt he looks like 900 pounds up there, and he can hit," said Hunter, who also yielded homers to Brooks Robinson and Ellie Hendericks.

The 31-year-old Cuellar gave up leadoff doubles in the second and sixth innings and a leadoff single in the third but the Athletics couldn't cash in. Oakland's only run came in the fourth on Sal Bando's double and Dave Duncan's single.

Cuellar helped himself in the fifth when he picked the speedy Bert Campaneris off first base following a one-out single and he might have been helped by Tommy Davis' surprise sacrifice in the sixth. It surprised Williams, too.

With Jackson on second with a leadoff double, Davis, the cleanup hitter, gave himself up with a bunt that moved Jackson to third. But Jackson was stranded when Bando grounded out and Angel Mangual flied out.

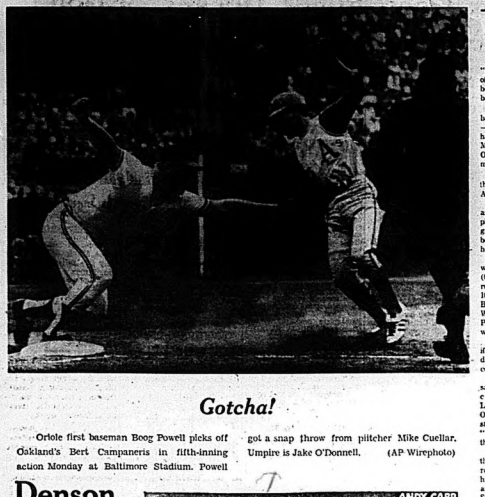
"I would have preferred to see him swing, but he was just trying to do his job," Williams said in explaining that Davis had sacrificed on his own. "He was trying to make sure of getting that runner over."

Jackson's double turned out to be the last of Oakland's six hits and Davis's sacrifice the beginning of a 12-out string Cuellar fashioned to end the game and keep the Orioles unbeaten in the three years of league playoffs.

Bookies Refusing to Accept Bets on Baltimore

LAS VEGAS, Nev. (AP) — Nevada's legal bookmakers stopped taking bets Monday on Baltimore to win the American League pennant after the Orioles went 2-0 ahead of Oakland Athletics in the playoffs.

Pittsburgh Pirates were a 13-to-10 bet to take the National League title.



The Orioles were a 9-to-2 favorite to win the third game in the American League playoffs for a three-game sweep over the Athletics.

Sore Loser?

BALTIMORE (AP) — The charter flight taking Oakland Athletics from Baltimore to the West Coast was delayed for more than a hour Monday after authorities at Friendship Airport received a telephoned bomb threat, airport police said.

There was no longer a price up on Baltimore to win the playoffs, something that would require only that they win one of the next three games.

San Francisco Giants, with Juan Marichal scheduled to pitch, were 6-to-5 favorites in the third game of the National League playoffs. Pittsburgh, however, was still 13-to-10 to take the pennant series.

Gotcha!

Denson Ready

MONTREAL (CP) — Montreal Alouettes likely will return to their original backfield when they entertain Toronto Argonauts in an Eastern Football Conference game Sunday.

A club spokesman said Monday that Moses Denson, out for the last seven games because of an ankle injury, will join Bruce Van Ness in the running back position for the Argonaut contest.

Denson's spot had been filled by Bill Massey, a University of Hawaii graduate. Massey was expected to take Denson's place on the 30-day injured list because of a recurring neck injury, aggravated on the Western swing.

Ellis Making Pirate Waves

PITTSBURGH (AP) — If pitching is the name of the game, then Pittsburgh Pirates could be in deep trouble as they go against San Francisco Giants today in the third game of the deadlocked best-of-five National League playoffs.

Pittsburgh manager Danny Murtaugh disclosed Monday that his No. 1 winner, right-hander Dock Ellis, may be through for the playoffs because of an aching elbow.

Ellis, who won 19 games during the regular season and went five innings as the Pirates evened the series at 1-1 with a 9-7 victory in the second game Sunday at San Francisco, is going to be examined by a doctor.

"We're not going to take a chance on injuring him career wise for the sake of one game," said Murtaugh, who sent spot starter Nelson Briles 8-4 out to face the Giants' 18-game winner Juan Marichal today.

Murtaugh plans to use first-base starter and lefter Steve Blass in Wednesday's fourth game against San Francisco's Gaylord Perry. He had Ellis in mind if a fifth game is necessary Thursday, or might use him Wednesday. Perry was a 5-4 winner in the first game Saturday.

Ellis wasn't happy with the scheduled visit to the doctor. "Hell, the season's almost over," he commented. "There's no sense in seeing a doctor now."

The controversial Ellis was the centre of Pittsburgh's day of rest Monday. He rapped Pirates' management as cheapskates, saying he had to spend $50 out of his pocket while the team was in San Francisco last weekend to get a hotel bed big enough to accommodate him. He also said the Pirates should have hired a bigger airplane.

"They, management, don't deserve to win the pennant; don't deserve to win the World Series . . . but we're going to win because we're the best team," he said.

Murtaugh counted upon power to carry the Pirates against the Giants' superior pitching. He's hoping that Willie Stargell, the major league's home run champion with 48, but 0-for-9 in the first two games of the playoffs, finds the range. First baseman Bob Robertson, who is 6 for 9, including three home runs and a double Sunday, has been the big hitter in the playoffs for Murtaugh thus far.

San Francisco manager Charlie Fox, who has a few sluggers in Willie Mays, Willie McCovey and Bobby Bonds, is willing to concede the Pirates their power.

"In any contest it's who has the pitching," Fox said Monday as he and Murtaugh sat in adjoining rocking chairs in Murtaugh's stadium office. "You Giants' superior pitching. He's hoping that Willie Stargell, the major league's home run champion with 48, but 0-for-9 in the first two games of the playoffs. finds the range. First baseman

Imlach Last of Dying Breed

By BRUCE LEVETT
Canadian Press Sports Editor

Winning the Stanley Cup, once the dream of every coach, has become something of a nightmare since the National Hockey League expansion of 1967-68.

For a variety of reasons, the top pride in hockey has become a ticket to oblivion for the last four Cup-winning coaches.

In 1966-67, Punch Imlach led Toronto Maple Leafs to their fourth Cup under his tutelage. Two years later, he was fired only to rebound as coach of the expansionist Buffalo Sabres.

In the first year of expansion, Toe Blake led Montreal Canadiens to their eighth Cup under his gentle administration. Then he quit, Claude Ruel took over in 1968-69 and retained the Cup for the Habs. When he quit in December of 1970, after 17 years with the club, he said:

The next one to have his name engraved on the Cup was Harry Sinden who led a bunch of undisciplined flakes to the pinnacle in 1969-70 to give Boston Bruins their first Cup since they were Welland.

The following year—1970-71—everybody expected the Bruins to repeat under Tom Johnson, who moved from his job as assistant to general manager Milt Schmidt to follow Sinden.

Instead, the Canadiens came back under Al McNeil, McNeil's reward? A promotion to the Voyageurs, Montreal's American League cousin in Halifax.

Montreal Canadiens — Primarily because you have to stick with the champ. Big Jean Beliveau is gone and there's a new hand on the helm. But Pete Mahovlich has blossomed and rookie Guy Lafleur will be an asset. Returnees include Pete's brother Frank, Yvan Cournoyer, Serge Savard and Ken Dryden, still technically a rookie despite his Cup-winning heroics of last winter.

* * *

Boston Bruins—When you say Phil Esposito, Johnny Bucyk, Bobby Orr, Ken Hodge, Ed Westfall, Derek Sanderson, then add a covey of talented newcomers, then cogitate on the possibility that they may be less than enchanted about last year's wind up, you might just have the formula for victory. If the Bruins had a possible weakness in the past, however, it would be in goal and nothing much has changed there.

New York Rangers—A generally anonymous crew without undebateable superstars who have absolutely no business going fits to the likes of Montreal and Boston. But that's what they'll probably do again this year. Coach Francis, a former goalie himself, has Ed Giacomin and Gilles Villemure back in his old position, which will cause some good shooters some more sleepless nights. Bobby Rousseau is the only really new face on the roster but there's still the matter of filling the large skates of Tim Horton on defence.

* * *

Toronto Maple Leafs—Fourth place again? Well, Dave Keon, Norm Ullman, Paul Henderson, Ron Ellis and goalies Bernie Parent and Jacques Plante generally give of full measure. To improve, Leafs will have to come up with some help. Whether they have won't be provable until later in the season. Toronto finished 15 points behind third place Montreal in last year's final standings; 19 ahead of the Sabres.

* * *

Vancouver Canucks—Fifth place, but only because I'm from Vancouver and this is my story. The Canucks finished seven points behind Buffalo last season and one point ahead of last place Detroit, so sentiment is as good a yardstick as any this year. They have Andre Boudrias, Orland Kurtenbach, Wayne Maki, Rosaire Paiement, Jocelyn Guevremont, Dale Tallon, Pat Quinn and Gary Doak to make things interesting wherever they finish.

* * *

Buffalo Sabres—Punch Imlach says his crew will be the first expansion team to win the Stanley Cup. He was asked that last year" but apparently didn't hear the question. The Sabres are not without talent in Phil Goyette, Gilles Perreault, Gerry Meehan and rookie Dick Martin. Goalie Roger Crozier, if his stomach operation was a success, might turn some of those ties—Buffalo had 15 last year—into victories.

* * *

Detroit Red Wings—The Big Guy is gone after 25 years: and the centre who set up Gordie Howe for a good stretch of those years—Alex Delvecchio—is unhappy over his demotion to part-time employment. Delvecchio missed only one of last year's 78 games and scored 21 goals and 31 assists for the set and best record on the Wings. Now they say he can't stand the long schedule and that he'll be used on the power play and to kill penalties. What Delvecchio says is almost unbelievable. With all the new faces—there are only four returnees from last year—the Wings should sell a lot of programs.

Ottawa to Establish Advisory Health Council

EDMONTON (CP) — The federal government will set up a national advisory council on health made up of professionals, public servants and individual citizens, Health Minister John Munro said monday.

Speaking to a joint meeting of the Association of Canadian Medical Colleges and the Association of Canadian Teaching Hospitals, the minister said the council will help to co-ordinate all the elements the government hopes to introduce into the health system: "The community health centres, the regionalization of hospital facilities, the new emphasis on public health measures, the physician assistant and so forth."

He said he hopes the new council also will identify areas of emerging need.

The government wishes to be sure it gets the views of citizens and how they react to the kinds of care they are receiving—"or not receiving, as the case may be," Mr. Munro said.

"Another large hope I have for the new body is that it can tie health needs and health measures into the larger framework of social policy. Health is bt a component of individual and social well-being, albeit a vital one."

auto industry. The pact provides for customs exemptions to permit a more integrated auto and parts manufacturing industry.

In an interview outside the Commons, External Affairs Minister Mitchell Sharp said the energy talks so far have covered only oil. Since November there have been no effective restrictions on Canadian oil flowing into the United States.

He added that "we just haven't got time" to continue the energy talks. "Everybody's all tired out."

Mr. Stanfield told reporters this is a time for continued Canada-U.S. dialogue, rather than breaking off talks.

"It's hard to see how that's any part of a rational game plan to protect the best interests of Canada at this time. It looks like petulance."

Asked if he saw the government's refusal as retaliation against the U.S. supplementary duty, Mr. Stanfield said:

"It's hard to interpret in any other way."

The talks followed a 1969 meeting between President Nixon and Prime Minister Trudeau. The two countries agreed to talk about energy trade and the then-existing U.S. oil quota restrictions in particular.

The U.S. is understood to be seeking more Canadian natural gas, electricity and water while Canada wants to sell more oil and uranium.

Mr. Benson reiterated that removal of the auto-pact safeguards are not a precondition to U.S. removal of the supplementary.

"There has been no statement by the United States authorities that if we did such and so they would take off the surtax," he said.

Michael Forrestall (PC—Dartmouth-Halifax East) asked Finance Minister E. J. Benson whether the government is considering reorienting its defence purchasing in response to a possible request from the United States.

"No concessions whatsoever have been made or are being considered," Mr. Benson replied.

United States officials, however, did "feel this exchange of defence procurement had worked out far better than they would like to see us do in the long run."

Mr. Benson also told Mr. Lewis he is not aware of any impending U.S. request for Canada to adopt measures which would reduce the U.S. balance-of-payments deficit by $1 billion.

"As a matter of fact, as the current account we are running at a deficit with the United States," he said.

T. C. Douglas (NDP—Nanaimo-Cowichan-The Islands) asked about reports that Prime Minister Jean-Luc Pepin told Texas businessmen there would be no radical crackdown on foreign-owned companies in Canada.

"To say it is not going to be a crackdown would not, I am sure, be to say there must not be some measures taken to ensure greater control of our domestic and economic environment," Mr. Trudeau replied.

Perry Ryan (PC—Toronto Spadina) asked whether the government is considering action to compel more processing of raw materials and more research and development in Canada.

No, said Mr. Trudeau, but the government is providing great incentives through taxation policy to achieve those ends.

Mr. Benson told Mr. Lewis the next surtax talks between U.S. and Canadian officials will take place later this month at a meeting of the Group of 10, the richest non-Communist nations.

TV Debate Sharply Criticized

TORONTO (CP) — The leading characters and a good portion of the viewing public were sharply critical of the format of Monday night's televised debate among the leaders of Ontario's three major political parties.

All three party leaders expressed dissatisfaction with the formas of the program, which was produced jointly by CBC television and station CFTO, Toronto member of the CTV network.

After the taping session earlier Monday, Premier William Davis said he was disappointed he found himself "a little frustrated" because of the format.

"I was not always able to reply to charges directed at the government."

Robert Nixon, Liberal leader, called the debate "stylized" and said he was most upset with the time limit allotted to each speaker.

Stephen Lewis, leader of the New Democratic Party, watched the debate on television at his Toronto home. He said he thought his performance was adequate but he too expressed displeasure with the format.

Crude Oil Found on Sable

HALIFAG (CP) — The discovery of crude oil off Canada's Atlantic coast was reported for the first time Monday and Premier Gerald Regan of Nova Scotia immediately hailed the find as "most significant."

The crude oil, accompanied by natural gas and condensate, was discovered during tests conducted by Mobil Oil Canada Ltd. at the site of a well sunk on the extreme western tip of Sable Island, an ever-moving sandspit about 175 miles east of here.

Mobil Oil revealed the discovery Monday in a joint announcement with Texas Eastern Transmission Corp., with whom Mobil has an agreement that trades certain rights and interest in the drilling acreage in exchange for exploration capital.

The announcement said the well, known as Mobil Tetco E-48 discovery well, was started last May and a month later, Mobil reported natural gas and condensate flowing to the surface of the bleak island from a depth of 3,000 feet.

The drilling program ended in August when a depth of 11,820 feet was reached and testing was begun at various levels as the drill was withdrawn.

The announcement Monday said 18 zones were tested in the well and the results showed natural gas flowing at rates ranging between 0.16 million to 10.6 million cubic feet a day; crude oil flowing at between 307 and 574 barrels a day, and condensate flowing at between 127 and 1,000 barrels a day.

The well is the second to be drilled on the island by Mobil. An earlier well, 11 miles east of the present site, was abandoned in 1967 after no commercial quantities of gas or oil were found.

The present well lies in the southeastern section of a 1.1-million-acre block, part of more than 33 million acres on which Mobil has permits, either outright or sharing, to explore for undersea oil.

The companies said further drilling would be required to establish the size of productive zones and commercial significance of the discovery. The location and timing of these additional wells has not been decided.

Mr. Regan said he had been informed that the crude oil and condensate were "valuable in a pollution-conscious world" because samples were "almost totally free of sulphur."

The companies said the liquids were "sweet," or relatively free of impurities.

Belfast Parliament In 'Act of Tragedy'

BELFAST (CP) — Prime Minister Brian Faulkner, sitting on one of the world's hottest political seats, faced a new Parliament today—beset by escalating violence in Northern Ireland and harried by rebellion within his own governing party.

Three years to the day since the politico-religious strife burst into violence on the streets of Ulster, Faulkner faced, in the words of The Financial Times of London, perhaps "the last act in the Anglo-Irish tragedy."

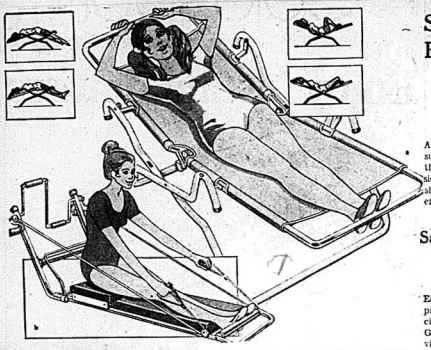
The 52-seat Parliament has been reduced to virtually an all-government party assembly boycotted by all but one of its 15 opposition members.

With the defection of the pro-Roman Catholic opposition, Protestant ranks are divided among themselves as Parliament resumed after a three-month summer recess.

On the streets, four persons have been killed and 13 wounded in the last 48 hours of explosions and shootings. The death toll stands at 118 in two years—27 of them British soldiers trying to keep the peace.

Hardline Protestant rightists accuse Faulkner of not being tough enough in the fight to defeat the urban guerrilla campaign of the Catholic-based Irish Republican Army, dedicated to uniting the mainly-Protestant North with the Catholic Irish Republic to the south.

The rightists, led by premiership-contender William Craig and fiery Protestant evangelist Rev. Ian Paisley, are drawing up a motion of censure with which to confront Faulkner today.



Ulster's one million Protestants—two-thirds of the population—are increasingly restive over the TRA campaign.

Many observers fear that unless Faulkner and the British Army introduce tougher measures that are seen to be effective, a massive Protestant backlash could begin.

But with 14 opposition members of Parliament boycotting the assembly because they believe Faulkner has been too tough, Faulkner is in a dilemma.

Don't Delay Changing Tires

Every year, thousands of motorists are stranded at the first snowfall because of inadequate traction from their summer tires.

"From as early as the beginning of August, area motorists have been purchasing snow tires," said Winston Kreachbaun manager of the Firestone Store located on Pinnacle St. "Many motorists still remember waiting in line for their tires to be installed last year after being stranded in a snow drift, and this year are taking no chances."

Studded tires will not be on sale this year in the province of Ontario.

One of the biggest reasons for outlawing the studded tire was that it was destructive to road surfaces and posed a potential hazard when loose studs flew up from the tire.

"These tires were all right but they were really nothing to get excited about," said a Firestone mechanic. Studs made very little difference in the handling characteris of a car in either hard packed or loose snow. The only application for the studs was on glare ice and even then, if the temperature got low enough (30 below) they functioned poorly.

This year there are several new tires designed to take the place of the tire, including a new all position snow tire.

This new tire allows the motorist to place snow tire traction at every corner of his car.

An important factor in buying snow tires is that the type of tire on the front of the car should match the snow tires that the motorist wishes to purchase.

Mr. Kreachbaun said, "if you are running radials at the front then radial snow tires must be run as well, and so on for belted and four ply tires. If different brands are used, the tires will not perform as safely and tires will show the wear much more quickly."

The important thing is that snow tires are placed on the car. Most cities across Canada are legislating to make it an offense not to be using snow tires. Most cities will not allow chains to be used on their roads. The Canadian government has also proved that chains are not adequate.

Winter driving requires much more caution and care than at any other time in the year, to be as safe as possible, get some snow tires and get them on your car early.

Jean Dixon's Horoscope

For October 6

Your birthday today: Material concerns work out quite well this year with routine persistence in your established work habits, although you tend to seek more of a single-handed approach to vocation and social contacts. Today's natives generally favor progressive ideas, long-range goals beyond their own times, sometimes neglect current luxuries to build for the future.

ARIES (Mar. 21 — Apr. 19): Check financial deals with more experienced advisors, get technical advice where it's appropriate — then give your own inner intuition overnight to digest all the angles.

TAURUS (Apr. 20 — May 20): You may be slightly out of step with people. Stick to schedules if you must, but seek a more reflective moment to appreciate your place.

GEMINI (May 21 — June 20): Another story surfaces to change some of yesterday's talk. There's more set to come, so reserve most comment and action for a while longer.

CANCER (June 21 — July 22): Please of the opposite sex seem to make special effort to be answering or provocative. If you meet anyone, stay with the issues.

LEO (July 23 — Aug. 22): Take care of yourself and your car. Leave the big deals and speculative episodes to the gullible and ambitious.

VIRGO (Aug. 23 — Sept. 22): A close moment permits you to see associates in different perspective. Keen qualities in them which previously escaped your view. But don't react suddenly to these fresh insights.

LIBRA (Sept. 23 — Oct. 22): Any thoughtless remark expands into a good story. Let somebody else start the tale. Preserve your strength for your own endeavor.

SCORPIO (Oct. 23—Nov. 21): People of like mind surround you. Waste no time or energy on opposing whatever minor nuisances exist.

SAGITTARIUS (Nov. 22 — Dec. 21): Re-evaluation is more in order than ever — if you don't do it others will. You have much to do to establish the order you'd like to see.

CAPRICORN (Dec. 22 — Jan. 19): Open mind and heart to simple, true expressions — intuition sorts them out for you. It's time you agreed.

AQUARIUS (Jan. 20 — Feb. 18): Take up all fluid resources not actually in use, settle them in safety and revenue-producing position. There's opportunity, leverage for future action.

PISCES (Feb. 19 —Mar. 20): Despite your own duties and minor puzzles, lend a hand where somebody faces worse. Do so cheerfully.

Dirty Battery Terminals Easy to Fix

Ever wonder why sometimes during starting, your car's battery sounds like it's dying — then suddenly kicks off?

A major source of the problem could be dirty battery terminals or loose connections.

Open the hood of your car. Are the battery terminals covered with what looks like a green moss? If not, are they loose? The green substance is acid build up. When it reaches a stauration point of covering the lead terminals, energy transmission is impaired and starting becomes a problem.

In advance stages of acid buildup, not enough energy is transmitted to even turn the engine over once!

Corroded or loose battery terminals are easy for your local service station mechanic to fix. The investment will be nominal and you'll be free all season long from this "won't start" cause.

The unfortunate thing about throwing your back into something is that you might just throw your back out. And that means pain. Perhaps time off work. And you're unable to enjoy all those nice things that make life worth living.

Think about what happens at work. You've got to move something, or lift it. And it's very heavy. So you either try moving or lifting on your own. Which might be painful. Or you use your head.

Using your head means that first you test the weight. If you can't lift it easily, get some help. That's self-defence. And it works. For you, your family, and your friends.

The sure way to safety is Self-Defence.

First test the weight.

Enjoy all those nice things in life.

Sydney J. Harris Says

We Live in Dark Ages

Man is still living in the primitive world. The division we make between "barbarism" and "civilization" is compounded out of vanity and illusion. Viewed a thousand years from now, our century will seem as much a part of the "dark ages" as the eighth century now seems to us.

What fools us, and sustains us in our illusion, is our growth in technology. Our mechanistic world view makes us think that because of electricity, airplanes, conveyor belts and skyscrapers, we are somehow superior to the Hittites, the Babylonians and the Goths.

But the true mark of "civilization" is civility — that is, good manners at the deepest level of behavior. And our manners are no better than they were a thousand years ago; indeed, given our awesome instruments of technology, our bad manners are now infinitely more dangerous than ever in the past. We are now able to hate more effectively, but we do not know how to love any better. We are able to conduct massive and mutually suicidal wars between whole continents, whereas, in the past, wars were limited to small city-states or duchies at the most. We are now able to poison the air everywhere, pollute all the waters, and make every crop radioactive — even among people with whom we have no quarrel. We have been able to despoil the countryside and make the city increasingly uninhabitable, so that we retain neither the consolations of rusticity nor the advantages of urbanization. Whichever environment we opt for, the discomforts are beginning to outweigh the benefits; and there is no place to live that combines the beauty of the country with the culture of the city — which is what civilization ought to mean.

I was born during one Great War, lived through another, and perhaps will see the third (and final) one before I die. I cannot believe this represents a significant advance in human affairs since "barbarian" times. We are able to keep many more people alive on a retail basis, through progress in science, medicine and sanitation — only to be able to kill many more on a wholesale basis, through battleships, bombs and gas chambers. The 20th Century is the most murderous era of mankind.

Let me not conclude on a bleakly pessimistic note. It need not remain this way; there is nothing inevitable about our fate. But, just as the first step to becoming better is to know you are bad, and the first step to becoming well is to know you are ill, the first step to becoming civilized is to know you are still barbarous. When we stop thinking of ourselves as "civilized," and begin to inquire what the word truly means, we may begin to cross the threshold of humanhood.

Snowmobiles Need Careful Break-in

Like an athlete getting ready for the season, a new snowmobile engine needs proper conditioning before it can perform at its best.

Ten or 15 hours of operation at part - throttle is the key to good performance, thereafter. Snowmobile operators who run their brand new machines at full throttle run the risk of damaging engines.

A second cause of snowmobile engine problems, particularly in the ignition system, is using the wrong spark plug heat range. However, specialized kinds of operation may dictate using specially designed spark plugs. For example, a snowmobile that's mostly operated at full throttle, such as racing, needs a spark plug of a colder heat range to withstand higher operating temperatures.

A snowmobile that's run at lower speeds, such as trail riding, needs a plug of a hotter heat range to prevent premature plug fouling. For machines running in a variety of conditions, standard dealer plugs are recommended.

Both fuel and oil should be of the quality the manufacturer recommends for the engine. Mixing ratios of oil to fuel should be followed exactly. When mixing the elements, make certain both are warm. The mixing should be done in a separate container and then poured into the vehicle's fuel tank. Placing unmixed fuel and oil directly into the tank is an invitation to trouble.

1. Inspect the track for proper tension.

2. Clean and adjust the carburetor to manufacturer's specifications.

3. Adjust the timing to manufacturer's specifications.

4. Clean the gas filter.

5. Check the exhaust ports to see that they are not plugged with residue.

6. Check all drive belts for wear.

7. Check the spark plug wire for signs of deterioration and tightness of connection.

8. Install a new spark plug of the recommended type for the engine and operating conditions. Do not put it in so tight that you damage the threads in the head.

9. If your engine has a battery, make sure the electrolyte level is up. Also, check battery cables and posts for condition and tighten connections.

10. Spare spark plugs should be kept in a clean container or wrapped in rags to prevent oil and dirt from contaminating the plug's surface.

Delay Can Be Costly

A penny saved is a dollar squandered.

That's not how Poor Richard stated the case, but Poor Richard lived in an era before the automobile. If Destitute Dick had been a car owner he probably would have applied another of his famous sayings to the situation — "A stitch in time saves nine."

While most of us today are more careful than ever about how we shell out our money, neglecting needed car maintenance is a false saving. Let's look at the facts.

Most of us depend upon our cars for our livelihoods. Cars take 82 percent of us to work and back. Most of us seek out recreation by automobile, with 86 percent of all travelers using automobiles.

So, particularly in the coming months of winter weather, it is important to keep your car in top running condition, whether we're going to work or play.

How, exactly, does stinting on maintenance lead to potentially major expenditures? Consider these examples:

— Merely washing and waxing your car to keep its body rust free can mean a savings of several hundred dollars at trade-in time.

— Changing the oil and filter at recommended times can prevent premature and expensive engine wear.

— Regular tune-ups can cut gasoline bills, prevent road service bills and, in some cases, head off engine damage.

— Wheel alignments, rotating and balancing tires can make your tires last 25 percent longer.

— General car care makes your car safer and helps prevent accidents. Some estimates state that 10 percent of all fatal accidents can be attributed to neglect of maintenance.

Pre-winter Tune-up Driver's Friend

This was one of the findings of a recent study of hard starting problems. Motorists in the United States and Canada were surveyed on their winter time starting experience and on maintenance performed on their cars during the winter.

Results of the survey indicated:

Motorists who corrected hard starting by charging their batteries had up to three times the incidence of repeated failures than those who had tune-ups performed. Motorists who replaced batteries to correct starting problems still had from 28 percent more repeated trouble (in the U.S.) to 90 percent more (in Canada) than tune up purchasers.

The effect of pre - winter maintenance was also demonstrated in the survey. In the United States, 28 percent of all motorists had starting problems at least once during the winter. Canadian car owners, living in a considerably colder climate, had a 27 percent rate of "won't starts."

Tic or Spasm Can Be Caused By Tension

By G.C. THOSTESON MD

Dear Dr. Thosteson: Our son, 10, has had a terrible twitch in his eye and now it has gone to the whole side of his face (one side only).

It all started when he developed a sty in the eye. The sty went away but the twitch remained and now it seems that every time I look at him he is twitching. Can you give me any advice?—D.B.

This is probably a tic—a tic being a spasm of a muscle or group of muscles, not a painful spasm but, as you say, a twitch. These tics ordinarily affect the eye, face or shoulders. It's not unusual at your son's age. Boys more often than girls.

Quite possibly the discomfort of the sty started it, and it developed into a habit which progressed to the present situation. These tics are purposeless, and I doubt that there is any organic trouble involved.

Keep in mind that emotional tension often lies behind a tic. Any number of things may be involved, such as competition from brothers or sisters, bickering, nagging, school worries, anything of that sort.

Concentration on getting a tic to stop is the last thing you should do. The less you say or do to call his attention to it, the better. He probably will outgrow it, but I suspect that you quietly observe things in general, to see if there is any way to relieve him of whatever 10 year old pressures he may be combatting.

SAME TROUBLE

Dear Dr. Thosteson: Twenty years ago my gall bladder was supposedly removed. Last year I began having the same trouble and it seems to be getting worse. Why?

My doctor says it is gall bladder and prescribes medicine that stops the pains. I have tried to tell him I do not have a gall bladder, but he has only my word for it, and the scar. Is it possible to have the same trouble without a gall bladder? —Mrs. A.P.L.

Quite possible although fortunately not very frequent. But it does happen. Even with the gall bladder removed, you still have the common duct, which carries bile from the liver to the intestine, and it is possible for gall stones to lodge in that common duct.

Dear Dr. Thosteson: I have an elderly friend who takes digitalis for her heart and pills to prevent edema, and she gets along very well except that, whenever she visits a certain relative within a week her ankles swell.

She doesn't do anything she does not do at home. The relative has a water softener, and the water runs through large tanks of salt. The water doesn't taste salty, and the relative says there isn't any salt in the water. Can our relative this above? —F.

The water isn't the same salty, and if you split hairs you could say that it doesn't contain salt—but the purpose of running it through the salt is to substitute sodium (from the salt) for the minerals which make the water "hard."

It's the sodium, rather than just salt, that must be avoided by folks who have too much water in the tissues (edema). If your friend drank only water that has not been softened when she visits that relative, she might find that her ankles wouldn't swell. She could use bottled water.

WHERE THERE'S A HILL THERE'S A WAY TO ENJOY WINTER, whether on a snowmobile, skis, sled or toboggan. Cold-weather sporting opportunities have turned former winter-time hibernators into outdoor enthusiasts. Three Adjustments Vital

Good things — or bad things — come in "threes." Three is the number of key tune-up adjustments that can convert an average car from a polluter to a relatively pollution-free vehicle.

The basic steps in reducing air pollution involve correcting spark plugs misfire, maintaining correct fuel air mixture and making sure timing is set correctly.

Spark Plug Misfire — A two percent rate of misfire can more than double the amount of unburned hydrocarbons.

The two percent misfire is critical since the average motorist cannot detect that his engine is acting up with that rate of misfiretire. So he is not aware there's anything wrong, let alone the fact that his car is polluting excessively. Causes of spark plug misfire include worn out spark plugs, defective ignition system components such as points, distributor cap, rotor or cables.

Overrich Fuel Supply — The function of the carburetor is to mix the gasoline with air and feed the mixture to the combustion chamber. An overrich mixture can result in 200 to 300 percent increased unburned hydrocarbons.

Typical causes of an overrich fuel mixture include clogged air filters restricting the supply of air; improperly adjusted idle mixture and a carburetor in need of servicing.

Timing — While the new anti-pollution devices on cars, some motorists complain about loss of power.

Some auto service technicians will try to compensate for this condition by advancing the timing settings beyond what car makers recommend. As a result the production of unburned hydrocarbons can increase from 10 to 20 percent. In addition, the over-advanced timing can shorten spark plug life and damage the engine, thus increasing pollution even further.

Other incidents of neglected maintenance can increase air pollution. These include using spark plugs of incorrect heat range; use of improper fuel for the engine and failure to keep anti-pollution devices in good working condition.

How do you know other rustproofers won't run out before their guarantee does?

You don't.

Someone who's been in the rustproofing business for two years might give you a lifetime guarantee. But his guarantee might last a lot longer than he will.

Ziebart has been in the rustproofing business 18 years. We pioneered rustproofing. And we've inspired a lot of imitators.

Secondly, it's not only what we use, but how we use it. Ziebart coats every critical area of your car. So there's no possibility for rust.

Finally, our process is so effective we guarantee it. If you have your car Ziebarted before it's been driven 3,000 miles, we'll guarantee it won't rust through for ten years. No matter how many miles you drive it. We put it in writing.*

And if that's not enough to convince you, just ask someone who's had it.

Because he's got a rustproof car. And our long guarantee. Which is our guarantee we'll be around a long, long time.

10 Symptoms to Check

In boxing, a 10-count signifies a knockout. In driving, according to the Canada Safety Council, your car is subject to a 10-count too. That is 10 basic safety flaws and any one of them could count your car out of action.

1. The brake pedal sinks to the floor under light foot pressure. This could mean worn brake linings or a leak of fluids in the system.

2. The car pulls constantly to one side when stopping. Possible causes include poor wheel alignment or brake lining worn on one side or oil soaked on one side, both due to wheel cylinder defects.

3. Excessive play in steering. Likely causes are a worn or faulty steering box, or worn or faulty ball joints, tie-rod ends, relay rods or idler arm.

4. Your car vibrates at 50 to 65 mph. Chances are defective tires, incorrect wheel balance or incorrect alignment is the cause.

5. Steering column shimmies at high or low speeds. Check for looseness in front end, defective shock absorbers or out of round tires with some flat surfaces.

6. Rear wheel locking upon light application of the brakes. The cause is probably a faulty or leaking oil seal.

7. Too much play in the steering while driving. Improper tire pressure or faulty front or rear suspension should be suspected.

8. Excessive noise from the exhaust system. Check exhaust pipe, muffler or tail pipe for damage.

9. Unusual odors inside the car. This could have many sources but signals some engine defect.

10. Directional signal light not working. Check for burnt out bulb or defective flasher unit.

Everybody's talking about pollution but did you know you really can do something about it?

A recent tune-up clinic conducted with a large number of cars by engineering students at the University of Michigan found this: A tune-up did reduce exhaust pollution—a big 55% on the average. Of course, in some cars the reduction was less. But in others, exhaust pollutants were reduced even more.

Please. Won't you make it a point to take your car in for a tune-up? At least once a year or every 10,000 miles.

Regular Tire Checks A Must

More than one-third of all automobiles checked in a recent study had one or more tires in unsafe operating condition. Common faults included underinflation, overloading excessive tread wear or damage.

Check these conditions regularly and replace tires when they have:

— Tread Worn Below 1/16" depth in any two adjacent major grooves, or where ply cord shows. Measure depth with top edge of a penny.

— Tread Worn Down to the level of tread wear indicators, built into late model tires, which appear as solid bands, across the tread surface.

— Tread or Sidewall cuts, cracks or snags deep enough to expose tire ply cords. Also fabric breaks or temporary blowout patches or "boot" repairs.

— Bumps, Bulges or knots, indicating possible separation of tread or sidewall from tire body. Tire should be removed from the wheel and examined by your car service man.

Legal Aid Critics Refuted

TORONTO (CP) — Ontario Legal Aid Plan officials denied Tuesday that the plan does not help the poor.

Lucien Beaulieu, deputy provincial director of the plan, said more than 600,000 people had been assisted since the plan was started 4½ years ago.

He said average cost for each case was $42.11.

Mr. Beaulieu and other officials were replying to a federally-sponsored report released in Ottawa Tuesday, which said the Ontario plan cost five times as much as it should and didn't really help poor people solve most of their legal problems.

Sydney L. Robins, treasurer of the Law Society of Upper Canada, said Tuesday six additional neighborhood law offices are opening in Metropolitan Toronto, raising the number of legal clinics to 10.

He said the figures quoted in the Ottawa report are meaningless unless the basis on which the figures were calculated is made clear.

The report said that legal aid for poor people in Ontario costs $264.13 a case compared with $31 for a more effective system in the United States.

"If you're talking about the number of people provided with a full-scale representation, a trial you will get a much higher figure than if you calculate the cost on the total number of people contacted," Mr. Robins said.

The Ontario plan provides, in addition to full representation, for duty lawyers in all the province's criminal courts to explain legal rights to people without lawyers.

Travel Crippled In North

NORTH BAY, Ont. (CP) — Travel and communications facilities in a huge section of cripped today as Ontario Northern Railway employees remained land Transportation Commission employees continued mass "booking off" to back demands for improved pension plans.

The outcome of the dispute could hinge on a meeting in Toronto today between representatives of the 1,600 workers and commission officials.

Tuesday, when the walkout was initiated, long-distance telephone services were water area were disrupted and normal freight and passenger movements ground to halt along the Ontario Northland Railway's lines.

More than 100,000 persons in the area were affected.

Today industrial shippers in the area began to complain loudly about the disruption in rail service. Which has virtually turned off the flood of minerals that normally flows southward from the many mill-ing towns and pulp and paper producing operations in the area.

Kestall Mining Co. Ltd. at Timmins said it is suffering "terribly" from the walkout, especially the effect on communications and shipping.

No trains moved Tuesday.

At Kam Kotia Mines Ltd., a zinc and copper operation 30 miles west of Timmins, chief accountant Arthur Parise said his firm also could run out of rail cars today and "after that, we're in a jam."

PM's Wife Purchases Layette

MONTREAL (CP) — Margaret Trudeau, wife of the prime minister, made a surprise visit to a downtown Montreal department store Tuesday and in 20 minutes selected a whole wardrobe of diapers, wrappers and baby gowns.

Mrs. Trudeau, accompanied by her mother, Mrs. James Sinclair of Vancouver, was "down to earth" and interested only in basic baby needs "with no frills," a sales clerk said later.

However, Mrs. Sinclair added a yellow stuffed lamb to the list, a gift to the grandchild expected in December.

Mrs. Trudeau, wearing a beige wool midi coat and no makeup, was recognized by shoppers and store personnel but was waited on just as any other customer, the clerk said.

'Sabotage' - - And Hull Is Cleared

BRIGHTON, England (Reuter) — A bomb threat abruptly stopped the annual Labor party conference here today midway through the morning session.

The 2,000 delegates quickly left the hall after police received an anonymous warning that gelignite had been planted in the building. No bomb was found after a 30 minute police search.

The conference had been holding an economic debate at the time.

The bomb scare interrupted a speech by delegate Michael Gordon who had just said: "I accuse this (Conservative) government of sabotage against the British economy."

When he returned to the rostrum he commented: "When I mentioned the word sabotage I did not realize that someone was going to take me literally."

Cabinet Labors Over Winter Works Program

OTTAWA (CP) — Half the cabinet Tuesday night labored at the critical economic situation in a special two-hour meeting.

Finance Minister E. J. Benson was chairman of the meeting of the cabinet's economic committee.

As is customary, there were no announcements and ministers declined comment.

The meeting, in preparation for Thursday's weekly full-dress session of the executive, was believed to have dealt mainly with details of a big winter employment program.

Ministers would not say how much money is involved in the planning.

They said merely they are looking for programs more efficient than municipal winter public works schemes discontinued by the Trudeau government in favor of more manpower retraining.

Prime Minister Trudeau said Tuesday in the Commons that any specific programs to combat winter unemployment will be announced as soon as possible.

He said such announcement will not have to wait for convening of the federal-provincial economic conference, which will deal with unemployment.

This conference now is scheduled for Ottawa Dec. 6-8. But Mr. Trudeau said in reply to Opposition Leader Robert Stanfield that all parties want an earlier meeting.

He said selection of a new date has been made difficult by some provinces changing their minds. Premier William Davis of Ontario—like Manitoba Premier Ed Schreyer—now wanted an October meeting though he had originally suggested a November date.

The cabinet has also been struggling with the problem of trade relations with the United States.

Cabinet sources said there are differences of opinion within the executive about how to handle the situation.

The situation includes U.S. requests for removal of some of the built-in advantages to Canada in the agreements between the two countries on North American car production and purchase of defence material.

Mr. Trudeau repeated that the U.S. has not listed any conditions it wants fulfilled by Canada in exchange for removal of the U.S. 10-per-cent surtax on imports imposed Aug. 15.

FLQ Cell Broken Claim Quebec Police

MONTREAL (CP) — On the anniversary of the start of the FLQ October crisis, police arrested seven suspected members of the terrorist Front de Liberation du Quebec.

"We have broken an FLQ cell," said a spokesman for the combined anti-terrorist squad, which played a major role last year in solving the kidnapping of British envoy James Cross and the kidnap slaying of Pierre Laporte, Quebec labor minister.

Those arrested included a woman, a professor and a Negro. None was immediately identified and their names were not disclosed by police.

Police seized radio equipment, firearms, ammunition and notes referring to an FLQ cell titled "RS." They also found a quantity of paper used by the FLQ for notes sent to the media. It bore the customary 1837 sketch of a gun-toting patriot.

The raids started shortly after an alert policeman spotted a recently repainted car which matched the make of car used in a Sept. 24 holdup of a credit union in Mascouche, 20 miles north of Montreal.

Following the holdup, a note on FLQ letterhead appeared, claiming the organization was responsible for the $3,000 robbery.

Police sought six persons for the holdup which was followed by a shoot-out between townsfolk and bandits. A Mascouche citizen said at the time that a blast from his shotgun hit one of the robbers.

Later, Pierre-Louis Bourret, a junior arts student, was found in a car on suburban Laval suffering from shotgun wounds. He died in hospital two days later without regaining consciousness.

In another raid Tuesday, police found a car in suburban Outremont which they believe may have been used in a Sept. 10 Montreal bank holdup for which the FLQ also claimed credit.

Following that holdup, Constable Jacques Chartrand was shot in the back by a sniper while pursuing three men running down a lane near the bank. Witnesses later told police the shot was fired by a Negro sitting in a car across the street.

Journal de Montreal, without naming the source of its information, says the Negro arrested Tuesday was a member of the revolutionary Black Panthers of the United States. The newspaper says this lent credence to speculation that there has been a link up between the FLQ and the Panthers.

A number of the firearms seized in Tuesday's raids were being put through a series of ballistics tests to determine if any of them had been used in the shooting of Const. Chartrand, who has since recovered from his wound.

Spokesmen for both the anti-terrorist squad and the Quebec Provincial Police are still trying to piece together the events which quickly followed the constable's discovery of the repainted car, which he suspected might have been the one used in the Mascouche holdup.

A search of the car turned up a quantity of detonators and a length of fuse.

The car was placed under surveillance and two men were later arrested when they approached it. A search of them produced a shopping list which included such items as a snowmobile, sleeping bags, warm clothing, M-1 rifles and ammunition, and birth control pills.

A police spokesmen speculated that the gang was planning to hide in a remote area of the province.

The two arrests set up the series of raids which led to the taking of five other persons into custody.

One of the raids led police to the old apartment house on Hochelaga St. overlooking headquarters of the anti-terrorist squad.

Faulkner: Ulster Bleeding to Death

BELFAST (CP) — Northern Ireland is "bleeding to death," says Prime Minister Brian Faulkner, and he will fly to London Thursday for more emergency talks on the violence with Prime Minister Edward Heath of Britain.

Faulkner told the opening session of the Stormont, the Ulster Parliament, that he will try again with Heath to find a peace formula. The session was boycotted by the opposition pro-Roman Catholic parties.

With public galleries emptied for security reasons, Faulkner said Northern Ireland is "bleeding to death as a community, and the first priority must be to bind up those wounds."

Fourteen of the 32 seats in Parliament were vacant because of a boycott by the opposition charging Faulkner with being too tough by jailing 270 suspected terrorists without trial.

Faulkner and Heath conferred a week ago in a three-way summit with Prime Minister Jack Lynch of the Irish Republic.

Their peace plea was spurned by terrorists out to oust Britain from Northern Ireland and unite both Irelands.

Productivity and Health Improve on 3-Day Work Experiment

EDMONTON (CP) — A three-day work week increases productivity and improves the health of employees, says a report released by the city of Edmonton's training and development director.

The report was prepared by D. W. Hiron following a 17-week experiment with a six-day service week in which employees worked three 12½-hour shifts.

Mr. Hiron said that during the experiment, which will be continued until mid-January, absenteeism was zero and workers took less time off for medical and dental appointments because they had more away from the office hours.

"For the first time in the existence of the training branch the staff literally ran out of work," he said.

"For the first time nearly all, if not all, communications were completed on the day they were initiated."

There are 10 workers in the branch and half of them worked Mondays, Tuesdays and Wednesdays. The other half on Thursdays, Fridays and Saturdays. Mr. Hiron worked Tuesdays, Wednesdays and Thursdays to cover both shifts.

All complaints about the experiment were recorded. From now to January working conditions will be adjusted to try and alleviate the complaints.

A majority of the employees agreed that productivity was increased and that they enjoyed the prolonged periods at home.

However, they reacted to the fact that they didn't see members of the other shift from one week to the next and some were demoralized about missing evening football games which fell on their days at work.

Both shifts worked from 8:30 a.m. to 9 p.m. and were given 1½ hours for meals and coffee breaks which they could take when and how they pleased.

Mr. Hiron said the system extended the use of facilities without additional costs, increased service without overtime and increased family contact and family recreation.

Applying four days off to large groups would ease traffic congestion, spread recreation loads, lessen loads on transit and power utilities, lower employee sickness claims and make higher education easier to obtain in spare time, he said.

At the same time, extended shifts allow offices to be used for double duty, cut the need for floor space in half, allow machinery to be used at double capacity and allow better individual achievement.

Mr. Hiron said he found he was able to attend meetings without worrying about undone desk work or crisis situations.

"For one of the first times in my 15-year personal work history I was able to eliminate my backlog of reports, letters, memos and all the loose ends of my job. The relaxed attitude toward both work and home was unbelievable.

"The short work week seems tailor-made for top administrators to solve their personal work problems. Their jobs are to prevent and not put out fires."

Another report on the experiment will be made in January.

Safety of Employees Stressed by Speaker

With the Belleville area's future industrial growth potential, the Monday Rotary Club meeting gave Douglas Farquharson of the Workmen's Compensation Board what he described as chance to further educate business men and "give them a greater awareness of the costs of accidents."

Mr. Farquharson said many businessmen who pay into the Workmen's Compensation Board, do not know exactly what they are paying for. With introduction of the act by Sir William Meredith in 1915, workers gave up the right to sue their employers in the advent of accidents. In return, they received compensation from the WCB, "regardless of negligence," from funds paid solely by their bosses.

However, he explained this does not give the worker or the employer a right of licence. The compensation board maintains a right to be heard for each party in case of dispute.

And although the original plan hasn't changed drastically, the number of claims has noticeably climbed. In the past 10 years, claims have increased by 50 per cent, the WCB representative said.

In fact Mr. Farquharson says an average of 1,400 claims are received each day at the Toronto offices at 90 Harbor Street.

"The standard of safety to the employees will never be any higher than standards enforced by the employers," he told Rotarians.

"We're dealing at all times with the human link. And in 1970, these individuals filed 373,133 claims valued at $131 million.

Not only does the compensation board provide claims to injured and disabled workers, but the board operates its own rehabilitation hospital in Toronto.

Downsview Hospital, operated by the WCB, works directly with industrial employers, retraining them for active roles in the community. Sometimes this training is as simple matter of readjusting the man's position on his job. In more extreme cases, the amputee must be completely retrained for a position akin to his old work patterns.

The file on any injured workman is always kept open even after he returns to work, Mr. Farquharson said, following the Rotary meeting.

"There is no time limit in terms of reopening it."

One of the major breakthroughs in the Workmen's Compensation Act, was the withdrawal of fault clauses. The workmen can now receive compensation for lost working hours and many of bodily functions "without the negligence factor barring him from compensation".

One question asked at the Monday meeting concerned constant reports filed against one company.

The WCB speaker said employers with exceptionally poor accident records are assessed a 100 per cent increase in compensation but if conditions are not improved, this rate will be raised further.

The Workmen's Compensation Board does not have the authority to prosecute an employer who is guilty of maintaining poor working conditions. That situation rests on the shoulders of other government agencies.

Mr. Farquharson reminded industrialists and businessmen at the Rotary Club meeting, that "any industry must be conscious and aware of accident potential," not only for the safety of their workers, but for the reputation of their business.

Cigarette Ad Ban Opposed by Group

Pauline Hill, president of the Canadian Advertising and Sales Association and executive vice - president of Wellcome Wagon Ltd., said at a meeting last night with members here the bid group, "standards must be raised to bring the salesman and the advertiser to a professional level."

This being Mrs. Hill's second visit to the city, for the benefit of new members in the one - year - old group, much time during the evening was spent on a history of the organization and where Belleville stands in relation to other clubs.

"Belleville is one of the smallest groups in the charter (which includes 33 across the country) but makes up for its size in enthusiasm," said Mrs. Hill.

The Belleville chapter is the second newest of the association.

Through the use of a film, Mrs. Hill gave a thorough history of the association, and how the association is attempting to fulfil its objectives.

"Our major operation at the moment is to oppose government, and specifically Health Minister John Munro, in a stringent piece of legislation calling for the control of advertisements for tobacco products," said Mrs. Hill.

In a brief prepared by the association and submitted to every level of Canadian government, members state, "we are unalterably opposed to punitive and discriminatory legislation which tends to hinder the freedom of choice of consumer goods."

The association feels that a ban on cigarette advertisement is not only an infringement of consumer choice but "a threat to our free enterprise system."

While contesting the legislation, the report submitted by the association claims, "in no other country where restrictions have been placed on similar advertising, have the restrictions been as severe as the Canadian government scheme. If they talk of legalizing marijuana, we can place ads for tobacco."

Among Mrs. Hill's accomplishments, she was the first woman ever to enter the Toronto Ad and Sales Club as a member and was the second woman ever to become president of the national body. It is 15 years since the first woman took that office.

Another of the association's aims is to bring recognition to the salesman and the advertiser.

"In the field, we have some of the most enterprising and imaginative people in Canada," said Mrs. Hill.

Through education and raising standards, these people can and will be recognized.

Mrs. Hill also recommends that "vocational teachers study sales courses for their students which, until recently, was seldom done.

"There are 5,500 people across Canada, involved in or association, working to achieve these objectives," said Mrs. Hill.

Signs Requested

PICTON (Staff) — A request for trillium signs advertising Sandbanks Provincial Park forwarded to the minister of tourism and information by Margaret Ackerman will be considered by Charles MacNaughton, minister of transportation and communications.

Fern Guindon, minister of tourism, has notified Mrs. Ackerman that his department is "fully aware" of the tourism potential of Sandbanks park.

Mayor Ackerman said he informed council trillium signs could provided only for tourist attractions serving more than 1,000 persons annually.

She said these signs would represent a great boost to the local tourist association and to... [illegible] area would be ideal for annual corn festivals or maple sugar festivals.

Mayor Ackerman added that Prince Edward County council has given grants to the tourist association in past years and said that reeve Albert Piroth and deputy reeve James Bird now mention this grant to county council.

Dog Catcher After People !

Sidney Township animal controller Don Tucker is about to undertake a third phase campaign to persuade 95 dog owners that it is about time they paid their licence fee for 1971.

The campaign varies according to the breed and sex of the dog but some owners are required to pay as little as $2. Most have already been canvassed or given notice.

Mr. Tucker says there are about a half dozen persons who refuse to pay the fee. One owner says he is holding out until local needs are improved.

Following the phone campaign, next step will be to take the owners to division court where a fine of approximately $10 will be levied.

Any other Sidney council business, a bylaw was passed to provide street lighting for the subdivision of Gorwin Acres, located between Belleville and Trenton south of Highway 2.

End of Season Marks Retirement of Gardener

The last roses of summer are blooming once again for Clark Sprung.

Only this time there's a tinge of nostalgia in the flowering.

As a city parks board gardener, Mr. Sprung's presence has been Corby Park — the pocket-size park on the city's East Hill which has been a horticultural showcase for the past five summers.

Now he's tenderly tending his showpiece for the last time — retiring from a task that made the park a hit with visiting thousands over the years since its opening.

What the people came to see was what brought Mr. Sprung to the park between William and Ann Streets each day from mid-April to late October: Its glittering display of roses.

In all, Corby Park is planted with some 1,700 bushes, bedding with 35 different varieties of roses, estimates Mr. Sprung.

His job has been to ensure the display renewed its daily brilliance throughout a cycle of seasons. As a result was a public relations asset to the city, says parks superintendent Lloyd Syer.

Such a combination makes him a person "practically impossible" to replace," added the superintendent.

With the last rose gone, along with the flower and shrubs which help highlight the total effect, Mr. Sprung also retires: To the family farmstead at Mountain View.

Among other things, he'll grow flowers, including some roses.

Car a Writeoff, Injuries Slight

Rose Nancy Brant, 29, of RR7, Belleville, escaped serious injury Monday morning after she lost control of her 1961 Chrysler.

She told a nurse on the Bay Bridge Road at 7:24 a.m., the car skidded on the rain-slick pavement, smashed through guard rails, and came to rest after rolling down the embankment.

Admitted to Belleville General Hospital suffering minor cuts and bruises, she was treated and released.

The car, a writeoff, was valued at $500.

Liberal Welfare Program Outlined

PICTON (Staff) — The present "patchwork of programs and standards schemes" surrounding Ontario's welfare system would be eliminated by a Liberal government through a universal guaranteed annual income program based on a negative income tax.

Barry Young, Liberal candidate for the Prince Edward — Lennox riding, yesterday announced in a press release that such a plan is the solution at work to save money saving and dignity preserving method of assisting Ontario's poor.

He observed premier William Davis has called the welfare system as "a disaster."

"I, personally, call it a jungle which insults those of us more fortunate enough to have to ask for it and at the same time it infuriates many of us who have to foot the bill," said Mr. Young.

The Liberal candidate charged that effects of the welfare system other than its poor accident records are assessed a 100 per cent increase in compensation but if conditions are not improved, this rate will be raised further.

Mr. Young's Compensation Board does not have the authority to prosecute an employer who is guilty of maintaining poor working conditions. That situation rests on the shoulders of other government agencies.

Mr. Farquharson reminded industrialists and businessmen at the Rotary Club meeting, that "any industry must be conscious and aware of accident potential," not only for the safety of their workers, but for the reputation of their business.

"To...he," commented Mr. Young. "aside from cost-saving administration, the most appealing feature of the program will be that the working poor and those on welfare will, by nature of the plan, be motivated and encouraged to go to work, not punished for working as under the present system."

After issuing his press statement, Mr. Young noted his conversations with a number of poor persons have revealed they are ignorant of several of the programs available to them.

This, in the, candidate's opinion, shows the overlapping and duplication he feels is evidenced in the present welfare system.

COMMITTEE ON THE COSTS OF EDUCATION

The Committee on the Costs of Education in the Elementary and Secondary Schools of Ontario has been appointed to undertake a comprehensive review of the costs of education in relation to the aims and objectives, programs, priorities and the like, of the educational system; to examine alternatives and options in the light of experience with them, the requirements of the present, and in terms of the expenditures of money for them; and to recommend policies as the Committee may determine.

The Committee will welcome assistance from representatives of groups, organizations, and associations and from the public through the provision of information, comments and suggestions in areas such as but not limited to:

— the use of the financial resources being provided for elementary and secondary education in Ontario in the attainment of the educational goals;

— the ability of the various differentiating factors in the legislative grant plan such as course, location, level (elementary and secondary), and type (ordinary and extraordinary) to generate funds in proper balance consistent with the needs for the attainment of desirable educational objectives;

— the implications of ceilings on expenditures by local school boards, including the effect on the decision-making and autonomy of these boards;

— the various aspects of school programs with particular reference to innovations and new concepts as, for example; the "open plan" organization, technical and commercial programs, and use of educational technology.

It will be appreciated if submissions could be made as soon as possible but not later than 31st March, 1972. They should be sent to;

Gas Bar Permit Is Sought

A building permit application for still another gas bar was before members of the city council traffic committee on Monday.

The permit request is from Pioneer Petroleum of Hamilton which wants to set up a gas bar at the intersection of Moira and Coleman streets — the site of the former Oliphant Electric warehouse and store.

Traffic committee members indicated they had no objection to the gas bar from a traffic point of view although it was suggested the company should be notified that Moira Street at Coleman could some day become a one - way artery.

In other business the committee approved of the request of Constellation Canada Ltd. for a new median opening opposite their building to allow freer access and exit by employees on and off the divided four - lane roadway.

A median forming further east will be closed and the new opening provided at cost to Constellation.

1971 Poppy Committee Starts Campaign

Poppy Day Campaign Organized

The 1971 Poppy Day campaign was officially opened Saturday afternoon under the joint co-operation of Branch 99, Royal Canadian Legion, Duke of Edinburgh Unit 201, Army, Navy Air Force Veterans, 418 Wing, Royal Canadian Air Force Association, and Legion Branch 587 of Ex-Servicewomen.

Kenneth Edgecombe, newly-elected chairman of the Belleville Poppy Committee, sparked the campaign by stating "we would like to see about $5,000" brought in for the fund which supplies emergency funds for ex-service men and women. In 1970, the sale of poppies in Belleville brought fund-raisers slightly more than $3,000.

Under their new banner, "If You Can't Remember . . . THINK," the poppy fund organizers will send volunteers onto city streets Nov. 5 and 6 with their familiar poppy containers. Before and on the official Poppy Days, volunteers will visit various businesses throughout the city to sell their individual poppies and wreaths.

And prices for the wreaths have risen, with costs now ranging from $4.50 to $21 each.

But the increase in costs, a nation - wide hike, will enable the committee to place one of their new - style funeral wreaths in every funeral parlor, replacing the old method of circulating wreaths.

On Nov. 11, representatives of the 1,500 active veterans of the two world wars, will march to the Cenotaph at the junction of Cumberland Road and Station Street to pay tribute to their fallen comrades.

Not only are wreaths placed on the cenotaph Nov. 11, but the poppy committee maintains a fresh supply of wreaths year-round, returning them from storage to their place of honor once a week.

Campaign headquarters have been established at the new RCL Branch 99 offices on Pinnacle Street; these can be reached by calling 966-1115 anytime between 1 p.m. and 4 p.m. daily.

James Clarke Trade Group President

James Clarke, vice-president and general manager of Wilson Concrete Products in Belleville was elected president of the Canadian Prestressed Concrete Institute at its annual meeting in Los Angeles Sept. 18.

The Canadian Institute met jointly with the American Institute to elect executives for a one-year term.

Mr. Clarke is now a director of the North American board of the prestressed concrete institute and a member of the United States marketing committee.

The Canadian Institute acts as the voice of the industry, with 30 companies now producing in Canada.

The prestressed concrete industry did $1 billion business last year in North America, with Canadian plants accounting for about one-tenth of that total.

September Was Wet

The Tweed climatogical station has come up with the cause of all that green grass which has appeared during the past few weeks.

The reason is 4.4 inches of rain that fell during September, making the past month one of the wettest in recent years.

The September rainfall was the most since 1967 when 4.12 inches fell and topped September 1969 by almost three inches.

The accumulated rainfall to the end of September is given as 26.4 inches...as compared with precipitation of 33.31 for the normal nine-month period.

Tweed weathermen said the heavier than usual rainfall is one of the side "benefits" of the tropical storms which have been ravishing the Gulf of Mexico and the Atlantic coast.

Another side benefit is that the dampness both reduced the number of forest fires reported and the number of acres burned over.

So far this season 91 fires have been reported with only 112 acres burned. Last year there had been 115 fires by the end of September with 1,077 acres burned.

But the heavy rainfall also has its disadvantages.

Algae growth is up — due, it is said, to high run-off from leached fertilizers.

Plaza Office Has UIC Data

Persons seeking claims or information from the Unemployment Insurance Commission should avoid calling the regional office on Dundas St. East.

Many people are apparently unaware of the six - week-old information centre in Belleville Plaza which is designed to offer quick assistance to anyone in need.

A three-man staff headed by officer in charge A. R. Kingston has direct access to the files for local residents which are kept in Kingston. In addition, the office has a scanning machine which, when supplied with the appropriate tape, reveals all area UIC transactions.

Open from 8:15 to 4:15 Monday through Friday, the centre lends aid in obtaining claim forms and information concerning payment of benefits. Telephone number is 968-3474.

The regional office contains files for the entire province and as such has no facilities for district affairs.

Rhodesia's Achievement

Speaking of the virtues of work, in Rhodesia they are calling it the country's "secret weapon."

Necessity, it is said, is the mother of invention, and because Rhodesia is subjected to trade sanctions by Britain, ever since the decision to go its own way, the country has become more inventive as well as partial to the virtues of honest endeavor.

The sanctions had included banning of advertising by Rhodesian interests in British newspapers, but in what is described as a major breakthrough in the sanctions barrier Rhodesia has placed a full-page advertisement in The International Herald Tribune, a newspaper which is published in Paris and sells some 10,000 copies daily in Britain.

In all three ads were placed, two by local firms and one by the Rhodesian Ministry of Information, and they are said to have caused a "tremendous impact" in many parts of Europe.

David Brewer, director of the Rhodesian Promotion Council, is quoted as saying: "Perhaps there is a lesson to be learned from this almost phoenix-like recovery of an economy whose demise was predicted within weeks of that fateful decision in November 1965. The impression one gains . . . is that the Rhodesians have unearthed a secret weapon. The secret of their success can be summed up in two words — 'hard work.' "

The heading on the International Herald Tribune ad reads in part: "Rhodesia was gagged for five years and ten months. Now hear this. . ."

The moral seems to be that not only do repressive measures fail to accomplish their objective, rather they tend to stiffen the backbone of the victims, as well as providing the incentive for harder work, sacrifice, and the discovery of alternative sources of supply and means of production.

For those who may have forgotten what the sanctions were all about, they came as a result of Rhodesia's refusal to accept a British constitution aimed at achieving majority rule by black Africans.

Whether life is any better for the native Africans would be an interesting study, but there has been nothing coming out of Rhodesia of late to indicate that the black population is not benefiting from the progress being made despite sanctions.

Home Thoughts

It was a summer-like weekend — but without the crowds. It is strange to witness the extent to which we are ruled by the time of year in our activities, rather than by the actual state of the weather.

Consider the Outlet on Saturday: virtually empty by noon and the fencing is up already all along the beach. Yet the water was warm as a few who were there and could find gaps in the fence could testify. Where then does the regular beach crowd go on a sunny October day?

From The Outlet to the southern extremities of Prince Edward and Point Traverse. On Sunday, along that long peninsula, the day was sunny again for the most part and the water the deepest blue. There is a stark aspect to the flat terrain inland, broken only by firs, but lakeward there is a richness of outlook that warms the spirit. Here is an open stretch of grass along the shore and a line of dead elms which, against the background of water and the offshore islands, provide the kind of aspect the artist or photographer dreams of.

The road is bumpy and unsurfaced and you wish the county would fill in those potholes like it has done further back. There is the feel of the outback and activity on the farms: cattle, sheep, pigs, geese hens, and the occasional evidence of new home building, mingling with the interesting old homesteads that have stood for many a day.

And you wonder just how they manage down here in the winter, but forgetting that rather dread thought for a moment you come to a grassy sward overlooking a gravelly beach, and there is a gentle curve to this shoreline as the water laps the edge and there is the sound of it as it runs up and recedes; and you think of similar scenes you have seen in the South Pacific and realize we have them right here on our doorstep.

Nixon's 'Beau Geste'

U.S.-Japanese Relations at Difficult Stage

By ROD CURRIE

WASHINGTON (CP) — President Nixon's long flight to Alaska for a brief courtesy visit with Japan's emperor seemed to underline recent warnings of some observers that relations between the two countries were at their lowest since the Second World War.

Nixon's eagerness to reverse this trend was seen in his willingness to go to such length to pay tribute to a man who has no actual policy-making role and no political authority in Japan.

Still, Nixon is seen as politician enough to recognize that the sky, retiring Emperor Hirohito is apparently widely respected by a majority of his people as a symbol and a religious leader and that the Japanese are bound to be impressed by Nixon's gesture of friendship.

At this point, the U.S. needs all the good will it can generate in Japan.

Nixon indicated further appreciation of this fact last week by asking Congress to ratify an historic treaty returning Okinawa to Japan. At the time, he warned that if Japan and the U.S. grow apart the "fabric of peace" in Asia will be "incomparably more difficult" to hold together.

First came Nixon's sudden change in the U.S. policy toward China with the announcement he would visit Peking. The Tokyo government was furious that it was not given advance warning of the move, which shocked the Japanese population.

Then came the U.S. 10-per-cent surcharge on imports and U.S. demands that Japan revalue the yen. The Nixon administration also demanded that Japan shoulder a greater share of maintaining American military forces in Japan.

On the other side of the coin, Washington was annoyed with the Japanese for refusing to cooperate in a scheme to limit textile exports to the U.S. and continuing restrictions on U.S. imports and investment in Japan.

By its very nature, the polite encounter between Nixon and the emperor did not permit substantive discussion of these issues.

Nixon had emphasized that U.S.-Japanese friendship is "indispensable" to peace in the Pacific and certainly this outgoing demonstration of good manners and courtesy will not be lost on the sensitive Japanese.

Still, in the view of many observers, the conflicts that beset Washington-Tokyo relations are real and quite painful in some areas and demonstrations of mutual admiration will not alone resolve them. That will take hard bargaining.

"Hey, look — we must be getting near civilization!"

The Telegram's Demise

The Globe and Mail

The principal asset of a worthwhile newspaper cannot be sold. It is the proprietary interest its readers hold in every aspect of a functioning institution that speaks to them and, often, for them in a way that is peculiarly, and sometimes passionately, its own. Plant, presses, all the hardware necessary to put one paper out can be used again to make another. Salesmen can turn their talents to other commodities. Writers and editors can reappear in other journals. But the context that gave validity and personality to the sum of the parts is lost if the paper dies.

That intangible thing that moves a reader to praise or damn whoever may be running his or her newspaper at any point in time can't be put on the block. If is possible, even without the assistance of a Royal Commission, to list the qualities a good newspaper should have but it can have them all and still be a bust without the personal involvement — indeed, the love and hate — of those who subscribe to it.

The very great tragedy of the passing of The Toronto Telegram is that there were so many of its readers who felt strongly about it. For all its fancy Front Street facade, it remained the old aunt of Melinda Street, at once terribly proper and incorrigibly rude. A repository of establishment virtues; a boil on the status quo. It boasted of its roster of brash independent writers (at different times different writers) but its faithful were inclined to ask, particularly at the time of Toronto elections, What does the Tely say?

Successively pure, pink and pushy, the Telegram was in every phase persuasively personal. Whether it was saving the beleaguered British Empire or rescuing the exploited Italian worker; it was forever stilling on its reader's lap. A former reporter recollected on Saturday a typical dispatch from a Tely Man on the Spot: "The battle of Algiers is on and I'm in it."

It is easy to say — and it ignores a host of other factors — that the economics of our time conspire against the weaker of any two or three or four institutions competing for the time and the dollar of the same consumer. John Robertson launched his paper with a $10,000 loan. That amount would hardly give his successors enough money to buy a year's supply of paper cups.

Sentiment, sad to say, is a foot soldier, not a captain in the marketplace. The only thing certain about the war between the Toronto Daily Star and The Toronto Telegram was that there had to be a loser. That has been the lesson in both morning and afternoon publishing fields for two decades. It is a rotten lesson, but saying that doesn't help.

In recent years, the proprietors of the Telegram have pushed the slogan The Tely Cares. In the wake of publisher John Bassett's announcement that he plans to close the newspaper it has been strikingly evident that thousands of others care, too.

Baby Bonus and Population

Editor.
The Intelligencer.

We have mixed feelings regarding the changes in the baby bonus proposed by health minister John Munro. To do away with the bonus for those in higher income levels and to make the bonus be $15 a month for each child under 12 and $20 a month for children 12 to 17 for low-income groups would certainly seem fair. However, to double and nearly triple the benefits in the case of children under 10 from $6 to $15 may lead to consequences that are not anticipated now.

Will this lead to more unmarried mothers keeping their babies?

Will this have the effect of making some lower income mothers less careful about using birth control measures?

Will there be a rise in births among low income groups leading to even larger unemployment and more families on welfare?

We would like to reaffirm our approval of raising the benefits for children already here. But unless there is a limit to this help — say to the first two children born to each mother after the enactment of this bill — increased child bearing by lower-income families will be encouraged.

We would like to see much discussion on this proposed legislation which has already had its first reading.

Jack Trudeau of the Trudeau Motors Ltd., has been named general chairman of the Belleville Community Chest Campaign.

Jack Yanover, Ben Yanover, Murray Davis, Bert Farrar and Adrian Cruji are in New York City attending the world series between the giants and Yankees.

Building activity in the city fell off considerably during September according to records of City Building Inspector Jack Hawley. Twenty permits issued at city hall during the month totalled $29,550.

Tweed Fair was a wash out on Friday in the real sense of the term. Rain fell throughout the entire day completely ruining what were undoubtedly prospects for the best fair in years. President Charles Rush, secretary S. R. Curry and the Board of Directors had can vassed every possibilts to present the fair-going public an attractive program of entertainment and features never before presented by the local Society had been arranged.

The month of September found a new record set for membership when over 200 persons joined the Corby Public Library.

The Cult of Personality

By DON O'HEARN

From The Intelligencer's Queen's Park Bureau

Capsule comment on the campaign to date as it gets ready for the last stretch drive:

Progressive Conservatives: The entire campaign has been keyed to Premier Davis personally. This is nothing new, as some have said. Every PC campaign since 1943 has been built around the leader.

A point of continuing interest has been to watch how Mr. Davis, whose campaign pledge is to "make no promises," makes his promises. When the NDP promises low-rental cottages, the premier counters with a pledge to accelerate the Niagara escarpment program. When Liberal Leader Robert Nixon promises more local autonomy and participation, he says his ministers and members will have more local involvement. However, he doesn't spell out details, so perhaps he is only making half promises.

The premier's most accomplished feat to date, however, has been to tell audiences that he is the only man to lead the province and not sound insufferable.

Liberals: Robert Nixon has apparently been trying to concentrate on local issues. He stresses them where he can find them—mercury pollution in Northwestern Ontario, farm problems in rural ridings, regional government in areas which have it and don't like it.

In areas where there isn't any matter of strong local concern he is bringing out his party policy point by point.

Most of the vote switch will be swayed by the separate school turn-down seems to be going to him.

An important asset could be that he has been personally frank. He said flatly that he was against marijuana. He hasn't been afraid to oppose students at meetings with them and even to lose his temper. This could get him some votes — even with the students.

New Democrats: The detailed planning of the Stephen Lewis campaign is now beginning to show plainly.

The key lure in the NDP election bait is to be automobile insurance. And Mr. Lewis didn't waste it in his party speech. It was only in the past few days he has started talking about it. Everybody in the province will have heard about it by the time he and his workers are through.

A subtle technique is the NDP leader's use of "surveys" for morale building and propaganda. At his opening campaign conference he reported that riding surveys showed the party had a good chance for minority government.

At a later conference, a week ago, he said Dr. Gallup polls showed the Liberal vote was disintegrating and the government vote was down.

Lewis handles these very cleverly. He acknowledges they are surveys, but nevertheless leaves the listener with the impression they are as credible as Dow Jones. He adds to the credibility by naming ridings his party could take, some of them very surprising. He spots the conferences for good press coverage. And he plays it all low-key but very convincingly.

A further element is undoubtedly planned for between now and the election, and from it we can expect great optimism.

NDP Candidate's Attack On Rival Parties A 'Ploy'

Editor,
The Intelligencer.

Mr. Alan J. Deacon, according to the Oct. 2 issue of your paper, stated to a group of adult retraining students at Loyalist College "that neither the Tories nor Liberals can afford the time to care what happens to you or me."

I would suggest to the NDP candidate, that this statement shows that either he has not been following the present Ontario election campaign or with any degree of understanding (and this I find hard to believe) or that he feels this observation, in spite of its obvious futility, would bear political fruit.

Any political candidate or leader surely knows that by far the majority of votes come from the average citizen and not from what Mr. Deacon refers to as "big business".

It is therefore the average voter that must be satisfied and while the democratic process has many failings it is the voice of the people who must be listened to if this process is to survive.

In my view the responses to the wishes of the average citizens have been well demonstrated in the Province of Ontario and in the present election campaign.

Mr. Deacon's plain implication at this meeting was that his party had some sort of political monopoly on the concern for the welfare of the average resident in this province; this, of course, is utter nonsense and the implication should be recognized for what it is — an obvious political ploy.

Exit the 'Peasouper'

BBC London Letter

The London peasouper, that fog beloved of writers of an earlier day, is becoming a thing of the past, thanks to clean air legislation. It is now an offence to allow smoke from chimneys in central London, and the health of Londoners is the better for it.

George Shaw gave the background in a talk in the Radio 4 programme Science Now. The clinching evidence that fogs could really kill, he said, came in the winter of 1952, when, in one disastrous fog, 4,000 people died. Tests made at the time showed extraordinarily high concentrations of smoke, sulphur dioxide from coal fires and other atmospheric pollutants. After 1956, new anti-smoke laws turned a progressively increasing area of London into an official "smokeless zone".

In the middle of this zone, at the Medical Research Council's Air Pollution Unit at Shadtholomew's Hospital, medical assessments have shown not only a reduction in pollution, but also a corresponding reduction in its effect on people. Studies among bronchitis patients have shown that the worse goes hand - in - hand with sudden increases in pollution. Now that there is less smoke in the London air it is becoming possible to search for more subtle pollutants, such as asbestos, which gets into the atmosphere from building sites, industry and car brakes.

A visible sign of the effectiveness of the smokeless zone is the fresh appearance of some of London's historic buildings. It is now worth while cleaning them, knowing that intellectural treasures like St. Paul's Cathedral and the royal palaces a sparkle in the London scene.

VON Service Expanding Through Two Counties

Across Canada, located in at least 107 centres, the Victorian Order of Nursing is "helping people to help themselves," said spokesmen for the local chapter.

The VON makes it possible for the patient to be released from hospital and returned to his home well in advance of complete recovery. This service allows the hospital to treat a great many more sick and gives the released patient a chance to get "on his feet in his own grounds," said Grant Harrison, administrator of the local VON.

"Since 1897 when the VON was started, it has been a continuous story of growth and acceptance, offering a service that will allow the sick to return to their families and start to be productive," said Mr. Harrison.

A milestone in the history of the Belleville chapter of the VON came this year with the amalgamation of the Trenton and the city VON.

"Several times in the past few years, members of the administration of the Trenton VON had found it necessary to canvass their city in order to keep their budget above water," said a spokesman for the group.

Mr. Harrison claims, "with the joining of the two groups, we can run a more efficient and much more economical program in the area."

With both chapters being taken care of under the same roof in Belleville, the duplication of work is kept to a minimum and office staff, handling files and correspondence, could be minimized so more emphasis could be placed on increased nursing staff.

Along with the amalgamation of forces, the boundaries of the VON were stretched to the extent that now nurses are travelling as far afield as Bancroft, any part of Prince Edward County, Marmora and Deseronto.

"In the past, we could cover only the city with any kind of efficiency," said a spokesman for the Belleville Chapter.

"With boundaries stretching to points as remote as these, it has become imperative that staff complements be again enlarged, and in the near future, full-time nurses will be stationed in Bancroft and Prince Edward County."

"The reason for the massive increase in work load and staff requirement comes directly from the Home Care Program initiated earlier in the year," said Mr. Harrison.

"With the coming of the convalescent home to open in the Queen's Motor Hotel in the city, our work load is bound to increase by that much more."

The VON has already been contacted and their services have been employed for the home.

Worked on a yearly basis of cost for the running of the organization, the fee that has been set for a home visit is five dollars.

"This sum is flexible and offsets only a percentage of the actual cost of making the visit," said a spokesman for the group.

"In the event that a patient cannot pay' for the service then the VON will assume the cost of the operation," said Mr. Harrison.

The remainder of the cost is taken care of through the United Appeal that operates in Belleville, and through government grants.

"It's tremendous that we are growing at this rate," say members of the group, "but with this increase in the size of the operation, the need for more funds is magnified. We are operating on an extremely tight budget."

The largest contributing body, which helps in the subsidizing of the VON is the United Appeal.

Joint Meeting on Highrise Proposed

TRENTON (Staff) — Councillor Paul Tripp recommended Monday that council and the Trenton and Suburban Planning Board meet jointly in special session to beef up their defence of the Klemencic highrise.

He suggested this meeting be held once the series of reports being prepared now on the condition of parks, services and traffic in the area of the apartment tower site is completed.

Council is preparing a case for having the Ontario Municipal Board reconsider its refusal to grant the zoning change that would have allowed construction of the seven-storey structure on the old Fraser estate.

During Monday's council session, Clerk-comptroller O. W. Larry mentioned one of the weaknesses of the town's presentation handled by lawyer James Taylor was that "there were no formal comments from the planning board."

Councillor Tripp outlined the actions taken by planning board last week on the Klemencic highrise question before council last night but the clerk recommended the board's position should be written rather than verbal so it can be used when the town resubmits the highrise issue to the OMB. Council wants to have the municipal board ruling overturned.

Should Unwed Mother Tell All in Returning to Her Home Town?

By DORIS CLARK

Dear Doris: I left my home and my small-town job last year and moved to a large city. This was because of the terrible mistake I made at a drinking party. I went through the whole business of pregnancy and giving my baby for adoption without my parents or anyone else knowing about it.

Now I want to move back to my home town because I am terribly homesick. I know I can get my old job back. Do you think people will wonder why I am returning, or even think that the reason I left was because of a baby coming?

The thing that worries me most is whether I should ever tell anybody about it. Supposing I meet a man and get serious about him. Should I tell him about this baby of mine? Will he think, I am some sort of monster to have given my own child away? I know that she found a good home, if I tell him, should it be before or after we marry? — Full of Doubts

Dear Doubts: You wouldn't be the first young woman who found that the golden charms of the big city were largely tinsel, and who had the good sense to move back to the warm friendliness of her own home town. Just tell everybody you came back because you missed them ,which is true.

Yes, tell the prospective husband when you find The One. Explain the whole thing, including the reasons you gave your baby for adoption, that she went into a home where there were two loving parents to care for her, and that you would have had no way of providing for her yourself.

Real love can take a shock like this — far better than if he should find it out on his own.

* * *

Dear Doris: What makes me mad is my husband never gives me credit for doing anything.

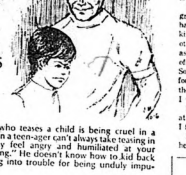
I planted flowers. Someone asked him who planted them and remarked that they are really nice. He said he did. He is always bragging. It bothered him when I played the guitar for a party and he said I was just sitting there to show the men my hot pants. — Ragged

Dear Ragged: I know. One of those guys who hope to climb up by stepping on somebody else. A bragger is really making a noise about how small he feels.

What does it matter if he says he planted the flowers? You got the fun of doing it, of watching them grow, tending them, enjoying their beauty. And anyone who matters to you is bound to see who really keeps things like that going around your place.

* * *

Dear Doris: Barry's a wonderful guy. Even my mother says he is nice. Now that's something, coming from my mother. I have gone out with him before but I did not know until a few days ago that he has been going steady for a long time.



When we are out we have great fun. We'll fight, and hold hands, and run and swim and kiss, just enjoying each other's company. He keeps asking me out but I put him off because of his steady. Sometimes I wish I'd never found out about her! And then again, sometimes I wish I was dead! — What To Do?

P.S. You were right before at 15, love is not everlasting! I found out the hard way.

Dear What To Do: Either he cheates on his steady or he is not going steady and she knows it. Why not ask him? You have a right to know where you stand.

I'll tell you what I told you before: play the field. This helps you keep your feelings under control and keeps a boy from thinking you are all his — which you aren't, in spite of your inclination to the contrary.

Have you an idea — about people — that you'd like to share? Write to Doris.

Ann Landers

Call Would Only Add to Problems

Dear Ann Landers: My husband and I have been happily married for 16 years. A few weeks ago my husband blurted out something that has made me so miserable I can barely send it. Out of a clear blue sky he said he had a confession to make. It seems that in 1958 when we lived in a dorm for married college students he met another married gal who also lived in our dorms—in, of all places, the supermarket. She had a large bag of groceries and he offered to drive her back to the dorm since she had no car. On an impulse they drove to the woods and had a 15-minute affair. He said he became physically ill afterward. (Guilt, of course) and told her they must never do such a thing again. They never did.

The girl and her husband live 2,000 miles away but we have kept in touch through letters, cards and school reunions. I am so crushed by the knowledge that my husband did such a rotten thing to me that I want to telephone her and let her know I am now in possession of the facts.

My husband would prefer that I not call. We have agreed to abide by your decision.—Yaha City

Dear Yu: If you place the call you will accomplish the following:

(a) Make your husband look like a loose-lipped jerk.

(b) Make yourself look like an insecure, addle-brained fool.

(c) Fix it so you will never again be comfortable in the girl's presence.

(d) Add about $10 to your phone bill.

Is it worth it?

Dear Ann Landers: I have never had the need to write to you before but I need you now. This letter is about neighbors. Ann, I moved into this lovely apartment several months ago and I love it. I don't want to move, but I might have to if people don't leave me alone.

The woman across the hall knocked on my door seven times last week. Not only is she a borrower, but she is mad at her psychiatrist and using me as a substitute. I told her I am not qualified, but she says, "All you have to do is listen. That's all he did and he charged me $20 an hour."

The couple next door drink and they fight every night. The woman usually winds up here with a towel over her mouth or a piece of meat on her eye. Her husband then joins her, and they continue the fight in my living room. I don't need this. Then there's a man who lost his wife last year and he shows up at my door with a needle and thread (he can't thread it), or a recipe he can't understand. He is nice but a terrible pest.

Please tell me what to do? I am a prisoner in my own home. —Oakland

Dear Oak: Have a one-way peephole put in your door. You can see out, but no one can see in. This device will enable you to decide whether or not you want to open your door. Even if your radio or TV is on, and the party knows you are at home, you are under no obligation to answer the door if you don't feel like it.

Roast Stuffed Turkey for Thanksgiving

By MARY MOORE

The average size of Thanksgiving turkeys ranges from 12 to 15 pounds, oven ready. This corresponds with the requests I receive from readers. Even though they may have roasted dozens of turkeys they still ask for reassurance regarding temperature and time.

So I will give you my suggested menu for Thanksgiving dinner and follow with details for stuffing, gravy, and salad.

THANKSGIVING DINNER MENU

Lobster or Shrimp Cocktail
Roast Stuffed Turkey (see below), Turkey Gravy (see below), Cranberry Sauce, Fluffy Mashed Hubbard Squash, Cauliflower au Gratin, Gourmet Salad (see below) with French Dressing, Mince or Pumpkin Pie or Tarts, Coffee

ROAST STUFFED TURKEY
(12-15-lb. oven - ready bird)

Stuffing: One standard loaf bread, pulled into crumbs or buzzed in blender
Deep sliced mushrooms
1 cup sliced celery
½ cup chopped apple
½ cup chopped onion
¼ cup chopped parsley or flakes
½ cup butter
1 to 1½ tsps. salt
¼ tsp. pepper
½ to 1 tsp. sage or rosemary or thyme OR
1-2 tsps. poultry seasoning
In large frying pan melt butter and saute all vegetables and apple until wilted. Add to breadcrumbs in large bowl and add seasonings and mix. Stuff prepared bird, truss neatly.

ROASTING:

Dry outside of stuffed bird, spread all over with soft butter, roast at 325 deg. Fahr. for 4½-6 hrs., without water or cover, basting occasionally when drippings collect in pan.

NOTE: If desired, cover with tent of foil for first 4 hrs., then remove to allow skin to brown and crispen.

GRAVY: (4 cups)

Transfer turkey to hot platter. Pour excess fat from pan, but leave a little more than ¼ cup fat and all sediment in pan. Place over low heat and blend in ¼ cup flour. Now add 4 cups hot water and stir until thick. Add salt to taste.

GOURMET SALAD

Wash and soave and slice 1 med. cucumber wafer thin. Wash and core 1 green pepper and slice wafer thin. Wash and cut 3 med. tomatoes in 8 wedges each. Wash and slice 6 radishes wafer thin. Peel and slice 1 small mild onion wafer thin. Cut ¼ head Iceberg Lettuce coarsely. At the last minute toss with minimum amount of French Dressing.

A roast Canadian turkey — shiny, plump and tender — awaits the carver for Thanksgiving dinner. Mary Moore gives you roasting temperature and time, stuffing and gravy recipes. Tossed in for good measure is a Gourmet Salad.

Dinner Menus

WEDNESDAY

Shepherd's Pie (see Monday); Baked or Broiled Herbed Tomato Halves; Compote of Lombard Plums; Fresh One-Egg Cake; Tea.

WEDDING

ACTON — GRISENTHWAITE

FRANKFORD — Rev. Cecil Bourque officiated at the wedding ceremony in Queen of Heaven Chapel, CFB Trenton, when Katherine Janet Grisenthwaite, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. William Grisenthwaite, of Frankford, was united in marriage to Clifford E. Acton, son of Mr. and Mrs. F. Acton, RR 3, Frankford. Jerry Fontyn provided traditional wedding music.

Given in marriage by her father, the bride wore a full length white lace over taffeta gown, fashioned in empire style and trimmed with pink ribbon on bodice and sleeves. Her veil was trimmed with pink and white daisies and she carried a bouquet of pink roses and white shasta daisies.

Miss Julie Grisenthwaite, sister of the bride was maid of honor and wore a pink organza gown trimmed with daisies and styled similarly to the bride's. She carried a nosegay of white shasta daisies.

George A. Brizzi of Cobourg attended the bridegroom.

A reception was held in the home of the bride's parents, in Frankford, where the mother of the bride received the guests. She wore a pink crimplene dress with black accessories and a corsage of white carnations. The bridegroom's mother assisted, wearing a yellow and white dress with white accessories and a corsage of yellow carnations.

Leaving on a honeymoon trip to points west, the bride donned a purple and white outfit with white accessories, and a corsage of sweetheart roses. On their return they will take up residence in Trenton.

CWL Gives Info on 'Project 100,000'

MARMORA — At the September meeting of the Marmora Council of the Catholic Women's League of Canada, it was announced by the Diocesan president, Mrs. Bryon O'Connor and Christian Family Life convener, Mrs. Paul Brady that "Project 100,000" is officially open in the Province of Ontario.

The government will initiate debate on the subject of "Free Abortion on Demand" in the House of Commons during the season now underway. Justice Minister John Turner, who is responsible for the Criminal Code, said, last March, that "the issue is a 50-50 proposition in terms of public opinion but is not just a question of experts. This is a question for 20 million consciences".

Since the first Women's Liberation Movement - sponsored abortion caravan wended its way from Vancouver to Ottawa in May 1970, Turner's office has had about 30,000 pieces of mail on the subject. The mail runs about 70-30 against any further liberalization of abortion but many of the letters against are form letters — petitions — while those for are individual letters. Individually written and signed letters are much more influential.

With this in mind, the Catholic Women's League is embarking on a nation-wide letter-writing campaign. The aim is to collect 100,000 individual letters (the figure represents approximately the membership of the League), which a delegation will deliver in person to Prime Minister Trudeau later this fall.

Contact is being made with high schools, convents, universities, Youth Corps, Knights of Columbus, etc., asking their support. It is felt to be most important that every CWL member personally this project, not only by writing a letter herself but by encouraging her friends and friends, men and women and young adults of any religious denomination, to write letters also.

Mrs. Mary Matthews of Willowdale, a nation vice president of the Catholic Women's league, recently told a Toronto newspaper, "The official Catholic Women's League stand is that abortion is the taking of human life. We are asking all those who attend with us to write our National Office saying so."

Gwen Landolt, a Richmond Hill lawyer and housewife is chairman of the "Right to Life" committee, which has about 700 members and is non-sectarian, numbering among its members Jewish persons and those of no religious faith. She said that her group takes the position that "abortion is the taking of a human life and should be prevented by government. The Criminal Code now protects the unborn child. Take away that protection and you could go after the senile and the aged, too. It's not a private matter; it's the government's position to protect all classes of society."

A sub - group within the "Right to Life" committee is also attempting to organize doctors within Ontario who object to abortion.

There is a group of nurses who are organized to oppose abortion. The "Nurses for Life" group has about 150 members in Ontario and is concerned chiefly in protecting a nurse's right to refuse to assist in performing abortions. "It's absolutely inhuman to ask an obstetrical nurse to assist at an abortion", Mrs. I. Vefner, head of the group said. "Nurses are now being conditioned to kill; the point is where does it end?"

Recently, a delegation representing 13,000 lawyers of the Canadian Bar Association refused to endorse the principle of abortion on demand saying "unborn children also have legal rights". "Just because women's lib says abortion is right doesn't make it right — not at all. The law has already extracted damages in the civil courts from those whose products had deformed foetus". (a reference to the thalidomide drugs.) "Are we to say that you may not maim an unborn child but you can kill it with impunity?" Patrick G. Furlough, of Windsor, former head of the Ontario bar, said he objected to the resolution because "I happen to be against homicide whether you call it murder, euthanasia, or abortion."

Club Activities

RYLSTONE 4-H HOMEMAKING CLUB

The first meeting of the club was held at the home of Mrs. Gary (Ruth) Rose, assistant leader on Saturday, September 25 at 1 p.m.

The following officers were elected at the meeting: leader, Mrs. Evelyn Brunton; assistant leader, Mrs. Ruth Rose; president, Joanne Lisle; vice president, Brenda Pole; treasurer, Mrs. Evelyn Brunton; press secretary, Marlene Scott.

The selection of a name for the club was postponed until the next meeting which will be held at the home of Marlene Shortt.

Yellow was the color chosen for the record books, the covers of which are to be decorated with pictures. The membership was set at 75 cents.

Membership pamphlets and other literature was distributed and an outline was given of the new season's project including achievement day.

A discussion was held on bedroom accessories and color schemes for bedrooms. Members surveyed the bedroom chart in their pamphlets.

Couple Mark 50th Wedding Anniversary

TWEED — Many friends were present recently to celebrate the golden wedding anniversary of Frank Quinn and the former Gladys Brown, who were married in 1921, in Regina, Saskatchewan, at a Methodist Church there.

The Quinns welcomed their guests at the home of their son and his wife, Mr. and Mrs. Leo F. Quinn of Harrowsmith. The Leo Quinns were the co-hosts, along with Leo's sister, Beryl (Mrs. Robert L. Snider) of Yarker.

Mr. Quinn was born on his father's farm at Piccadilly, son of the late John F. and Martha Bell Quinn.

Mr. and Mrs. Quinn have three sons, Jack Quinn, of Calgary, Alberta; Jim Quinn of Belleville, and Leo Quinn of Harrowsmith, also an only daughter, Beryl (Mrs. R. Snider) of Yarker and 12 grandchildren and two great grandchildren.

Mr. Quinn has two brothers; the late M. Bell Quinn of Harrowsmith and Castle Quinn of Harrowsmith and two sisters, the late Mrs. Maurice Shillington of Sydenham and Mrs. Olive Moffatt of Scarboro, widow of the late Gordon Moffatt.

Mr. Quinn started out his young life by accompanying a carload of cattle for George Hamilton of Tichborne, Ontario, to his ranch in Stellar, Alberta. He returned then to Moose Jaw, Sask., to work. It was there he met his wife, Gladys Brown, daughter of the late Ray A. Brown and the late Essie Mahle Rouse of Parkbeg, Sask., where the Quinns farmed.

They returned to Piccadilly in 1929 and moved to a farm at Murvale in 1930. In 1938 Mr. Quinn worked on the construction of Highway No. 38, for 35 cents an hour, six days a week, 10 hours a day.

During the war he worked at the Norman Rogers Airport and at the Alcan plant in Kingston. In 1957, Mr. Quinn went to work at Fort Henry in Barriefield.

The couple sold their farm in 1964 and purchased the United Church parsonage in Harrowsmith, where they still reside.

Women Go for Small Swindles

EDMONTON (CP) — Women who enter crime can be pretty cold and calculating, but they usually are liable to be involved in small swindles rather than large ones, says Policewoman Lois Fisher of the fraud detail of the Edmonton police force.

"At least I've never met any great women swindlers," she added.

Mrs. Fisher has been on the force as a policewoman for eight years, but started as a clerk-typist at headquarters two years before signing on.

Mrs. Fisher refused to generalize on the types of fraud women are involved in compared with men except to say men tend to think bigger and "go for the bigger pot of gold."

Although she's worked in other departments, such as the juvenile branch and the morality squad, she enjoys the fraud squad the best.

"It's extremely interesting and you find that no case is ever the same."

Female suspects usually are brought to her for questioning, but she also is called in to question men whenever the head of the detail feels a woman could do a better job.

As a rule, she is treated well by suspects she interviews and the men she works with. However, there is the odd case of name-calling by disgruntled suspects.

"But I'm not in for a popularity contest. There's always a certain number who resent you and what you're doing.

"They've chosen their side of life and I've chosen mine."

Mrs. Fisher said she wished those sent to prison would take advantage of the rehabilitation programs.

"But so many don't and when they come out they go back to the same type of crime."

Mrs. Fisher has three children and said she had some problems when they first started school.

"The other children called them names because their mother was a cop. But I've been lucky enough to always be able to talk to them and now I think they're kind of proud of my being on the force."

MDs Divide On Role

EDMONTON (CP) — The problem of who should tell who what has divided a medical meeting being held here this week.

A majority of delegates to the joint meeting of the Association of Canadian Medical Colleges and the Association of Canadian Teaching Hospitals believe that there should be a national advisory council on health, such as was suggested to their groups by Health Minister John Munro Monday night.

However, some strongly believe that the advisory council should decide on goals and objectives and make recommendations to groups such as theirs.

Other delegates think the associations should decide what they want and their recommendations should then go to the advisory council to be sorted out.

Pauline Jewett, political science professor at Carleton University, Ottawa, and a former Liberal member of Parliament for Northumberland, supported the second view Tuesday.

Dr. Jewett had been invited to attend the two days of workshops and offer a critical evaluation. She told the 250 delegates, most of them doctors in top administrative positions, that they had a responsibility to decide clearly what they wanted and to communicate it to governments.

At the workshop sessions, which had been called to discuss the roles the federal government and national organizations should play, the doctors had skirted the issues, she said.

They had failed to concentrate attention "on either the kinds of goals and priorities you think are important or on what governments—either federal or provincial—should be doing."

In an interview earlier Tuesday, Dr. Douglas Bocking, past president of the ACMC, said the question of the number of practitioners turned out by the medical schools is only part of a much larger issue.

"Changes in the health care delivery patterns would profoundly affect the need for physicians."

For example, he said, if pediatric specialists decided they would provide only consultant care because there is a shortage of their kind of specialists, then the need for more general practitioners would arise.

"Changing roles of allied health professionals will similarly alter our medical manpower requirements."

Two Youths Face More Charges

TORONTO (CP) — Two youths charged with attempted murder in the July 28 shooting of three teen-agers at a Toronto shopping plaza had three more charges laid against them Tuesday.

The two, Frank Commisso, 19, and Joseph Deleo, 18, both of Toronto, were charged with conspiracy to commit wounding, conspiracy to commit assault and possession of an offensive weapon.

Free on $20,000 bail, they were remanded to Oct. 19.

A third person, Dominic Racco, 21, of Toronto, also charged with attempted murder in the shootings, is to appear in court today. He is free on $50,000 bail.

Five other persons charged in connection with the case were remanded Tuesday to Oct. 19. They are Vincenzo Delio, 50, Joseph's father; Guiseppe Fragoment, 41; Dominic Commisso, 24, and his brother Antonio, 22, cousins of Frank Commisso; and Michele Racco, 58, Dominic's father.

All face weapons charges. The elder Deleo also is charged with being an accessory after the fact.

Wounded in the plaza shootings were Allan Hughes, 19, and Joseph Bond and Dan Gregor, both 18.

Drug Use Tops For Discharge

WASHINGTON (Reuter) — United States seamen now appear to be pleading drug usage rather than homosexuality as a quick way out of the service, U.S. Navy officials said Tuesday.

Administrative discharges show that while in 1964 the navy released 1,568 men for homosexuality, compared with 42 for drug use, last year it discharged 5,672 drug users and 479 homosexuals.

In the first six months of this year, there were 3,972 drug-use discharges and 253 season who professed homosexuality.

Wilson Eases Stand

BRIGHTON, England (CP) — Labor leader Harold Wilson, scrambling to seal the widening divisions in his party over the European Common Market, may have achieved some success through a powerful, eleventh-hour plea for unity.

But anger and resentment still run strongly through the opposition party, badly split over terms negotiated by the Conservative government for Britain's proposed entry into the Market.

Wilson, leading spokesman for the Labor majority, which opposes the terms, told the party's annual convention here Tuesday all Labor MPs must unite to fight entry legislation if the government wins a crucial parliamentary debate on Europe Oct. 28.

Many observers quickly concluded that Wilson was leaving the door open for pro-Market Laborites to vote with the government on the Market without fear of reprisals as long as they agree to either abstain or oppose the Conservatives when the legislation is introduced.

The Labor leader may prefer to tolerate a split vote in his party on the principle of British membership to a continuation of the current chaotic in-fighting.

The pro-Market forces are gathered around Labor deputy-leader Roy Jenkins, who has refused to modify his position despite the conference's overwhelming vote against Europe earlier this week.

Wilson is known to value highly Jenkin's services and appears unwilling to see the deputy-leader resign in order to vote according to his convictions. Jenkins argues the terms are as good as those hoped for by the Labor government before it was defeated last year.

The Financial Times says in an editorial that events at the convention so far illustrate the danger of allowing current divisions to continue forcing Jenkins and others to resign and "leaving the left in almost undisputed possession of the front bench."

The newspaper says Wilson's statement may "provide the basis for some kind of negotiation and a chance for both sides to draw back from the brink."

The Times notes that although Wilson appears to have made a compromise possible, the crucial question is whether Jenkins and his followers will accept it.

The Times adds that Jenkins may still wish to resign and stand for re-election to the shadow cabinet when a new session of parliament begins in November.

If this happens, the newspaper says, "the shadow cabinet elections will see the gutters running with blood."

Wilson told the conference the Oct. 28 vote must not be considered the end of the Market issue. It was only the beginning of the battle to be fought against the legislation introduced later.

A number of pro-Market Labor MPs were reported to consider the statement a firm indication that they are free to vote with the government initially.

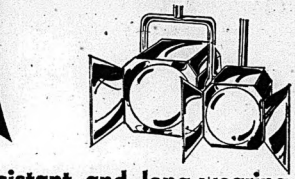
Handling Evidence Criticizec

TORONTO (CP) — The way a police officer handled evidence following a raid on student-operated Rochdale College last October was criticized by Judge W. F. B. Rogers Tuesday.

He dismissed a charge of possessing marijuana for the purpose of trafficking against Thomas Allen Kreiner, 21, of Timmins, because he said there was no proof on which he could act.

Kreiner then pleaded guilty to charges of possessing marijuana and hashish laid against him Oct. 29 after Sgt. Robert Fowler and other officers raided his apartment.

He was sentenced to one day in jail and fined $50. Judge Rogers gave Kreiner two months to pay. In default, he must serve five months in jail.



Sgt. Fowler, who at the time of the raid was a constable, said he had taken some material he believed to be marijuana to his home where he kept it in a cupboard. He said he looked in the cupboard from time to time.

Judge Roger said the condition of exhibits in a trial involving narcotics was in issue.

"For an officer to take it to his home and keep it in a cupboard to which persons may have access . . . is inexcusable conduct."

Unified City Vote Today

WINNIPEG (CP) — With church bells ringing out a reminder and a new structure of government adding interest, a larger-than-usual turn-out was expected as Winnipeggers vote today in municipal elections.

There are 328,243 persons eligible to cast votes for mayor, 50 council members and 71 school board trustees in the new unified city of more than 500,000. Polls opened at 9 a.m. CDT and were to close 12 hours later.

The bells, from more than 50 churches in the metro area, are the project of Freda Glow, who wants to remind residents to get out and vote.

The new municipal structure, with a 50-member central council ruled over by a mayor, will take over Jan. 1 from the present two-tier system of government consisting of 12 municipalities and metropolitan Greater Winnipeg.

The election also marks the first time the New Democratic Party has formally entered municipal politics on an area-wide basis in the province and is the first opportunity for 18-year-olds to vote in a Winnipeg civic election.

The NDP is entering candidates in 29 of the 50 wards. They are opposed by 47 candidates of the Independent Citizens' Election Committee, a group devoted to keeping formal party politics out of city hall.

In the race for mayor are two old rivals, city of Winnipeg mayor Stephen Juba and Metro Chairman Jack Willis. They are being challenged by William Hutton, a 41-year-old Metro councillor and businessman Gordon Anderson, 39, who is making his first attempt at political office.

Mr. Juba, 57, mayor of Winnipeg since 1956, has been a constant critic of Metro since its establishment in 1960, and he has based his campaign on continued criticism of the soon-to-be-defunct regional government.

Convict Fights Price Increase

JOLIET, Ill. (AP) — A prisoner at the Illinois State penitentiary in Joliet filed suit in United States District Court Tuesday charging that officials raised prices at the prison's commissary in violation of the wage-price freeze.

Robert DeMary asked in the suit that $125,000 in damages be paid because the officials "wilfully and maliciously" raised prices at the commissary which sells such items as toothpaste and soap.

Prison officials named in the suit, including Peter Bensinger, state director of the department of corrections, were not available for comment.

Boards Alter Payment

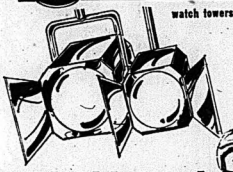
VANCOUVER (CP) — Two special review boards substantially increased welfare allowances for two Vancouver families Tuesday in decisions that could have far-reaching implications for the entire welfare system in British Columbia.

The boards ruled the families were being deprived of a "normal and healthy existence" and ordered the Vancouver welfare department to bring allowances up to standard within two weeks.

The cases involved appeals by Tony Cowlishaw and Jean Amos for extra money for food, clothing, household goods, utilities and other expenses.

One board found Mrs. Cowlishaw and her six children could not be fed adequately on their present food allowance of $168 a month and ordered it increased to $218.

Mrs. Cowlishaw also was granted a flat, one-shot clothing grant of $230, plus $50.10 a month for clothes. She was also granted an allowance to buy a washing machine and given a sundries budget of $126.56, exclusive of clothing.



She was also given a $75-a-month rent allowance, bringing her total allowance to $491 from $341.

The board hearing Mrs. Amos's case ordered a series of improvements in clothing, food and other expenses that will increase the allotment to her and her two children to $219 monthly from the present $131.

A-test Suit Filed

WASHINGTON (AP) — A federal appeals board ruled Tuesday that a lower court must hear a lawsuit seeking to block the underground test explosion of an atomic weapon on Amchitka Island in the Aleutians.

The court reversed a summary decision of Judge George L. Hart of district court who had dismissed without a hearing the suit filed by seven environment groups last month.

However, it remained uncertain whether the administration in fact planned to go ahead with the five-megaton blast.

Last Sept. 22 Congress voted in law the proposed test unless President Nixon approves it personally.

A spokesman for the Atomic Energy Commission said Tuesday there has been no word on the president's decision.

The environment groups, headed by the Committee for Nuclear Responsibility, sought an injunction against the test.

Joining the committee in the law suit were the Sierra Club, Friends of the Earth, Wilderness Society, SANE, Amchitka Two, a Canadian group, and Conservation Association.

Horsburgh Is Dead Of Cancer

TORONTO (CP) — Rev. Russell D. Horsburgh, whose life was shattered by a sex scandal that rocked the United Church seven years ago, died Tuesday of cancer only months after the last echoes of his "crucifixion in the courts" had quieted.

Less than nine months ago the United Church of Canada's general council reinstated the 53-year-old minister unconditionally, burying a scandal that started in the staid southwestern Ontario city of Chatham on a sleepy summer day in June, 1964.

Police that day arrested Mr. Horsburgh on eight charges of contributing to juvenile delinquency by permitting and encouraging teen-aged members of a church social group to indulge in sexual relations in the lounge of Chatham's Park Street United Church.

Vociferously denying the charges, Mr. Horsburgh went on trial in the city of 35,000, east of Windsor, in early 1965. The trial lasted 14 days and heard testimony from 56 witnesses.

The most damaging evidence against him came from members of Youth Anonymous program he had initiated at the church to help teenagers in trouble with the law. He later described their testimony as "insane garbage from the mouths of babes."

However, Mr. Horsburgh was convicted on five of the eight charges and sentenced to concurrent one-year prison terms on each. He actually served 107 days in jail before being released pending appeal.

Shortly after the trial, two of the teen-aged witnesses recanted their testimony in sworn affidavits, claiming they conspired with and were influenced by unidentified adults.

The legal battle ended Jan. 18, 1968, when he was cleared at the retrial in Chatham. In the one-day hearing, only three of the youth-group witnesses testified against him again and he was acquitted on all five counts.

Three Openings

OTTAWA (CP) — The number of Commons vacancies will rise to three today with the formal resignation of Phil Givens, Liberal MP for York West.

Mr. Givens is resigning to run in York-Forest Hill in the Oct. 21 Ontario general election. If the Liberals win the election, Mr. Givens would be appointed urban affairs minister, a new portfolio.

Mr. Givens's resignation will leave the Commons standing: Liberals 150, Conservatives 71, NDP 24, Social Credit 13, Independent 2, Independent Liberal 1, vacant 3—Total 264.

The other two vacancies are Assiniboia in Saskatchewan, where a byelection will be held Nov. 8, and Bonavista-Trinity-Conception in Newfoundland, where Conservative Frank Moores resigned last week. Mr. Moores is Conservative leader in his province.

Housing Rezoned

SASKATOON (CP) — The National House Builders' Association expects 220,000 housing starts this year, 30,000 more than last, association president Harold G. Shipp of Toronto said Tuesday.

The 220,000 starts would be a Canadian record, he said in an interview, and should grow to 240,000 in 1972.

Shingles Is A Condition of System

By G. C. THOSTESON MD

Dear Dr. Thosteson: I understand that the cause of shingles is similar to the virus of chickenpox. Is there great danger of getting shingles by being where a child is coming down with chickenpox although there is no physical contact with the child?

There must be frequent instances of children mingling with the public in restaurants, etc., just before coming down; so may we assume that this fact alone could account for many cases of shingles?

How long a time intervenes between the time the virus invades the system and any sign of shingles manifests itself?—L.L.O.

Those are good questions—as we always say when the answers aren't going to be easy.

The viruses of shingles and chickenpox are evidently very similar. They may not be identical.

It is thought that shingles is a "response of the host"—that is, shingles is the way some people react to the virus. It isn't the same in older people as it is with most children. (Very occasionally a child gets shingles, but that's pretty rare.)

When a child gets chickenpox, it is a response of the total body. You have chickenpox all over. When an adult gets shingles, it affects a nerve root, and the miseries (blebs, itching, pain) affect the part of the body served by that nerve. You don't get shingles all over.

Whereas chickenpox is spread by direct contact—one child gets the virus from another—it is though that with shingles the virus may remain dormant in the body for a lifetime. In that event, the "response," or having shingles break out, occurs when some change in the human system allows the virus to become active.

Some oldsters do develop shingles after contact with a child with chickenpox; others (most) give no history of any such contact.

I doubt, therefore, that being in the presence of a child coming down with chickenpox, as in a restaurant, theatre, or even home, has much relation to shingles. The contact must be close. And the important thing is whether a person's system is in a condition receptive to shingles. It is, after all, eminently clear that an invalid or person in feeble health suffers more and longer from shingles than does a person in otherwise robust health.

The incubation period for chickenpox—the time between contact and appearance of the disease—is 14 days, more or less. It is quite predictable with children, but not predictable with adults.

Here's an example from my own family: a young domestic developed chickenpox. Two weeks later one of my sons broke out. Two weeks after that, his twin brother broke out.

But their father, who had had chickenpox as a child, didn't. He came down with a mild case of shingles a quarter of century later.

Young adults, if healthy, seldom get shingles. My advice to older folks is to avoid intimate contact with a child who has chickenpox, but not to be unduly alarmed about the risk of happening to be in the same room with a child who is about to break out.

Dear Dr. Thosteson: I am 14 and have bunions on my feet. Are they hereditary and what could be done without surgery —M.M.

Some bunions can be congenital—that is, you are born with a foot defect, but that's not exactly the same as heredity. Anyway, surgical correction has been worked out for them, but I have doubts that anything less can do it. You might, however, see either an orthopedist or a podiatrist to see whether the trouble really is something else.

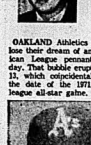
A's Lost Out 4 Months Ago



by

Maurice Switzer

Sports Editor

OAKLAND Athletics did not lose their dream of an American League pennant Thursday. That bubble erupted July 13, which coincidentally was the date of the 1971 major league all-star game.

VIDA BLUE

If there was any hope for the first title for an A's team since Connie Mack's 1931 crew turned the trick, it rode the ebony arm of Vida Blue, whose pitching delivery was only exceeded in grandeur by the thickness of his scrapbook.

Two swings of the bat that July afternoon — one by Johnny Bench, the other by Hank Aaron — brought home a rude reality to the A's and their supporters! Vida Blue was indeed mortal.

BLUE, as result, had only tossed one gopher ball all season prior to serving up two home run pitches in his three all-star innings.

And if you think that didn't shake the 22-year-old's confidence, observe that his pre-July 13 record was 17-3. Blue was 7-5 in the last half of the schedule, and received a number of early showers over that span.

Still, at all, a 24-8 record is not bad for a 22-year-old pitcher in his first full big-league season and justified manager Dick Williams starting Blue in the opening play-off game against Baltimore's mighty Orioles.

Until the seventh inning, it appeared a late - season rest had brought Blue back to his pre - All-star game form. But Vida never saw the end of that inning, as a 3-0 Oakland lead became a 3-3 deficit.

Unless he goes south for the winter, that inning will be the last pitched by Blue until 1972 spring training begin in Florida.

NOBODY, except perhaps the members of their immediate families, really expected the A's to win a pennant. Their 101 wins, including an American League record 55 on the road, were substantial accomplishments.

But Kansas City, 16 games back, was the only other club in their division to play .500 baseball, and the Royals were not known for breathing down anyone's neck. Although Baltimore's eventual 12 - game margin over the eastern division pack locked equally facile, the Tigers, Red Sox, and Yankees all won more games than they lost, and, prior to a horrendous slump, Boston at one point appeared to have a chance to end the Orioles' two - year reign.

The A's began to get the idea somehow up there, or down here, didn't like them Monday when their plane flight out of Baltimore-Friendship (flat) Airport was delayed due to a bomb threat after the Orioles ended their comeback opening game play-off win.

Then Tuesday Oakland reliever Jim "Mudcat" Grant noticed that he was missing $5,000 worth of jewelry, presumably stolen from his Baltimore hotel room the previous day. The missing goods included a $1,300 World Series ring Grant earned as a member of the 1965 member of the Minnesota Twins.

There is probably a logical explanation for the incident. The thieves undoubtedly mistook Modest Grant for "Catfish" Hunter, who served up home runs to Boog Powell and Brooks Robinson in the A's second-game loss.

For the fireballs and some eccentric students of baseball, it's been open season on Athletics.

RUNNING quarterbacks are like hitting pitchers. They can give opposition defences one more headache to worry about. Toronto Argonauts' Joe Theismann has proven to be Exrecipin Number One for defenders in the Canadian Football League.

While they're trying to keep tabs on the likes of Leon McQuay, Bill Symons, Mel Profit, and Mike Eben, Mr. Theismann still often leave them all holding the bag while he hangs onto the ball. Only 10 running backs in Canadian football have eaten up more than 1,000 yards, and no-one who has carried the ball as many as 50 times can make claim to a near eight-yard average.

SPEARING of hitting pitchers, there once was a fellow who could combine baseball's two noble arts most successfully. In his first full major league season he complemented an 18-6 won-lost record with a .315 year at the plate, won 23 games while batting .255 and once led the American League in home runs (20) the same season he batted .322 and pitched an 8-5 record.

But then, there was only one Babe Ruth.

Centre Paul Perras kicks up a shower of snow as he attempts to avoid a check by defenceman Greg Burkitt in a workout of the OHA Senior A Belleville Quintes. Greg Marchen moves in to lend a defensive hand in the practice session held last night at the Belleville Memorial Arena. The Quintes open their regular season schedule Friday night in a home game against the Kingston Aces. Game time is 9 p.m.

BCI Survives Trenton Test

Things were wild and woolly in Tuesday's Bay of Quinte high school junior soccer match between BCI and Trenton before the Collegians finally emerged with a 6-4 victory.

David Languran and Peter Crawford tallied for BCI to give them a 2-0 lead but Trenton bounced back with a pair of goals to equalize the contest.

A second goal by Languran and two quick tallies by Gary Adams on passes from Nick Barrett sent the Collegians into a commanding 5-2 lead which they never relinquished. Adams added his third goal of the contest late in the game, replying to two further markers by Trenton.

The BCI senior team up will their third shutout in four contests this season edging Trenton 1-0. Dave Van Vliet counted the game's only goal in the first half on passes from Brian Kaiser and Rick Hogge.

Defensively Steve Redner, Terry Coveney, Warren Rushlow and goalie Gary Donavan played well for the win.

In other Bay of Quinte action, Centennial fought a pair of games from Quinte Secondary School.

Bill Leitch fired a pair of goals to pace Centennial to a 3-1 win in the senior contest, with Roger Mountford adding the other tally. In the junior game Ross Geen scored twice and Glen Ellis and Paul Kirby once each to spearhead a 4-1 Centennial win.

Poirier Knows Exactly What Quintes Require

By ERIC EMERSON
Sports Staff

Gene Poirier is a needy hockey coach at the moment and the Belleville Quinte's mentor is definite about what those needs are.

"We need Senior, Godson and Jones," advised Poirier when asked to assess the OHA Senior A club's requirements for the upcoming season. "Except maybe for getting one more defenceman, our biggest problem right now is signing everybody we have available," he adds.

Of the three starting centres from last season, Dave Jones has been the only one regularly attending practices. Last year's playing coach saw regular action at left wing and in a penalty killing role in Saturday's 4-2 exhibition loss to the Kingston Aces. "He says that he isn't sure if he'll be able to get into good enough shape this season, but right now he's in better shape than a lot of the rookies," assesses Poirier.

George Godson, a perennial leading Belleville point-getter, has yet to make an appearance at the Quintes' training camp, but Poirier has been in contact with the speedy centre and Godson is expected to be in town tonight to discuss playing possibilities this season.

Doug Senior, a 19-goal scorer in 31 games last season, attended practice Monday night but was not on hand for Tuesday's workout.

Currently contending for starting centre positions are Paul Perras, a speedster, Barry Perris, who centred a line with Jones and Wayne McConnell in Kingston, and Toby O'Brien from Montreal. Quebec. O'Brien has attended both Belleville workouts this week and appeared much sharper in Tuesday's' practice than in his initial outing.

One position where the Quintes appear to have few worries is in goal, where Steve Rese has signed for another season and Ron Jury appears certain to nail down the other spot. Both goalies looked sharp despite the exhibition loss to the Aces.

Defensively the team already has Greg Marchen, Dan Creighton, and Lionel Botly on the dotted line. Forwards signed for the upcoming season include Ralph Plane, Mike Self, Meehan Bonner, Ray Johnston and Wayne McConnell.

The Quintes open their regular schedule Friday night when they face Kingston in a 9 p.m. bout at the Belleville Memorial Arena.

Time Flies Fast For Senior Saints

Time flew by for the Quinte seniors, but the play of the Junior Saints was anything but timely in a Bay of Quinte COSSA doubleheader with Picton yesterday.

The senior football squad breezed to a 54-6 win with the teams playing straight time (not stopping the clock on out-of-bounds, penalties etc.) in order to prevent any Prince Edward excellent field position.

A touchdown run by Pete Vos enabled to get the Quinte juniors off to a flying start, but penalties and a tough Picton defence combined to thwart their efforts. "Penalties hurt us some, but they (Picton) played really well," conceded losing coach Barry Turpin. It was the first setback in three games for the Saints and Picton's initial victory in four starts.

Inside linebacker Steve Rushlow added the other Quinte major returning an interception to give the Saint defence a total of 22 points in three league games this season. Al Hayman and Steve Nash also contributed interceptions to the winning effort. Picton's only touchdown came in the first half when Quinte committed five consecutive penalties to give Prince Edward excellent field position.

Chuvalo On Ali Card

TORONTO (CP) — George Chuvalo, Canadian heavyweight boxing champion whose proposed bout with Muhammad Ali was called off when Mexico City promoters were unable to obtain adequate funds, will be on the same card as the former world champion Nov. 17.

Chuvalo signed Tuesday to meet Cleveland Williams in the semi-final bout on a card at Houston Astrodome which will feature Ali and Buster Mathis.

Chuvalo said his $10,000 purse is only secondary. He hopes the fight will revive interest in a Chuvalo-Ali rematch. Ali pounded out a 15-round decision over the Toronto fighter in a championship fight more several years ago.

Both Houston fights will be carried via closed-circuit television in Toronto.

Turf Furor Raised

MIAMI (AP) — The City of Miami, the Miami Dolphins, Notre Dame coach Ara Parseghian and 70,000 football fans are upset about the same thing—the artificial turf in the Orange Bowl.

The Poly-Turf carpet became the centre of controversy Sunday when the Dolphins and New York Jets slipped through a National Football League comedy of errors.

The City of Miami is worried that the turf—which it bought last year for $206,000 —is falling short.

The Dolphins are concerned that the man-made grass may cause more tumbles in other home games—not to mention the gnawing feeling that the turf contributed to the 14-10 loss to the Jets.

Parseghian has nightmares that the turf may trip up Notre Dame's Saturday night. He called Dolphin coach Don Shula Monday to express concern about the slipping problem.

Finally, American Biltrite Co.—manufacturer of the Poly-Turf—is beginning to get worried too. Engineers from the company will come to Miami this week to investigate the turf.

Champagne Shots Oust A's

OAKLAND (AP) — The champagne corks that exploded in the Baltimore Orioles dressing room were the last shots fired in the West against Oakland Athletics.

Under a champagne shampoo, the Orioles celebrated their 3-1 conquest of Oakland Tuesday that gave the East Division champions the American League pennant.

"There's not a better team around, nor has there been for several years," said Oakland manager Dick Williams after his West Division champion Athletics lost their third in a row to the powerful Orioles.

The Orioles' sweep gave the defending world champions their third consecutive pennant. And, each time, they've swept the West titlist.

"They've got stars and superstars, youth and experience, great pitching the great fielding," said Oakland's Reggie Jackson, who slugged two home runs Tuesday. "They've got everything."

The Orioles, indeed, did have everything Tuesday—the Robinson boys, Brooks and Frank, in fine shape. And they had slim Jim Palmer pitching a gritty game.

"Palmer was the story today," said Baltimore manager Earl Weaver. "He didn't have his good stuff, but he sure gave a heart-and-gut performance. Wasn't he really something in the ninth when he struck out three in a row?"

Palmer scattered seven hits and pitched out of several jams before finishing strong at the end.

"Palmer was having trouble getting his breaking stuff over in the middle innings and he threw almost all fastballs," said Jackson.

"I was tired in the second inning," said the 25-year-old Palmer, but apparently not too tired to pitch a Baltimore pennant-clincher for the fourth time in his career.

The Orioles, who won their 14th straight game counting 11 in a row at the end of the season, wasted little time in getting to Oakland starter Diego Segui.

Ellie Hendricks' long fly ball drove in the first run from third base in the first inning. But Jackson pulled the Athletics into a temporary 1-1 tie with a 400-foot plus home run into the left centre field stands in the third.

Then Brooks Robinson delivered two runs in the fifth with a bases-loaded single. Left-handed swinger Hendricks was intentionally walked by the right-handed Segui, who preferred to pitch to the right-handed Brooks Robinson in a bases-loaded situation.

Did it bother Robinson that Segui showed him less respect? "Heck, no," said the Baltimore third baseman. "If I was him, I would have rather pitched to me."

The only thing on my mind was 'Boy, if I could only get a hit with everyone back home watching on television.'"

He did and it gave the Orioles a 3-1 lead that Sal Bando cut to one run with a towering home run to left in the sixth.

But the one run was as close as the fallen Athletics were to come.

Frank Robinson slugged a run-scoring double in the seventh and later came home on a wild pitch to give Baltimore its final runs.

Despite the sweep which gave the Orioles a 9-0 record in playoff games, Weaver scoffed at dynasty talk.

"Heck, there's not much of a difference between the top ball clubs," said the dynamic, little manager. "There's not that much difference between the Orioles and the Athletics."

Pirates Pick Odd Vocabulary

PITTSBURGH (AP) — Goats . . . fools . . . duds .

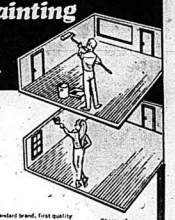
Strange subjects for baseball dressing rooms.

But they were the words bandied about after Pittsburgh Pirates defeated San Francisco Giants 2-1 Tuesday in the third game of the best-of-five National League playoffs.

The Pirates lead the series 2-1 and were in position to clinch the pennant today and meet American League champion Baltimore Orioles in the World Series starting Saturday in Baltimore.

Bich Hebner, Pirates' third baseman who digs graves in the off season, listed himself as "a goat" and "a damn fool," although it was his home run with two out in the eighth inning that won the game.

Hebner labelled himself a goat because his sixth inning error allowed Giants the unearned run which tied the score 1-1 after Bob Robertson's fourth home run of the series, had given the Pirates a 1-0 lead in the second inning. He said he felt like a damn fool price to his homer because of the way San Francisco pitcher Juan Marichal had been toying with him at bat.



The 23-year-old Hebner said he had the entire last half of the 1971 season on his mind when he came to bat in the eighth. He had spent two weeks in a hospital with a virus around the heart, averaged only .200 the final 2½ months, knocked in only 12 runs and hit three home runs.

And Bob Johnson, the 220-pound Pittsburgh right-hander who came to the ball park expecting to watch and wound up the winner with eight innings of five-hit pitching, said he was a "dud" all season.

"I'm a dud because I didn't win more games," said Johnson, a 9-10 performer for the East Division champion Pirates. But he wasn't a dud Tuesday as he struck out seven and scattered five hits in eight innings.

Hawks Remain Best in West

By IAN MacLAINE
Canadian Press Staff Writer

Shuffle the teams whatever way you will, Chicago Black Hawks will be the first card up when the National Hockey League's West Division standing is completed 26 weekends from now.

The Hawks survived a season-long plague of injuries last year to win the division title by

BOBBY HULL

30 points and there's no reason to assume the 1971-72 outcome will be any different.

They're a solid, close-knit team balanced with seasoned campaigners and robust young players culled from the club's well-researched scouting files, moulded by coach Billy Reay and general manager Tommy Ivan.

Superstars Bobby Hull and Stan Mikita provide the scoring nucleus around which the Chicago offence functions in front of a rock-hard defence and goalie Tony Esposito, entering his third season as No. 1 puck-stopper.

But despite their apparent unbeatable position, the only real note of complacency around the Hawks' pre-season camp has been voiced by Reay who approached the new season feeling "very, very good."

However, Reay, who normally leaves writers as much in the clear as fans were when they questioned him regarding the condition of his team, quickly actioned for his optimism.

What he meant was "one of the most important things for us is that we haven't been hurt at the last two drafts."

"That's very important to our hockey club. We've built a strong team and managed to keep it."

And while Chicago rates high in the early 1971-72 season, the next five or six places will probably come up with wholesale changes from the 1970-71 finish with only lowly California Golden Seals maintaining their last-place grip.

St. Louis Blues continued their role as the top expansion team from 1967 while playing second throughout last season to the Hawks who had moved over from the East Division in the 1970 realignment.

But there were signs of deterioration in this city once labelled the ideal hockey town, for Blues takes over as coach from Scotty Bowman who had hustled the team into the Cup final every year until losing to Minnesota North Stars in last year's quarter-finals.

Whether Abel can regroup the Blues into their winning ways could determine where St. Louis finishes in what appears a five-way battle for three playoff spots.

The Stars, meanwhile, cracked the East Division hold on playoff victories by storming to two wins over Montreal in the 1971 semi-finals. The Minnesotans appear to have matured enough for second this season with Pittsburgh Penguins, bolstered by new owners and defenceman Tim Horton, holding third and St. Louis fourth.

Philadelphia Flyers, with new coach Fred Shero, should finish ahead of Los Angeles Kings and California.

Chicago Black Hawks—No. 1 in the West and could go all the way this year, depending on condition of East contenders in playoffs. Esposito, Pat Stapleton and Bill White key the defensive corps but Reay should get more satisfaction from play of defencemen Doug Jarrett and Keith Magnuson who were off form much of last year. Hard-shooting Dennis Hull, Jim Pappin, Cliff Koroll and Chico Maki give Bobby Hull and Mikita support up front.

Minnesota North Stars—Stability is the key to the Stars upgrading. Coach Jack Gordon, back for his second term as coach, stressed defence last season to go along with discipline and it paid off. Captain Ted Harris and veteran Doug Mohns bolster defence in front of veteran goalies Gump Worsley, who says this could be his last year, and Cesare Maniago and sophmore Gilles Gilbert.

Gordon, while tending to lean toward defence, has a lot of two-way skaters up front, spearheaded by 45-goal scorer Bill Goldsworthy, Danny Grant (27) and Jude Drouin (21) and newcomer Bob Nevin, a 21-goal contributor to New York Rangers.

Pittsburgh Penguins—Coach Red Kelly looks on the coming season with some concern, noted primarily in the acquisition of two veterans who 'will hopefully provide on-ice leadership sadly lacking last year when the Penguins were edged into a sixth-place finish on the final day by Los Angeles.

Horton, picked up from New York along with his $85,000 price tag, should play enough to inspire confidence in the ice while goalie Roy Edwards, drafted from Detroit, gives stability in the Pittsburgh goal along with Les Binkley.

St. Louis Blues—Can't be far behind Pittsburgh, but loss of scoring leader Red Berenson in late-season trade with Detroit could be disaster. Garry Unger, obtained in the Detroit trade, has superstar qualities but lacks maturity in lead, as does defenceman Carl Gerard. Blues still have bone-cracking defence trio in Noel Picard and the Plager brothers—Barclay and Bob —and a solid NHLer in goaltender Ernie Wakely who assumed No. 1 role last year from now-retired Glenn Hall.

But aside from Unger (28 goals), the club has acute lack of 30-goal scorers, thereby nullifying defensive performances.

Philadelphia Flyers—If Shero cracks the whip early, the Flyers can repeat their third-place finish. But they won't. The Philadelphians have a four-year history of not being able to click in the clutch. They have a solid, if unspectacular, defence in front of a more than adequate netminding tandem—Doug Favell and Bruce Gamble. But aside from Bobby Clarke, the scoring must be termed erratic.

Los Angeles Kings—Coach Larry Regan backed his club into fifth place ahead of troubled Pittsburgh last year, but the latest rumor has Regan producing early or . . . The Kings got much of their desire last year from hitherto fringe players—Mike Byers (27 goals), Ross Lonsberry, Juha Widing and Bob Berry with a spice. Veterans Denis DeJordy, Bob Pulford and Harry Howell continue motions, but. . .

California Golden Seals—The Seals have finished last in West two straight seasons and should make it three in a row. There's little to delight new coach Garry Young other than versatile Carol Vadnais. Whatever money millionaire owner Charles Finlay pumps into the operation, the future bears little hope.

Long Arm of Law Reaches Petes

PETERBOROUGH (CP) — The long arm of the hockey law has reached out to bar a Canadian youth from playing this season with Peterborough Petes of the Ontario Hockey Association Junior A series.

OHA secretary-manager Bill Hanley has advised the Peterborough club that the Canadian Amateur Hockey Association is honoring a suspension imposed on Bob Smulders, 18, of Toronto, by the International Ice Hockey Federation last season.

The IIHF originally suspended Smulders for one year, after finding him guilty of leaving the penalty box to threaten the referee. Smulders was playing for The Netherlands national team.

Reviewing the case two months ago, the IIHF increased Smulders' suspension to two years.

Smulders, who came to camp Sept. 10 and subsequently signed a contract, said he is seeking legal advice.

Oaks Stand Tall

BARRIE (CP) — Two third-period goals carried Oakville Oaks of the Ontario Hockey Association Senior A series to a 3-1 win over Syracuse Blazers of the Eastern Hockey League in an exhibition game Tuesday.

Dave MacDonald, Wayne O'Donnell and Pat Adair scored for the Oaks while the single Blazer goal went to Paul LaRose.

Leafs Gun Canucks In Opening Preview

By THE CANADIAN PRESS

Toronto Maple Leafs and Minnesota North Stars finally put it together Tuesday in their National Hockey League exhibition games.

The Leafs bombed the Canucks 7-3 in Vancouver and North Stars clipped Chicago-Black Hawks 2-1 in Winnipeg, before 15,327 fans.

In other games California Golden Seals defeated Los Angeles Kings 4-0 in Victoria and Philadelphia Flyers defeated Richmond Robins of the American Hockey League 4-3.

Minnesota's victory was its first after a series of five frustrating ties in nine games.

Murray Oliver's goal at 2:28 of the final period carried North Stars to victory after Keith Magnuson's goal midway through the second had tied the game. Minnesota's first goal was provided early in the second period by Jude Drouin, on a power play.

The Leafs exploded for three second period goals in their triumph before a capacity crowd of 15,570.

Team captain Dave Keon led Toronto with two goals. Billy MacMillan, Rick Ley, Norm Ullman, Daryl Sittler and Brian Spencer each netted one.

Rookie Bobby Lalonde, Murray Hall and John Schella scored for the Canucks, who have lost only two decisions in 10 pre-season outings.

Both the Toronto-Vancouver and the California-Los Angeles games were previews of league opening games Friday.

Only a handful of spectators were in the Victoria arena to see Marv Edwards perform the shutout for the Seals.

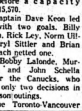
California goals were scored by Walt McKechnie, in the first period, Ernie Hicke and Joey Johnston in the second, and Norm Ferguson in the third.

Richmond gave their parent club, Philadelphia, a good workout before boxing 4-3 at Philadelphia.

Bill Lesuk, Simon Nolet, Larry Hale and Pierre Plante scored for the winners. Dave Schultz, Bob Gerrard and Andre Gaydette replied for the Robins.

Meanwhile, in Boston, Bruins' coach Tom Johnson said Tuesday he was not alarmed by his team's dismal pre-season showing of only three wins in nine exhibition games.

"But there are some things we have to do," he admitted. "For one thing, we're going to have to get more shots on the net and into the net.



"Perhaps this club hasn't worked hard enough to get into top physical shape. If that's the case, we'll do something about it."

The Bruins open the season against New York Rangers at Boston Sunday.

U.S. Not Likely To Bar China

UNITED NATIONS (CP) — Many foreign diplomats are doubtful the United States, despite increasing efforts, will be able to keep Nationalist China in the United Nations.

The diplomats say the U.S. has not picked up significant strength despite the heavy emphasis put on the UN by State Secretary William Rogers for two Chinas—a seat for the Peking government as well as one for the Nationalists of Taiwan.

But Albania, speaking for Peking in the general debate Tuesday, said that Communist China remains unalterably opposed to any arrangement that would enable two Chinese regimes to sit in the UN.

Albania has been acting as floor manager in the General Assembly for the resolution that calls for admission of Peking and the expulsion of Taiwan.

Rogers met Tuesday with officials of more than a dozen nations and dealt over-all with the China question. More of the same was expected in his meetings today with 10 more foreign ministers.

U.S. officials say meetings held over the last two weeks have done nothing to dispel their cautious optimism that the American plan will succeed when final voting starts, ".

But diplomats from other nations said many governments are reluctant to back the U.S. proposals because they don't want to endanger their own rebly early next month.

Davis Denies Stand Fixed

OTTAWA (CP) — Canada's preliminary position for the world environmental conference in Stockholm next year sparked questions in the Commons Tuesday.

Environment Minister Jack Davis maintained that Canada has made no statement that places economic growth ahead of environmental quality.

Any such idea arose from a newspaper headline which misinterpreted a news report about the Canadian document, he said.

Walter Dinsdale (PC—Brandon-Souris) asked whether the headline "Canada puts economy ahead of environment" represents the government's official position.

Mr. Davis said no such statement was made in a government document. He assured Mr. Dinsdale the government would listen to the views of those concerned with the environment.

The Canadian paper says:

"In the future, the goals of economic growth and environmental quality must be reconciled. Given some of the probable dimensions of tomorrow's Canada, this will not be easy."

These "dimensions" included a growing and young population.

"Economic growth is necessary, therefore, at least so long as the present work ethic exists . . . so long as it is considered normal and almost obligatory for the population to derive its income from the labor of the head and possibly other members of the family between the ages of 20 and 65."

There were signs that this might change over the next 25 years.

While this must figure in environmental planning, "there can be little doubt that more importance must be given to the provision of useful employment for the expanding labor force."

"Rapid economic growth is vital if this is to be achieved."

The policy dilemma was heightened by the fact that projected growth in the industrial sector was in "pollution intensive" industries.

The federal environment department said the document will be revised with advice from federal-provincial and national preparatory committees for release in final form next spring.

As it stands, it was filed with the UN secretariat for the Stockholm conference, marked "provisional."

Sable Ours: Trudeau

OTTAWA (CP) — The federal government does not accept Nova Scotia's claim to all royalties from Sable Island oil Prime Minister Trudeau said Tuesday.

And Industry Minister Jean-Luc Pepin, now acting minister of energy, said he thinks the island is under the exclusive legislative authority of the federal government.

A day after the announcement that oil and gas had been struck on the island off the Nova Scotia coast, cabinet ministers faced a stiff round of questions in the Commons about the ownership and royalties involved.

Mr. Trudeau said this issue would have been settled had the provinces accepted a federal proposition on offshore mineral rights.

The prime minister said the island was included in 1968 proposals by the federal government, which are still under discussion by the provinces.

Mr. Pepin said the federal government is trying to distribute the advantages of offshore minerals in the best way between the taxpayers of Canada and the provinces involved.

Outside the House, the prime minister said he did not want to argue publicly with Mr. Regan.

Strikes Spread In U.S.

WASHINGTON (AP) — A four-man board of inquiry worked toward today's deadline in helping President Nixon decide whether to halt dock strikes on the West, East and Gulf coasts.

The board, appointed Monday night by the president, was formally certifying contract deadlocks that have paralyzed most of the country's deep-water ports.

Appointed under terms of the Taft-Hartley Act governing labor relations, the board was directed to report to Nixon by today. The president then will determine whether to ask an 80-day court injunction against the strikers.

Another strike, halting soft-coal production in more than 20 states, entered its sixth day today, with 100,000 miners off the job.

The United Mine Workers and the Bituminous Coal Operators Association said they were, resuming negotiations immediately. The union seeks a $1 increase in the top daily wage of $27.

Issues in the 98-day-long West Coast dock strike are demands by the independent International Longshoremen's and Warehousemen's Union over off-dock container jurisdiction, a guaranteed work week and wages and benefits.

In the East, the AFL-CIO International Longshoremen's Association seeks extension in present form of a guaranteed annual income from New York to other East and Gulf ports.

Pickersgill Impressed By LRC

OTTAWA (CP) — J. W. Pickersgill, president of the Canadian transport commission, today said his first look at a prototype passenger railway car designed for high-speed travel between cities has given him "a lot of hope."

But he advised the devlopers to "try and get the bugs out of it btore they try it on the public."

The coach is part of a new LRC train—for lightweight, rapid and comfortable—being developed by Alcan Canada Products, Dominion Foundries and Steel, Ltd., Dofasco and MLW Industries.

The federal trade department is sharing half the estimated development cost of $2.5 million through its program for the advancement of industrial technology.

One of the train's main features will be a hydraulic banking system designed to take passengers comfortably through curves at speeds 35-to-45-percent faster than now is possible with conventional equipment.

When completed, the train, designed as a push-pull unit with a locomotive at each end and up to 12 passenger coaches, is expected to operate at 120 m.p.h. over existing tracks. The aim is to have it competitive with air travel between cities when factors such as service frequency and convenience are considered.

Harold Corrigan, president of Alcan Canada Products, said the train will be able to operate between Montreal and Toronto in three hours, 20 minutes.

Parolees' Pay

OTTAWA (CP) — A survey by the National parole board in June showed that 78 per cent of 2,663 prisoners on parole were earning an average monthly income of $321, the solicitor general's department said Tuesday.

Seventeen per cent of the parolees, or 445, were unemployed, and five pr cnt, ore 140 were taking academic or vocational training, the department said in a news release.

The average income of the parolees surveyed is $412 a month, if the income of those in training is included.

There were 5,257 prisoners on parole on June 30, but only the 2,663 parolees under the direct supervision of the parole service for the entire month were considred in the survey.

First Degrees

TORONTO (CP) — The first Bachelor of Technology degrees conferred by Ryerson Polytechnical Institute at Toronto will go to graduates of the four-year interior design program in the spring convocation, 1972, it was announced Tuesday.

The mandate for Ryerson to confer degrees was passed in the provincial legislature July 23 and proclaimed Oct. 1. The school, which gives diplomas at present, is empowered to grant be Bachelor of Technology and Bachelor of Applied Arts degrees.

MRS. SHIRLEY ROBERTS, 2444 Rector Avenue, Ottawa 5.

"I come to Loblaws because I find that it's probably the best place to shop, pricewise", says Mrs. Roberts, who shops for four. "I've shopped different stores and compared prices and quality and I feel I'm getting good value for my money at Loblaws; better, I think, than I would get at the others. Actually, I watch prices quite closely—most people do these days—and I've no complaints about prices or quality—if I did have I wouldn't come to Loblaws every week. Another thing I like here is the service—especially at the meat counter. Occasionally I ask the butcher for special cuts and he's always very nice about it. I appreciate being able to get what I want.".

'Breathtaking Savings'

Lewis Proposes Rail System to Break Commuter Bottleneck

TORONTO (CP) — A plan to solve Toronto's commuter bottleneck using some existing rail lines at "breath-taking" savings was unveiled Tuesday night by Stephen Lewis, leader of the New Democratic Party.

Mr. Lewis, campaigning for the Oct. 21 provincial election, said his plan envisages two new commuter lines of 85 miles at a cost of about $85 million.

He said this was one-tenth of the cost of an equivalent expressway system.

One line of 29 miles would operate from Streetsville on the western fringes of Metropolitan Toronto, carrying 3,600 passengers an hour to Cherrywood in the northwest end, at a cost of about $28 million.

The other would stretch from Georgetown, 20 miles west of Toronto, through the downtown core of the city and on to Richmond Hill in the north end, a distance of about 45 miles. New line would have to be built to link the system with Toronto International Airport and four miles to extend it to Barrie.

Mr. Lewis said the total cost to provide facilities and rolling stock for the new commuter systems, allowing for a 40-per-cent inflation factor, would be about $85 million. He said this compared with the $167 million a mile it costs to build inter-city expressways and $4.5 million for suburban rapid-transit highways.

Outlining the plan to about 100 party workers gathered in the campaign headquarters of NDP candidate Dan Heap, Mr. Lewis, said the provincial government has spent more than $161 million on metro expressways to 1969.

"We feel that the funds to complete an expanded commuter service would be well within existing spending patterns and will save Metro residents a breath-taking sum of money over all."

He said the savings to the provincial government could approximate $9 million a mile.

An NDP government would immediately negotiate with the federal government and the railways to secure provincial control of all existing rail beds and railway rights-of-way suitable for commuter transit.

He said he believes a federal report on rail commuters, expected to be made public this week, "is going to draw attention to these two rail lines" as worthy of development for commuter systems.

The plan is part of the NDP's transportation policy which favors the use of public transit systems over highways.

Mr. Lewis has been critical in the campaign of Premier William Davis for not providing alternatives to expressways, as occurred when the government halted construction on the Spadina Expressway.

Earlier Tuesday, Mr. Lewis saw no need for legislation to enforce greater Canadian autonomy within international unions in Canada.

He said Canadian workers are gradually achieving autonomy and rejected suggestions that his party was minimizing the role of international unions in Canada.

Mr. Lewis flies to Sudbury today for a one-day swing through three Northern Ontario ridings.

Bill Davis to Stick With Campaign Strategy

In the traditionally-Conservative Ottawa Valley Tuesday, he predicted again and again that his party will win Oct. 21, even suggesting how tiresome it is being the only candidate for premier since the Liberals and New Democrats are in a race for second place.

Officials on the tour say Mr. Davis will finish his campaign as he began it, appealing to voters to judge him on his record of seven months and foregoing any election promises.

Mr. Davis did make one promise Tuesday when he vowed to appoint a woman to the cabinet if one of the seven among 117 Conservative candidates were elected.

At Sir Robert Borden high school Tuesday night he told the packed auditorium he will continue to campaign without promising increases in government programs and would tax the wallets of Ontario citizens.

He was interested in extending medical and social services, including dental care for the young, but these must be done selectively, in the same manner the government decided to pay medical and hospital insurance premiums for persons 65 and older.

Mr. Davis said that in times of economic complexity, "certain partisan feelings" must be set aside and that is why his government is prepared to back Ottawa on its handling of the United States import surcharge.

Two groups of protesters met Mr. Davis on his arrival in Smiths Falls earlier Tuesday for a reception in the long-time Conservative constituency of Lanark.

About 20 members of the Ontario Catholic Student Federation were protesting his refusal to extend aid beyond Grade 10 in the separate school system, while a smaller number protested increased school taxes.

At a Smiths Falls hotel, Mayor T. O. Aylwell told the premier and a crowd of Conservative supporters that he had to mention problems in this town that Mr. Davis was not aware of.

He said he had held a five-minute private conversation with the premier to spell them out, and that the reception was not the time or the place to repeat them.

In Kemptville, the 14 hour bus tour around Carleton, Grenville-Dundas and Lanark ridings was kicked off with the fifth free pancake breakfast of the election campaign.

While about 300 supporters ate pancakes in Kemptville's community centre square, Frank Stocker, New Democratic Party candidate in Grenville-Dundas, stood by passing out seltzer lemonade.

Mr. Davis also walked across the road to play baseball with public school students. He signed autographs at the school.

None-of-the incumbent Conservatives in the three ridings is running again.

Carleton riding has been Conservative except in the first election after Confederation when it was held by a Liberal, and from 1919 23 when it was held by United Farmers of Ontario.

Grenville-Dundas elected two Conservative premiers, Howard Ferguson and James Whitney, and in Lanark, in 1950, George Gomme won his seat by acclamation.

Mr. Davis goes by bus today to Arnprior, Renfrew, and Pembroke before flying to Windsor.

Job Layoffs

Nixon Claims Government Too Slow to React

STRATFORD (CP) — The slowness of the Ontario Development Corp. to respond to industrial layoffs and plant closures is "ridiculous," Liberal Leader Robert Nixon said Tuesday.

He made the comment during an Oct. 21 election campaign stop at the sleigh and toboggan manufacturing plant of Werlich Industries Ltd., a subsidiary of the United States-owned Leisure Group.

The plant announced an immediate layoff of 130 of its 150 employees Friday.

Stephen Moorehead, general manager of Canadian operations for the Leisure Group, said the parent company was refinancing and ordered the closure of all its operations even though the Canadian plant was working to capacity and had orders to fill.

He said that when he approached the ODC for assistance he was told "we'll try but it'll take time." Time I don't have with snow on the way."

Mr. Nixon said the ODC "doesn't have to take that much time—when 150 jobs are concerned in Stratford."

"We can't just say that government processes are slow and we can't get the assistance here in time for the snow. That's ridiculous."

It was Mr. Nixon's second attack in two days on government operation of the ODC. Monday night in Galt, he said decisions on which companies get aid are "far too political."

There is no criteria for granting ODC loans which he said seem to depend on "the political completion of the area concerned."

Later at Port Colborne, Mr. Nixon said Ontario voters can look forward to paying a provincial income tax if they re-elect a Progressive Conservative government.

"I am afraid that if they win this election, and I trust that they won't, they will in their next budget impose their own income tax, he told a sidewalk news conference in the Niagara Peninsula town.

"We as Liberals reject this . . ."

Mr. Nixon said that the Conservatives have been threatening a provincial income tax in their last two budget speeches "and if we are to take their threats seriously, it should happen."

He said that should the Tories be returned to office they will blame the federal government for a lack of funds as justification for their own income tax.

Mr. Nixon fired another salvo at Premier William Davis at Niagara Community College in Welland and criticized Mr. Davis for charging that the Liberals are going on a spending spree with their plans to assume 80 per cent of education costs.

He told 250 students that:

"They say Nixon is going to transfer education costs away from property to the provincial government and that will cost $640 million.

"He hasn't got the gumption or the breadth of mind to realize that although this goes from one level of taxation to another, the taxpayers are the same people.

"We're talking about fairness in the cost of education and he's talking about politics in the costs of education so I get a little worked up about it."

Mr. Nixon has promised education economies by-making the school system more efficient through elimination of overlapping courses and facilities.

Mr. Nixon's day ended at St. Catharines, where he said more regional government will be imposed without a tax review if a Conservative government is re-elected.

He told a meeting of Niagara regional councillors that further regional government would create "financial disaster" and said the next areas slated for regional government are Halton Peel and Hamilton-Wentworth.

Mr. Nixon said that a Liberal government would place a moratorium on all further regionalization and undertake "a far-reaching review of the lessons learned by the taxpayers" of the Niagara region whom he called "regional government guinea pigs."

He said a Liberal government would remove conditions from grants to municipalities, which should have the right to "do the right thing or make mistakes."

Mr. Nixon travels today to the Muskoka and Algoma areas, with stops scheduled at Elliot Lake and Chapleau.

Inmates Flee

KINGSTON (CP) — Two Joyceville penitentiary prisoners failed to return to the institution Monday after being granted temporary leave of absence.

Stuart Carr, 30, was given a pass to attend night school here. He was serving 10 years for robbery.

Ernest Charles Hollands, 41, failed to return from a three-day leave to work in a local business firm. He was serving six years for possession of an offensive weapon and armed robbery and another 1,124 days for parole forfeiture.

Referral OK

NEW YORK (AP) — A ban on profit-making referral services for women seeking abortions in New York state was upheld Tuesday by a special three-judge federal panel.

The ruling applied to an amendment to the state's 1970 abortion law, aimed at curbing alleged abuses by firms operating referral services.

Legislative hearings last February heard testimony that the firms charged excessive fees, split fees, advertised, gave non-professional advice over the telephone and failed to itemize charges.

Supply Chief Blasted By MPs

OTTAWA (CP) — A cabinet spokesman ran into a withering barrage of opposition interjections Tuesday in the Commons as he tried to justify the Prairie grains income stabilization bill.

James Richardson, minister of supply and services, was the only government spokesman aside from a brief sally by Otto Lang, minister responsible for the Canadian wheat board, to try to clarify opposition comments.

Otherwise the day belonged to the opposition as many MPs made wandering speeches, joked and occasionally rose to ask questions of each other. The Commons has spent the best part of six days on the issue during the last 2½ weeks without completing debate on the first of 14 amendments proposed by the opposition.

Mr. Richardson, whose family operates a Winnipeg grain investment firm, was interrupted by at least eight opposition points or order and questions of privilege. There were more than 65 interjections during his speech.

"Our concern primarily is to recognize the great contribution made to Canada by the men who work the topsoil of the great plains," he said between interruptions.

"Another speech like this and that topsoil will blow away," interjected Eldon Woolliams (PC —Calgary North).

"The prairie topsoil is one of the sacred possessions of this nation," the minister continued. "The men who work on that soil are not suitable subjects to be made the pawns in a political game."

The stabilization bill would give Prairie farmers $67 million more than the existing Temporary Wheat Reserves Act which it would replace, he said. After interjections by Stanley Knowles (NDP—Winnipeg North Centre), he changed the figure to $57 million.

He repeated figures given by Prime Minister Trudeau on television Sunday night. The stabilization bill provides for a $100-million lump-sum payment to farmers to replace payments under the Temporary Wheat Reserves Act for the 1970-71 crop year. In each of the next two years the government would pay $35 million into the stabilization fund for a total of $170 million.

Mr. Richardson said the wheat reserves act, if continued, would mean only $113 million in payments in the same period.

DRAWS REPLIES

The figures drew a scathing speech from Conservative Leader Robert Stanfield and a detailed rebutal from Mr. Knowles.

Mr. Stanfield said the figures used by Mr. Trudeau Sunday and Mr. Richardson Tuesday are not honest.

He blasted the government for refusing to make payments for the crop year that ended July 31 as legally required under the wheat reserves act and for rejecting criticism from all Prairie agriculture ministers.

"The government has not only been arrogant in respect of its breach of the law and dishonest in respect of figures it has put out, it has been bullheaded in refusing to take any advice from anybody, including those provincial ministers of agriculture."

Mr. Knowles said farmers would get only $65 million out of the three crop years ending July 31, 1973, not $170 million.

The two federal payments of $35 million would go into the stabilization fund, he said, and not to any farmer.

Moreover, with the farmers having to pay $17.5 million into the fund annually for the two years, 1972 would be left only with a net $65 million from the $100 million payment proposed by the government. This, he compared with the $113 million payable under the wheat reserves act.

Mr. Lang retorted that most opposition figures were speculative. The only firm figures were the $100 million lump-sum payment and $38.6 million which farmers would receive in wheat reserves payments for 1970-71.

Social Credit Leader Real Caouette called for a vote on the bill. Farmers were being used as political pawns in the long debate.

Paul Yewchuk (PC—Athabasca) said the government's refusal to make wheat reserves payments was "equivalent to armed robbery."

INVESTMENT DOWN

While private investment in Ontario in 1970 was down compared to the previous year, public investment increased $40 million during the same year.

Ti-Cats Want Win Not CFL Records

REGINA (CP) — Hamilton Tiger-Cats would probably be willing to trade a Canadian Football League record to Ron Lancaster for a victory over Saskatchewan Roughriders in an interlocking game tonight.

Lancaster needs to complete three passes to surpass Sam Etcheverry's career total of 1,630 and three touchdown throws to erase Russ Jackson's mark of 185 from the record books.

Lancaster, last year's most valuable player, already has three career marks to his credit: Most passing yardage, 25,768; most passes thrown, 3,121; and most interceptions, 221.

Saskatchewan fullback George Reed will also be closing in on a career record. Reed, holder of three career rushing records, needs 281 yards to surpass Johnny Bright's 10,909-yard total at Calgary and Edmonton.

Reed already has the most carrier, 2,093, the most touchdowns, 82, and the most touchdowns rushing, 81.

Both second-place clubs will be out to snap a scoring drought which limited them to three points in weekend games.

The Ticats were able to score only a single Sunday in a 17-1 loss to Calgary Stampeders, half of what the Roughriders managed to collect Saturday in a 35-2 loss to Winnipeg Blue Bombers.

Hamilton will be without guard Ed Chalupka, who strained ligaments in his right knee Sunday. Chalupka, a rookie, was hurt in a collision with a team-mate during a punt situation.

Carlos Wants Action

MONTREAL (CP) — Wide receiver John Carlos has a formula to put Montreal Alouettes back on the win side of the ledger—throw him the ball more often.

And the way the Eastern Football Conference club's lame and injured list shapes up today, perhaps the former U.S. Olympic sprint star has the answer.

Carlos, who says he never ran for time or world records, claims the only thing that really counted was winning."

The speedy Carlos has appeared in five games for the Als since being classified a non-import by the Canadian Football League, Sept. 9. But for the most part he has worked as a highly-paid messenger to bring in plays from the bench or as a decoy to take the heat off prime receivers.

"I think I can help this team," Carlos said, pondering the Als' two-game losing streak picked up in a disastrous swing into the Western Football Conference.

"I don't know why they're not throwing the ball to me, but I'm open and they're just not using me. I've said, 'I could understand it if I was dropping balls all over the place, but I haven't dropped one yet.'"

So far Carlos has managed to bang on to all five passes flung his way and has learned to absorb punishment from opponents' tacklers while keeping the ball.

Head coach Sam Etcheverry feels that part of the reason Carlos has not had more work to do in the pass-catching department is because quarterbacks tend to throw to their favorite targets. So far Carlos hasn't qualified in this area.

Barton Brainy

TORONTO (CP) — In Toronto Argonauts' two-quarterback system, Joe Theismann has emerged as the most improved five signal-caller this season, but partner Greg Barton makes up for it off the field.

When Barton, 24, joined the Canadian Football League club this year, he said one of the factors that influenced his move from Philadelphia Eagles of the National Football League was the opportunities here for developing as a coach.

Barton, therefore, has been keeping his coaching future in mind while sharing quarterback duties with Theismann, the rookie from Notre Dame.

But a good deal of Theismann's success may be due to Barton's paper work before and during training camp when he helped head coach Leo Cahill and his staff prepare the pass offence.

Johnson Traded

ANAHEIM, Calif. (AP) — Alex Johnson, the batting crown outfielder who led the American League in hitting in 1970, has been traded by California Angels to Cleveland for the Indians' problem outfielder, Vada Pinson.

The Angels also sent along catcher Jerry Moses, fulfilling his request to be traded, and Tuesday's deal also cost Cleveland pitcher Alan Foster and infielder-outfielder Frank Baker.

Johnson, who hit .329 the two seasons ago, was suspended without pay in June when Angel management said he wasn't hustling. Through the Major League Players' Association he filed a grievance and won suspended pay (about $29,000) on grounds he was emotionally disturbed and should have been placed on the team's disabled list.

At 28, Johnson moves to his fifth major league club after the Philadelphia, St. Louis, Cincinnati and California—in seven years.

By telephone from his Detroit home, Johnson said:

"This is a great challenge and I like challenges. I can't wait for the season to start. I could say a lot of things about the Angels, but they wouldn't be good for me or good for baseball."

Sydney J. Harris Says

Translating Idioms Is Tricky

I was talking with a Russian who is in this country on an exchange program, and he said that one of the things that bothered him was our frequent references to Khrushchev's phrase: "We shall bury you." This, he said, was a pure translation of the idiom actually used. What the phrase meant in Russian was "We shall leave you in the dust" in the race between the U.S. and Russia for economic supremacy.

The translation of idioms from one language to another has always posed a tricky problem. Some informed persons insist that a wrong translation was responsible for our dropping the first atomic bombs on Hiroshima and Nagasaki — the Japanese verb, "mokusatsu," meaning both "no comment" or "to kill with silence."

As Dr. Mario Pei points out in his revised edition of The Story of Language, the Japanese reaction to our demands for unconditional surrender was interpreted as rejecting our ultimatum as "unworthy of notice". What the Japanese premier actually said, according to the story was that his government had decided to withhold comment until they had time to study the demand further.

The Italians have a phrase, "Traduttore — traditore," which means "A translator is a traitor". Words and phrases take on different nuances and connotations in a different language: Balzac's Droll Stories are not what we mean by "Droll"; the Spanish "Los Toros Bravos" does not really mean "the brave bulls"; and Dante's Divine Comedy is nothing like what we would be inclined to call a "comedy".

Even the same language has its own pitfalls of misunderstanding request use. I recall a story about an Englishman, an American and a Scotsman telling their experiences in other English-speaking areas.

The Englishman recounted: "I'll never forget my feelings the first time I had breakfast in America when the waitress leaned over my shoulder and whispered: 'Are you through with your cereal?' It was some time before I discovered she meant 'Have you finished your porridge?'"

The American rejoined: "Well, shortly after I landed in England, a waiter came up to me at lunch and said, 'How did you find your chop, sir?' I replied, 'Oh, I looked behind the potato and there it was,' before I realized he was asking me how I liked it."

And the Scotsman weighed in with: "I was once in lodgings in a small town in the west of Ireland. When I'd finished supper, an exceedingly pretty girl came in to my room and said, 'Will I strip now, sir?' I fled into my bedroom and locked the door, but learned afterwards that Irish girls always talk about 'stripping the table' when they clear dishes."

Jeane Dixon's Horoscope

For October 7

Your birthday today: Begins a year of active adventure in which many paths are explored; some dead ends, some in strange and exciting directions, but most enriching, educational, profitable in the almost anything you do yields a visible gain within a reasonably short period. Today's natives are agile, often specialize in health care, physical training, usually working in teams.

ARIES (Mar. 21 — Apr. 19): Be patient, let well enough alone. Divert your energy from this passing phase to plans and contingencies yet to be considered.

TAURUS (Apr. 20 — May 20): You aren't necessarily the cause or even involved in the changes going on all around you. Be calm and await definite requests for your attention.

GEMINI (May 21 — June 20): Social arrangements should be easy, relaxed, open to gentle exploration for better relations. Haste puts you at a rudimentary disadvantage.

CANCER (June 21 — July 22): Much can be done on ordinary routine jobs already laid out, despite occasional interesting distractions.

LEO (July 23 — Aug. 22): Any chance for travel, real or symbolic, should be well considered and converted to experience. A temporary parting improves some relationships.

VIRGO (Aug. 23 — Sept. 22): Any way the day works out will find you sensitive in one direction or another. Follow your first impressions implicitly.

LIBRA (Sept. 23 — Oct. 22): For an upward project, reach for all the co-operation you can arrange. Defer any claims or demands on your time and resources.

SCORPIO (Oct. 23—Nov. 21): Collect what is yours, consolidate your progress, replan, refinance if there's any advantage to be gained.

SAGITTARIUS (Nov. 22 — Dec. 21): You have help, and although it lacks in some finer points, it's enough for what you have to do. An early start assists enormously. Pace your efforts; tomorrow brings more of the same.

CAPRICORN (Dec. 22 — Jan. 19): Expect a test of your ideas and determination. There are times for compromise and adjustment but this is hardly such a moment.

AQUARIUS (Jan. 20 — Feb. 18): Good fences make good neighbors. Temptation is to involve yourself in the affairs of others — to no very constructive end.

PISCES (Feb. 19 — Mar. 20): Details demand more attention than you'd like, but wade through them. Brush off the whims of others if need be.

No Objections Filed On Hospital Proposal

Bylaw Ready To Go

By ROY PEACOCK
Staff Reporter

Property owners in the Dundas Street and Herchimer Ave. district of the city have no objection to the proposed use of the Queens Motor Hotel as a convalescent hospital.

At least there was no opposition registered last night at a public meeting at city hall called by Belleville Subordinate Planning Advisory Committee to hear possible objections to rezoning part of the motel property to allow its use as an extended care unit of Belleville General Hospital.

City council at its last meeting passed the necessary bylaw but it was felt a public meeting should be held to hear possible objections before it went to the OMB for approval.

But the only objection voiced at last night's meeting was from a resident who said the rezoning didn't go far enough.

Ike K. Smith, 104 Herchimer Ave. said he had no objection to the motel property being used as an extended care unit of the hospital but said he was opposed to spot rezoning.

Correspondence from two other Herchimer Ave. residents expressed much the same view.

The writers felt that all of the west side of Herchimer between Bridge and Dundas should be rezoned to RM3 use.

The rezoning application was for the north part of the motel property now zoned R2 which permits single family residential. The request was for RM3 which allows multiple family housing and commercial uses, including that of a hospital.

But city council felt the rezoning should be restrictive and a special RM3 zone was established limiting use of the rezoned property to single family housing, motel, or hospital use.

Any new construction on the property under the terms of the bylaw would be restricted to six storeys in height.

Several speakers, including Dr. Reginald Anderson, director of extended care hospital facilities and Dr. R. F. Potter, MPP for Quinte, in support of the rezoning stressing the urgency of the change to allow the hospital operation.

Others supporting the rezoning were Msgr. J. P. Sullivan chairman of the hospital board of governors, and Dr. Bruce Morgan, surgeon specialist at the hospital.

Dr. Anderson said the pilot project extended care hospital facility proposed for the motor hotel property was intended for patients who do

Labor To Urge Arms Cut

BRIGHTON, England (CP-AP) — The opposition Labor party urged today that progress be made within a year toward substantial cuts in the military programs of both the NATO and the Warsaw pact nations of Eastern Europe.

A policy statement from the Labor leadership also pressed the Conservative government to speed up preparations for a European security conference on balanced force reductions between East and West.

The statement was circulated to the party's rank and file for a foreign policy debate today at Labor's annual convention.

It was virtually certain of approval.

A variety of motions prepared in advance made clear that Labor's foreign policy debate will also:

—Break the bipartisan tradition on the Irish question by criticizing the government's handling of violence in Northern Ireland.

—Warn Prime Minister Edward Heath's administration against any Rhodesia settlement that comprises the interest of the black African majority there.

—Demand that the government of Pakistan release the leaders of East Bengal and negotiate with them a political settlement acceptable to the people of that region.

WASHINGTON (Reuter) — The U.S. Senate passed Wednesday a complex $21 billion military weapons procurement bill containing controversial amendments to restrict United States' activities in Vietnam and Laos. The bill now goes to a joint Senate-House conference committee which must iron out 100 differences between the versions passed by each chamber.

MONTREAL (CP) — An RCMP inspector and the prime minister's office denied Wednesday published reports that there was an attempt last month by an unknown man to force the mother of Prime Minister Trudeau into a car in front of her suburban Outremont home. OTTAWA (CP) — The Canadian transport commission has approved new telegraph rates filed by the Canadian Pacific and Canadian National Railways effective Oct. 17, it was announced today. The commission said the new rates have been allowed because of the "revenue need of the companies, which has been clearly demonstrated." The telecommunications services of the two companies race up total losses of $6.7 million annually, the commission said. The increases will provide an additional $1.2 million annually.

LEAMINGTON, Ont. (CP) — Premier William Davis returned to the campaign trail today after travelling to Toronto Wednesday night for discussions on the dispute between the Ontario Northland Transportation Commission and its 1,650 employees. Mr. Davis declined to comment on the dispute which has crippled rail and bus transportation and communications in Northern Ontario. The premier said he had nothing to add to a statement issued Wednesday by commission officials.

UN So Broke 'Near Insolvency'

UNITED NATIONS (CP) — Secretary-General U Thant has told the General Assembly the United Nations is so broke that it had to borrow $15 million last month to pay its help and meet other expenses.

Kosygin Tour To Be Busy

OTTAWA (CP) — Soviet Premier Alexei Kosygin will visit a variety of industrial installations, ranging from a truck factory to a prefab housing operation, on a busy eight-day Canadian tour opening Oct. 17.

Plans also call for him to hold a full-dress news conference in Ottawa and give a major address to the Canadian Manufacturers Association in Toronto.

Thant said Wednesday at a meeting of the budgetary committee that the UN is "in a state of near and hopeless insolvency."

Unpaid regular budget assessments at the end of 1971 will exceed $65 million, he said, with at least $33.5 million considered "uncollectable."

A major part of the UN deficit, piled up over the years, involves the cost of peacekeeping operations for which some members have refused to pay their share. This involves more than $50 million of unpaid debts.

At the end of last month, $15 million had to be borrowed from special purpose accounts and trust funds to meet expenses.

While Thant was outlining the UN's financial woes, the Middle East crisis was receiving fuller attention in the General Assembly debate Wednesday.

U.S. officials, meanwhile, have set up more meetings with Egyptian and Israeli diplomats to try to determine where the latest statements by Cairo and Jerusalem leave the American effort for an interim Middle East settlement.

State Secretary William P. Rogers of the United States meets Friday with Foreign Minister Mahmoud Riad of Egypt to explore the Cairo official's speech Wednesday to the assembly. It will be their second discussion this week.

Riad insisted Wednesday that Egypt would never accept a separate interim agreement on reopening the Suez canal, but he used much milder language than other Cairo officials had in the past. And, U.S. officials said, he left open the possibility of interim settlements.

On the other hand, Israeli Premier Golda Meir issued a statement in Jerusalem charging that Rogers had not helped his drive for an interim settlement with his assembly speech earlier this week.

The six points the U.S. secretary outlined Monday had encouraged Egypt to hold to a "rigid position," Mrs. Meir said.

U.S. Dockers Ordered Back

WASHINGTON (AP) — Federal judges acted quickly Wednesday night at the request of President Nixon and ordered striking longshoremen to end temporarily a 99-day walkout on the U.S. West Coast and a shorter strike in the grain elevators of Chicago.

The judges directed the strikers to return to work for 10 days, pending hearings on whether the moratorium should be extended the full 80 days allowed by the Taft-Hartley labor law.

Man Shoots Wounds Three

MONTREAL (CP) — Heavily-armed police moved into the downtown area today after a man was reported to have shot and wounded three persons.

Early reports from the scene near Beaver Hall Hill and Dorchester Boulevard said the shotgun-carrying man was in an office building and police were trying to flush him out.

The three wounded persons were taken to hospital.

Faulkner Convinced Drastic Action Needed

LONDON (CP) — Prime Minister Brian Faulkner of Northern Ireland arrived today to try to impress on the British government the need for still tougher action against guerrillas of the Irish Republican Army.

Faulkner went into talks with Prime Minister Edward Heath convinced that drastic action must be taken if Ulster is to be saved from chaos, aides said.

The gravity of the situation was underlined by recent developments, including Faulkner's own warning Tuesday to Northern Ireland's Parliament: "We are bleeding to death as a community."

That statement was prompted by a approaching economic breakdown induced by the IRA's increasing terror-bombing campaign. Explosions in September totalled 152 compared with 101 in August. The rate of increase has been maintained, with 19 bombs Wednesday night in Belfast alone.

Weight Watching on the Run

Want an 'Easy' Diet? Join Leaders on Campaign Trail

TORONTO (CP) — Want to lose some weight?

Here's a deal that has worked for Ontario's three political party leaders in the campaign for the Oct. 21 provincial election as they stump the province.

Conservative Premier William Davis has lost four pounds since the campaign opened Sept. 13 and Liberal Leader Robert Nixon, tall and slim to begin with, has dropped five pounds.

Stephen Lewis, leader of the New Democratic Party who often goes the entire day without eating, manages to maintain a slim, trim figure.

The Conservatives are trying to stem the tide of lost weight with two food service trucks painted red, white and blue, Mr. Davis's campaign colors.

One truck accompanies the party's two-bus caravan throughout the province, serving meals on board to everyone. The second truck goes ahead to the next destination to prepare food.

The Liberals usually telephone ahead to a restaurant, say how many are in the party and how much time they have and then sit down to a meal, always in contact with party headquarters via telephone.

The NDP campaigners just grab something on the run, often sandwiches or quick snack food.

"Campaigning reduces the waistline, increases the appetite and presents a wide variety of foods," Mr. Davis says. "I like eating, but I'm no gourmet. I guess my favorite food is a piece of Kathleen's lemon pie," Kathleen is Mrs. Davis.

Mr. Nixon says he likes a good steak but is willing to try any type of new dish. He especially enjoyed German sausages and sauerkraut at an Oktoberfest party in Atikokan in northwestern Ontario.

"It was the best sauerkraut. I have ever tasted. Apparently the sauerkraut was made last year and mellowed over the 12 months," he said, smiling.

When time is short, he usually grabs a milkshake and a hamburger, without onions.

Stephen Lewis is getting tired of "sordid" sandwiches and "abominable" coffee, and dreams of the day he can sit quietly before a "vat ofgoscargots," one of his favorite foods.

"When I'm not campaigning, my tastes are very pedestrian," he says. "My favorite foods are corned beef sandwiches and a good steak."

Mr. Lewis is a soft drink gobbler too.

Hospital Proposal Meets Approval

not require active treatment care.

Such patients, he said, can be looked after just as well in other cheaper types of accommodation.

Patients at the extended care unit would live similar to guests at the motel; they would go to the dining room for their meals and would require a minimum of care.

Nursing care required would be given by home care nurses.

Msgr. Sullivan said he was happy that Belleville has been selected as one of the sites for extended care pilot projects.

He did not anticipate any expansion of the facility in the near future.

Dr. Potter told the 45 person present that he had been urging extended care hospital facilities for the past four years but only in the past six months had he been able to get the government to approve.

"I am very pleased that Belleville was chosen as a site for the pilot program," he said.

One such project has been set up at Hamilton and another is possible in Thunder Bay.

Dr. Potter assured there were no plans for any changes at the motel.

The extended care unit would mean the city and county wouldn't be faced with high capital costs for a new hospital addition for active treatment beds.

The economy won't stand for providing more active treatment beds at $50,000 each," he said.

For the intended purpose extended care facilities were more efficient and more economical.

Dr. Morgan said that not only would the extended care facility avoid the necessity of providing more active treatment beds, but would reduce the waiting time for surgery.

New Shop Floor Cleaner

ARC Industries (Association for Retarded Children) has a new industrial vacuum cleaner for its Station Street workshop — thanks to the Mohawk-Loyalist Council of the Telephone Pioneers of America. Here Council President Vic Allen, officially presents the new cleaner as workshop director William G. Cook and several of the workers look on. Twenty two handicapped people have full or part time work at the Station Street workshop.

Arthritis Described As Root of Poverty

Almost half a million people across Canada are disabled with arthritis, and through this figure the Canadian Arthritis and Rheumatism Association claims "arthritis is a root cause of poverty."

The objectives of the association include "education for all levels from the doctor to the patient, improved treatment through extensive research to bring arthritis to its knees".

In Canada alone 9,500 people are confined to bed or a wheelchair, 428,000 are permanently disabled and 9,000,000 working days are lost each year.

"Perhaps the greatest single reason for the number of people disabled with the disease that "produces inflammation of the joints and severe pain to the sufferer" is very little knowledge is available on the disease, and treatment is not started early enough to be effective in many cases," said Ian Brady, chairman of the local chapter of the association.

In a pamphlet published by the association, aspirin is hailed as the drug that can be used most effectively in the battle against the "crippling disease". If used on a proper program, designed by a physician, inflammation can be controlled to some extent and buffers in the aspirin will relieve some pain.

"Aspirin," says the article, "was developed years ago specifically for the arthritic patient and not simply for the headache.

"Like everything else, the campaign needs money to continue research, and to provide therapy that inhibits joints from welding together and becoming permanently immobile," said Mr. Brady. "This is where the United Appeal comes in."

Donations to the United Appeal do not go directly to the administrations of the Belleville offices of the Canadian Arthritis and Rheumatism Association but rather are channelled first through the national offices of the association in Toronto.

"Greater benefit can be realized by arthritics because of a nation-wide program that the entire organization supports," said Mr. Brady.

Clinics across the country contribute to the head office of the association so that with these funds, extremely specialized clinics can be set up in the larger centres for the chronic cases. "Sophisticated machines and large staffs give maximum care to the patient," said Mr. Brady.

"Anyone needing the services of these clinics must have it and pay for it through an applicable government health plan," he said.

"Canada is on the threshold of great achievements in the field of arthritis and unless the United Appeal dollars keep coming in, we will never get through the door," spoke from the association said.

On a local level, 220 patients were admitted into these special centres last year while another 874 were treated at the clinic in the Belleville Hospital. In addition to this, 312 home visits were made by those confined to their homes.

"Without the services of the association, there is no way of knowing how many more Canadians would be disabled by arthritis," said Mr. Brady.

It is important that the R "It is important that the work carries on, but without the support from the United Appeal, the association would grind to a halt."

Tribute Paid To Bert Frink

Hastings county's Home and School Council is meeting at centres throughout the county to bring the "new face" of Home and School to concerned citizens.

The October meeting was held in L'Amable to mark membership month. The treasurer reported that all bills are paid, but no money remains in the kitty.

An earlier meeting was held in Madoc to honor Mr. Outdoors, retired principal Bert Frink.

At the dinner in his honor it was noted that Mr. Frink seldom, if ever, missed a meeting of Home and School Council. He was the author of the pamphlet, A Principal Looks at Home and School, widely distributed throughout Ontario. Mrs. O. Miller of the Ontario Federation of Home and School attended the dinner to pay tribute to Mr. Frink.

Wayne Brooks, outdoor education consultant with the Hastings county board of education showed pictures and told of Mr. Frink's pioneering efforts in bringing outdoor education to the children of the county. Ald. Robin Jeffrey of Belleville told of Mr. Frink's association with the Moira River Conservation Authority and trustee and former principal Everett Fairman recalled difficult and humorous occasions in Mr. Frink's 41 years of teaching.

Mrs. Lil Stetson told of Mr. Frink's many helpful years at Queen Victoria School.

Mr. Frink was presented with a wallet on which Arnold Welch had tooled the Home and School crest, initials and an outdoor scene.

Mr. Frink presented a life membership pin to Mrs. Irene Hamilton of North Trenton, who has kept Trenton informed of council activities for a number of years.

Tributes were also paid to Mr. Frink by H. J. Butterill of Loyalist College and Miss Wendy Runacres, representing her father, director of education Eric Runacres.

Youth Seeks Compensation

TORONTO (CP—Special) — The Ontario Criminal Injuries Compensation Board yesterday heard the application of Steven Hoyt, 18, of Trenton, asking compensation for a hunting accident in 1969 that left him with an artificial leg.

Board member A. R. Willmott described the case as unusual because the 13-year-old boy who held the shotgun that discharged into Hoyt's leg was later acquitted on a charge of careless hunting.

Hoyt was in hospital 18 months after infection set in which resulted in his leg being amputated. The board withheld a ruling on the application.

In the same session the compensation board awarded $1,852.80 to Timothy Bain, also seriously wounded in a knife attack last September.

A board statement said John Wilson Allan, 49, was attacked by a man with a knife Sept. 18 as he returned home from weekend overtime at the Saskatchewan Wheat Pool's terminal elevator.

Railroaders Donate Wheelchairs

Thanks to the generosity of the engineers and fire men who manned CN Engine 6218 for the steamer's last operating runs at Belleville, two wheelchairs have been presented to the chairman of the Crippled Children Fund at the Belleville Shrine Club.

During the steam engine's retirement ceremonies, 50 crippled youngsters and retarded children were escorted on one of the last train rides to Anson Junction. Hosts for the day were the Belleville Shrine Club and the Belleville Yardmen's Benefit Fund.

Rawdon Boy Hit By Car

TWEED (Special) — A 9-year-old Rawdon township boy, Michael Jackson, RR1, Stirling, was taken to Belleville General Hospital for observation late yesterday afternoon after being struck by a car as he walked along Highway 14.

The mishap occurred about 5:45 p.m. in front of a store south of the 8th concession turn.

Following treatment at the hospital, the boy was allowed home.

Assault Charged

City police last night took into custody Lawrence David Burnett, 18, of Albert St., on a charge of common assault, suspicion of another and carrying a concealed weapon.

While waiting for his girl friend, a young Belleville man noticed Burnett in the bushes. Recalling a past incident involving the girl, he cautioned her to contact the police.

City police say the first incident happened late in August but no arrest could be made at the time. After contacting the young lady, the man fled from the scene.

After observing the accused, he was taken into custody.

Unique Ornaments Are Hand-Made

Over the past 24 years, Wally Leavitt, of 74 Elizabeth Crescent, has been carving and mounting objects such as coins, medals, badges and cigarette lighters in clear plexiglass. Paper weights, ornaments, lamps, desk sets and objects d'art have been accumulated over the years, and although he doesn't sell his pieces, Belleville's only internal carver of plastics, spends a great deal of time exhibiting his pieces at hobby shows.

Carving Plastics Is His Unique Hobby

By IAN ROBERTSON
Staff Reporter

Flower petals are one of Nature's most delicate creations and the manner in which she produces them, and yet to be equalled by science.

However, Wally Leavitt of 74 Elizabeth Crescent has been fooling people for years with what, at first glance, appears to be fresh cut flowers and tropical fish.

Using finely crafted twist drills he modifies by hand, plus dentist equipment for the more intricate work, Wally spends several hours carving intricate whorls and loops through the base of clear plexiglass plastic blocks. Carefully mixed dyes are then placed in the hollows and when allowed to dry, appear as violets, pansies, roses, and in fact, any flower or object imaginable.

It's fine work, and the soft powdery plastic dust in Mr. Leavitt's workroom attests to this fact. Unfortunately, because of the high speeds of his drilling equipment, heat builds up quickly, and several particularly blocks show the disappointing cracks that can easily appear.

Not only can the plastic suffer, but two days ago, Mr. Leavitt's 218 flexible drill snapped and he had to order a replacement from Toronto.

It's an expensive hobby, and because of this, and the time involved, the World War II veteran is the only man in Belleville who produces such work. He has encouraged another hobbyist to start, but this man has not begun carving, and devotes his efforts chiefly to mounting objects in the resin.

It was after the war that Mr. Leavitt became interested in this hobby, and after obtaining information from library books, he obtained his materials in Toronto and slowly set up his workshop.

Origin a lly experimenting with the mounting stage, he produced blocks of plastic imbedded with military badges, coins, butterfly wings on cardboard bodies, medals, keepsakes and postage stamps. He says the latter, and most papers in general, tend to lose colour when blocked. Lamps and desk sets followed, and soon after his early experiments, he started carving.

At first and second glances, the carvings seem to be the real thing. Even after the artist explained his methods, their appearance was truly deceptive.

Early pieces lack some of the more intricate colors Mr. Leavitt has managed to achieve, but these keepsakes are an example of the experiments required to produce this rare art without aid of teachers or fellow hobbyists.

He explained several companies cause - produce these conversation pieces, but many lack the lasting qualities of the home-manufactured pieces. When exposed to sunlight or direct illumination, the factory pieces often fade or crumble to dust.

At $10 a gallon or $1.25 per two-inch cube blocks, little raw material is wasted. When a large piece is made, remnants are poured into moulds for future carving. Correct moulds produce the best, unwarped shapes, which can be square, round, flat, or have many faceted side. However, ash trays, light bulbs, jelly dishes, and in one case, a false teeth container, have a variety of forms.

With so few people enjoying this hobby, supplies are expensive. The more easily worked liquid plexiglass costs $10 a gallon and only lasts a year before bubbles appear. About seven years ago, Mr. Leavitt began experimenting with factory - produced blocks of raw plastic, which at that time, cost him 70 cents each.

These U.S.-supplied blocks have to be purchased in $50 bundles from Toronto, and this can put a severe bite into any pocket. For special, mailed sliced blocks, hobbyists can order the faceting done for 10 cents a cut, most prefer making their own forms.

After the carving is finished and the blocks are sealed where the work done would show, each is hand - sanded and then polished to a glass-like lustre.

Dyer cost an average of 75 cents for a one-inch bottle, but can range up to slightly less than $2 for mother of pearl dyes: Tints and full, deep colors are added after carving or moulding.

"It takes a lot of patience, but then, I really enjoy it," he says.

People flock around his displays at area hobby shows, but few seem to realize the cost or time involved in producing the pieces.

Although he has occasionally mounted keepsakes for friends, "I don't bother selling any more. People come up and say 'I really like that. I'll give you a couple of bucks for one of these.' What they don't realize is that with the cost of material; time involved in cutting, polishing and shaping the plastic, let alone the value of the object I mount, their offered price hardly pays for it.

"It's really just a hobby," he says.

And upon entering Mr. Leavitt's home, his enthusiasm is easily noted. Bookshelves, tables and special display cases are filled to capacity with the efforts of 24 years of enjoying this unique hobby.

"Sometimes I wonder how my wife puts up with it all, but she likes them well enough."

Petals Take Shape

Using high-speed drills which he has manufactured from ordinary twist drills, Wally Leavitt completes the final touches on a flower he is carving in this polished, round piece of plexiglass. More intricate work is done with flexible dentist and burr drills.

Crowe Lake Pollution Is Debated

MARMORA (Special) — Marmora township council was unable to reach a decision at its Saturday meeting concerning pollution of Crowe Lake.

A letter from the Crowe Lake Property Owners' Association claimed that ice fishing was responsible for pollution of the lake and consequently should be banned. Council members were not in agreement, however, and supported their contention with a survey conducted by William Mackenzie which indicated that most local residents did not hold the ice fishermen responsible.

The council passed a resolution to request copies of certain maps and data related to the township from the consultant firm of Totten, Sims, Hubicki Associates Ltd. which is also preparing a plan for Hastings county.

Plans for the improvement of Rooster Park, especially in the swimming and boat launching areas, were also outlined. Consideration will be given to the planting of new trees to replace those which have died or been removed.

The proposed 1971 budget was reviewed by council members and will now go to the Department of Municipal Affairs for approval.

Power Skating Course Planned

MARMORA (Special) — The Marmora recreation committee hopes to set up a one-month crash program in power skating this winter.

An instructor from Peterborough was present at the committee's September meeting and told members that National Hockey League clubs use such a program and that many communities are beginning to do the same. Power skating teaches the theory as well as the fundamentals of skating.

With chairman James (Scotty) Cook presiding the meeting also heard the 1971 summer program reviewed. Among the highlights was news of an increase in swimming enrolment, due partly to the introduction of a pre-beginner level.

For the second year, competitive swimming was part of the program with teams from Marmora competing in five meets, At Campbellford, Gebsaw, with teams from nine communities participating, a gold medal was won by Marmora swimmer Ann Doyle.

Concluding the six - week program was a beach party and weiner roast at which Reeve John Reynolds presented awards to successful swimmers.

FLQ Not Dead

October 1970 and the FLQ crisis will be remembered as a lamentable enough period in Canadian history, but bad as it was it could have been worse. Imagine for instance the nightmare of the IRA terrorist campaign in Belfast and Londonderry, and the sectarian rioting of a mindless populace, occurring in say Montreal and Toronto.

The brief FLQ flare-up had all the potential of similar excesses — and of a singularly disturbing character at that, for as yet the IRA has not resorted to kidnapping and/or murder of prominent individuals. Thus while Quebec Justice Minister Choquette is currently admitting that the War Measures Act was a case of over-reaction he is right in saying that something had to be done.

"We judged by the evidence we had at the time," he is quoted as saying on the anniversary of last year's events." There was a duty to be prudent on the part of the government because terrorist activity was acquiring credibility, gathering momentum.

"We were faced with an aggression that appeared relatively organized. The escalation in the kidnappings appeared to be a real plan, and they were getting a certain verbal support."

Of the role of the police the minister said he did not blame them, it was their job, but they were often "prone to go too far."

But could the police — and the military too — have done any less in the circumstances which the minister has very fairly outlined? There was the threat of insurrection and the measures taken by the federal and provincial governments must certainly have been instrumental in curbing any further outrages.

* * *

Having said that, it must be realized that the FLQ had it been more strongly equipped and trained, and with the necessary determination, could have made things infinitely more difficult. Canadians have only to look at the nightmarish quality of the IRA campaign in Northern Ireland to realize the potential for a similar descent into anarchy here.

Would our police and military be any better able to contain a similar urban guerrilla campaign?

You say it would not happen here. Well, listen then to Michel Chartrand, head of the Montreal central council of the Confederation of National Trade Unions, and one of those arrested last year under the War Measures Act.

A man given to demagoguery and vulgarity of speech, as witness his encounter with Prime Minister Trudeau on Parliament Hill some time before the FLQ crisis, Chartrand said the other day that when the time comes that he can accomplish nothing more with his speeches "I too will go underground and work with a machine gun."

Chartrand was taking part in a debate at Laval University on last year's crisis. He talked about "some secret training camps" and about plans for anniversary demonstrations on October 16 and said: "We will sing, we will parade, we will laugh at the judges and ministers, we will have a good time . . . right up to the time they bludgeon us."

And in a recent interview with Madame Solange Chaput-Rolland for the Montreal Gazette, Chartrand said: "Yes I am a revolutionary but I would like it to be a better one. In fact I want rapid changes in our society, radical transformation of our capitalist society."

* * *

Listening to Chartrand affords further confirmation of the thinking of the militants in Quebec. If a full-scale insurrection did not come about last October, there remains this potential for further violence. For instance, what about those secret training camps in the Laurentians, and that recent bomb incident in Quebec, not to mention bank robberies believed the work of fund-seeking FLQ.

The last thing Ottawa should do with regard to the FLQ is drop its guard. The terrorists may only be waiting for another opportunity.

Library Scene

It is good to observe in the Belleville public library's summer report that children have been making more use of the facilities, and we note that this seems to be as a result of a staff campaign in local schools in June. What was it Oscar Wilde said, "with flowers, books and the moon who could not be perfectly happy?" As another more familiar saying goes, "the best things in life are free," and here is one establishment in our midst that provides incalculable aids to knowledge through the written word, and all of it free save for the small sums requested for late returns.

Ottawa Had Better Watch Out

Nearly Two Million Pensioners Form Sizeable Minority

By RICHARD JACKSON

OTTWA — Dr. Philip Bernard Rynard, Conservative MP for Simcoe East and a 14-year veteran of the House of Commons has always had a thing for the elderly.

Like sympathy and understanding for their many and mounting problems, and anger with a Government he accuses of heartless neglect of those who increasingly are becoming known as "The Abandoned People".

"Doc" Rynard as Parliament Hill affectionately knows him — he serves as unofficial and unpaid medical consultant to the whole House of Commons is aware, as few other politicians, of the plight of the aged.

Being 73 himself, he knows the feel — and, if not for him, for many less fortunate, the actual fear — of the aging process.

As one of Canada's most eminent medical authorities, he knows the toll the years can take.

And as a concerned public servant — for that is what he considers himself both as a physician and a politician — he knows the hardship, the actual suffering, the want to the point of hunger, and the continued deprivation of the aging and the aged. Knows it from personal observation. Knows it from reading his mail.

He likes to think that his most meaningful contribution to Parliament has been the slow awakening of, initially, the Commons, and now, hopefully, the Government, to the aching urgency of the problems of the elderly.

Justice Minister John Turner, a young, by comparison, at 42, and compassionate man, has been talking about prodding the Government into something like an "Opportunities for Age" program.

If the Government can find $25 million to finance student summer employment . . . well, the situation spells itself out, doesn't it?

And if John Turner succeeds — with "Doc" Rynard cheering, and pushing in the background — you can be sure the beneficiaries of such an "Opportunities for Age" program will not be flinging their $25 million, plus $40 million, or whatever is provided, to the four winds in a Summer festival of fun, frolic and foolery.

You can bet your last tax dollar the money will be used for the basic purpose of keeping alive, says "Doc" Rynard, and of making what is left of life for the aged just a little easier.

The "Doc" first pricked Parliament's conscience with a horrendous story of catching an elderly woman dart into the dining room of Toronto's Westbury Hotel and clean the scraps off the plates before the waitress could clear the table.

Let us not spare feelings here. Let us look at it like it is — a sort of human "dogpile-beg" operation, a reclamation of the leftovers, a salvaging of the garbage.

The Government, suspects Dr. Rynard, is so niggardly with the elderly because it is so easy to ignore a docile minority.

Just nine months ago, for example, the Government — with the Opposition in hungry if helpless protest at the injustice of it — got away with raising the Old Age Pension 42 cents a month.

And the pensions were frozen, a lid locked on them, at $80 monthly.

Worse, if shabbier treatment of the elderly is possible, the pensioners lost even more ground with cancellation of their annual two per cent cost-of-living increase, already running three per cent behind the rate of inflation.

Truly, laments Dr. Rynard, "The Abandoned People."

Cold, calculated cruelty imposed on a helpless minority by a government that wouldn't dare do it to youth, students or any racial minority such as the negroes.

But, as Dr. Rynard sizes it up, the aging and aged do not have to be helpless.

True, they are a minority. But a big one.

Big enough to swing some real political clout, if they could organize and vote as a bloc.

The young, with the vote now at 18, will do it, for they have a sort of "community" feeling.

Why not the elderly?

If old age begins officially at 65, and the federal Government decides that it does in moving back the pensionable years from 70, then the "minority" of the elderly runs a sizeable 1,700,000 voters.

More than enough to make any Government stop, look, listen and think.

Nearly eight percent of the population — and every one of them with a vote.

About 800,000 of them live on the guaranteed minimum of $1,680 a year for single pensioners and $3,000 for couples.

Below the official "poverty line," as it is called.

Who says so?

The Economic Council of Canada which draws the poverty line at $1,944 for single people and $3,240 for couples.

Figures it out any other way you try — but it comes out as official condoning by the federal Government of poverty for the elderly.

What can be done?

Well, "Doc" Rynard hopes something may get started with "Opportunities for Age".

But how about a Federal Department of Pensions, or a Department of Senior Citizens? Call it anything you like, but why shouldn't the elderly have their own federal agency, Every other group and special interest has federal representation.

Canadians Still Lack Adequate Housing: Costs Are Beyond The Means of Majority of People

Reader's Digest

This year, some 220,000 new houses and apartment units will be built in Canada — more than in any other single year, reports the October Reader's Digest. In the 1970s, says Harris Mitchell, editor of Canadian Homes, 2½ million new homes will be constructed, almost as many in 10 years as we have built in the past 30. Yet despite these record figures, Canada's housing crisis is getting worse.

In its 1968 inquiry, writes Mitchell, the federal Task Force on Housing reached one overwhelming conclusion: the vast majority of Canadians want their own homes — private, self-contained, ground - level houses with their own entrance and garden. In spite of this, about half the housing built today is for rent, most of it in high-rise apartment buildings unsuitable for families with children. This leaves less than 100,000 houses a year for those who want to buy a home — about the same number as we were building 15 years ago.

A Central Mortgage and Housing Corporation survey shows that less than 16 per cent of all new houses for sale last year were priced under $20,000 (the average was $28,-614, a price fewer than seven percent of Canadians could afford). In Toronto less than one percent of new houses for sale in January were under $17,500, and thus within the reach of a family earning the average Canadian income of $7,000 a year.

The tragedy in this crisis is that we can build sound, attractive, well - designed houses in pleasant community settings at reasonable prices. One obstacle, however, is the skyrocketing price of serviced land. The article discusses several suggestions for remedying this situation, those most persistent of which is the municipal "land bank," an idea strongly advocated by the Housing Task Force. Its report recommended that municipalities or regional governments, financed by federal loans, acquire, service and sell the land required for urban growth within their boundaries.

The type of housing we have today is dictated by rigid municipal building bylaws, zoning regulations, subdivision and mortgage requirements which prevent the building of small houses as was possible 20 years ago.

The biggest single increase in housing costs lately has been in the cost of borrowing. Last year, conventional mortgage rates passed 10 percent. At this rate of interest, the average $28,600 house will end up costing its owner $80,000 over a 30-year mortgage!

By 1980 we will have built new houses for one third of our population. In doing so we cannot afford to keep homeownership a privilege for a chosen few. Says developer Charles Watson, president of Peel-Elder Ltd., "We are in for a social revolution if we don't make it possible for the average Canadian to buy a home of his own. We must stop playing politics with housing. We must pass the laws and take the action that is necessary. And we must do it quickly, for there isn't much time left."

TODAY IN HISTORY

An American revolutionary force under George Washington was routed at Chadds Ford, Pa., 194 years ago today—in 1777—by the British. In 1942 the Canadian, one of Canada's oldest military units. The regiment was organized before the revolution by Robert Rogers — famed for his Rogers' Rangers—but later was moved to Toronto by Lt. Col. Leadership Candidates Show Professionalism

By DON O'HEARN

From The Intelligencer's Queen's Park Bureau.

One unusual feature of this campaign is that at the leadership level it is the most professional we have seen for a long time.

And for a good reason, of course, because all three leaders are very much political pros. All have been steeped in politics since very early in their lives.

Harry Nixon was already a veteran member when he was born and the Liberal leader has been in a political atmosphere all his days.

With Stephen Lewis, also, when he was in diapers his father was spending practically all his time trying to build up the CCF.

And though Premier Davis didn't have this direct connection from birth, he was active early, putting up election posters in his young teens. His father was a crown attorney and active politician who made himself learned in the camp of the late Col. Tom Kennedy, one of the wisest politicians the province has known.

All three men are exceptionally easy. They are at home.

They don't fluster. They take heckling in stride. All three, in fact, can often turn it to their advantage. And they make the right moves.

To appreciate how much this background means you would have to have known some of such as John Robarts on a stump as a slide lar campaign.

In his first campaigns as leader Mr. Robarts was almost painful.

He would arrive at a meeting, stand around, at times in his early days even stay aloof, make forced small talk, stand in a reception line stiffly and then usually deliver a fairly dry speech.

He improved in his last campaign, but gave the impression he never liked campaigning.

The present three men have one thing in common, they like it and they are good at it.

There is no timidity when they approach a crowd. They are always in rapport.

And in their speaking they know their audiences are comfortable.

Season to Be Thankful

United Church Board of Evangelism and Social Service

A celebration closing the harvest season, when "all is safely gathered in," differs back in earliest recorded history. Ceremonies under priestly auspices featured sacrifices to the lord or deities worshipped at the time, and there was revelry.

Despite moving ever farther from the agriculture - based economy in which most people saw plainly more than his own personal efforts in producing a good crop; despite increasing secularization and fading belief in supernatural powers to which we owe our blessings, we still retain a dim instinct that at Thanksgiving we acknowledge a debt of gratitude, though we are far from certain to whom.

On the purely humanistic side, an assertion that we are acknowledging our interdependence

U;K. Firm Employs Typists Working from Own Homes

BBC London Letter

London has become a shortage of typists in Britain has be en described in a BBC report. The Norwich Union insurance group found that, all too often, when they had trained a girl, she would get married and leave to be a housewife. After a time, it was not unusual for the girl to feel she would like to earn some money to supplement the family budget and that is where the Norwich Union's New Way Typing scheme comes in.

Each girl in the scheme is provided with a telephone which connects her to a recording machine at the office on which an executive has dictated material to be typed. When she has her household chores out of the way, she rings up the office and listen to dictation on a headset. With a foot control she can stop, start and backspace the recording. So, as in one typical day, after completing the kitchen offi. to school and washup, a mother can get in two hours typing before preparing the midday meal; and then, perhaps, she can do another two or three hours in the afternoon. To get her work back to the office, she simply bundles it up and puts it in the post in time to catch the first delivery on the morrow.

The company finds it is saving 10 per cent on the cost of typing a letter — saving on office accommodation, and salaries of workers who have to be paid when they are sick or on holiday. And the girls get a sum that compares very well with a full-time typist's wage.

What's to Become of Moira River Dams?

The use of waterpower for the operation of feed mills has almost passed out of existence along the Moira River.

But with the industrial use of waterwheels stilled, the big question is what is to become of the privately owned mill dams some of which are fast falling into a state of disrepair.

Just this question is becoming a matter of concern for members of the Moira River Conservation Authority, who are wondering whose responsibility it is to repair the dams.

At least four dams along the Moira watershed — one on Black Creek at Queensboro, one at Tweed, another at Latta and a fourth at Canniffon just north of the city, are no longer used as a source of waterpower.

The dams may no longer have their former industrial use, but in the view of authority officials, they are still important from an environmental point of view.

For one thing, the headponds create small lakes which can be important from an esthetic or recreational viewpoint and they help to retain water levels so that residents' wells hold out a bit longer during a dry summer.

But with the dams no longer having a commercial use, the private owners could think twice about doing costly repairs.

In at least one instance, the river authority has been approached to purchase the dams and be responsible for maintenance.

But the authority points out that the now idle dams could be a continuing costly expense for the river organization.

Most of the privately owned dams date back for many years.

For instance, the one at Canniffon was built shortly after World War I, the structure replacing an earlier dam built before the turn of the century.

The dam at Canniffon is badly in need of repairs, with water regularly flowing through the concrete. The dam has not been used for waterpower for about a year.

One authority official suspects that little if anything will be done about the dams. "But eventually one of them will go out in a spring flood and then something will be done," he said.

Successful Living

Some Parents Tend to Insult Children

By DORIS CLARK

A psychologist suggests that we tend to insult our children when we are disappointed in them. When they do something contrary to the rules, we call them stupid. Instead, we should do the helpful thing: point out how they should have acted, the reasons why and encourage them to try.

Conflicts are inevitable. There are times when anger is inevitable and if it is held back it leaves the child mystified and vaguely disappointed in himself. Far better to say, "that makes me angry!", and give the youngster a chance to see how an adult feels. —

Far better than deliberately casting aspersions on, the child's intelligence and making him feel inferior. If his personality is kept intact, he has a first rate chance to make amends and to feel once more as if he is equal to life.

• • •

Dear Doris: My husband is a good husband and father but has a problem of sulking. He will lose his temper over anything and then he doesn't talk to me or the children for weeks, moves out of our bedroom and sleeps downstairs, will not eat with us.

I have had two nervous breakdowns and the children are affected. I have gone to see a marriage counselor but he refuses.

Is he a little boy who forgets to grow up or is it a warped personality? Maybe there are others who have husbands such as I. — Can't Take It Anymore

Dear Can't Take It: I'll bet dollars to doughnuts this little-boy husband grew up in a broken or badly cracked home. His sense of security is practically nil. He has learned to sulk as a way of life, with a rage — not really against you — but against the world.

You happen to be the handiest person to take it out on. He has little awareness of what this does to flesh-of-his-flesh, the little ones who need and want to love and admire him. He may indeed succeed in creating young people just as insecure as he is, although their reactions may be different.

If your nervous system were shock-proof (and it isn't) I might suggest carrying on, exuding good cheer and gradually penetrating his thick skull with the idea that he is missing more than he is gaining with his self - isolating techniques.

But in this case I suggest that the worm should turn — in no uncertain way. The counsellor you have been seeing can support you in this.

Dear Doris: I have done a lot of inside wall plastering on houses and now I would like to stucco the outside of my garage. I have been trying to find a book with directions for the proper procedure and mixture of ingredients for the mortar. — Doing It Myself

• • •

Dear Doing It: My specialty is patching up people's feelings, not the outside of their garages.

But my ever-helpful librarian has given me the names of four books which I am listing for you. If your library doesn't have them, perhaps your favorite book store could hunt them up in their catalogues and order one or more for you.

• • •

If something is troubling you, there's help to be had. Write to Doris for another slant on your difficulty.

Quantity of Homemade Mincemeat

By MARY MOORE

In order not to make this into a big all day operation I made a small batch of rich mahogany colored mincemeat that your men will like. I know because I remember your comments after my 1968 mincemeat recipe was given here. It has a surprise ingredient.

If you have time, energy, jars, apples and a large family, double the quantity for this recipe yields 4½ Imperial pints — enough for four shallow 8" 2-crust pies or 2 deep 10" pies plus 6 tarts.

HOMEMADE MINCEMEAT
1971

7 oz. (1 1-3 cups when chopped) suet, preferably chopped (see below)
5 cups apples, washed, cored, unpared, chopped or ground (see below)
2 cups sugar
1 cup currants
1 cup sultana raisins
¼ cup mixed peel
½ tsp. salt
½ tsp. cinnamon
½ tsp. nutmeg
¼ tsp. cloves
One 14-oz. can pitted sweet black cherries
1 cup coarsely chopped walnuts

NOTE: If you have a food chopper this is a breeze to make for the suet and apples can be chopped in it through coarse blade. If not ask the butcher to chop the suet finely for you. Chop the unpared apple quarters by hand with a chef's knife. I used Duchess apples.

In a heavy kettle combine all ingredients except cherries and nuts. Stir constantly over high heat until juice forms, then boil gently 20 min. stirring often. Add cherries and walnuts and cook 10 min. longer, stirring almost constantly. Pour into 4 sterilized pint jars and seal. The little half pint amount you probably will have left over makes 6 luscious tarts for your current meal.

Wash, label and date jars. If desired when you open these later in the year, to make a big pie you can extend 1 pt. of the mincemeat by adding an equal amount of chopped apples and ½ cup sugar to sweeten them. The color and flavor of this mincemeat will be a source of joy to good Canadian cooks.

NSA Hears Talk on Bank Credit

The first meeting of The Bay of Quinte Chapter NSA was held at the Hotel Quinte, Belleville, recently.

The guest speaker for the evening, Stephen Huk, assistant manager, Royal Bank of Canada, was introduced by Mrs. Joan Wilson, vice-president.

Mr. Huk discussed credit from the bank's viewpoint. Whereas once a person was required to have almost twice as much collateral as the amount he wished to borrow, now the bank encourages the proper use of credit and is in direct competition with department stores, finance companies, etc. in extending consumer credit.

He stressed that credit, used wisely, can be of significant importance on an individual, business, regional, national and international level — bolstering the economy, providing more goods, creating more jobs and more export.

Mr. Huk spoke of the trust that must exist between the borrower and the lender, and the education of the young in the importance of their credit rating which, good or bad, will stick with them for years. They must be taught credit use, not abuse.

Mr. Huk feels that in the future, perhaps within 10 years, one will enter the age of the chequeless society. In this situation all purchases, salaries, bills paid, savings, etc. will be handled by a credit card system where your credit standing will be computerized and flashed coast to coast when needed, with instant recall if you want figures for tax records, proof of payment, etc.

Mrs. Sherry Meldrum thanked the speaker.

A short business meeting followed commencing with the introductions and welcome of another new member from Trenton, Mrs. Moira Williams, secretary to Mr. S. A. Walker Pyrotex of Canada Ltd.

It was announced that the classes of the executive secretarial program at Loyalist College commence on Sept. 30 with 11 of the NSA members currently enrolled.

A decision to invite guests to the December meeting was made at which time the guest speaker will be Ron Cass, prominent Belleville lawyer.

Announcements included the North Eastern district Conference being held in Hershey, Pa. on Oct. 1, 2 and 3. A seminar will be held in St. Catharines at Brock University on Nov. 6 when Mr. R. S. K. Welch, MPP Minister of Education will be guest speaker and it is hoped that a number of the local chapter members will be in attendance.

Committee chairmen for the year 1971/72 are as follows: bulletin, Mrs. Bonnie Poole; C.P.S., Mrs. Brenda Hayes; membership, Mrs. Eileen Gilbert; program Mrs. Joan Wilson; publicity, Mrs. Betty Jeffery; bylaws, Miss Thelma Schibler; secretaries' week, Mrs. Helen Worrall; seminar, Mrs. Barbara Miller; ways and means, Mrs. Cathy Ede, and speakers' bureau, Mrs. Gabrielle Watkins.

Shorey – Hamilton

Riverside United Church Yarker was the setting for the September wedding, when Sharon Florence Hamilton, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Jack Hamilton of Yarker was united in marriage to John Thomas Shorey, son of Mr. and Mrs. Elmer Shorey of Canniffon. Rev. G. Lavery conducted the ceremony while Mrs. Harold Stover played organ music and also accompanied the soloist, Mrs. G. Lavery who sang appropriate nuptial selections.

Given in marriage by her father, the bride wore a floor-length gown of white polyester crepe with an empire waistline. Lace appliques and pearl trim were scattered over the skirt. Matching lace and pearl decorations enhanced the full-length train. Her four-tiered shoulder-length veil was caught in the centre of a cluster of white leaves and pearls. She carried a white Bible crested with red roses and floating white streamers.

Miss Lynn Hamilton, the bride's sister as maid of honor wore a full-length floral gown of polyester crepe in shades of peach, yellow, green and pink. Her headpiece was a matching velvet bow. She carried a brown basket of white shasta daisies, bronze and yellow 'mums and pink carnations.

The bridesmaid, Mrs. Jeanette Wood was dressed identically to the maid of honor and carried an identical flower arrangement.

The best man was Carman Milligan of RR 1, Marysville while the ushers were Stephen White and Roy Coron of Belleville.

The reception was held in the basement of Riverside United Church. Guests were greeted by the bride's mother who wore a rose crimplene dress with beige accessories and a corsage of carnations in shades of rose and white.

Assisting her was the bridegroom's mother who wore an aqua crimplene dress with white accessories and a corsage of carnations in shades of aqua and white.

For the wedding trip to Montreal and points North the bride donned a brown crimplene hot pant dress trimmed with white, a corsage of bronze and orange 'mums and orange and white accessories. Upon return, the couple will reside at 225 Bleecker Ave., Belleville.

Many Ways to Beat Pollution Problem

Dear Ann Landers: We hear a lot about ecology and the environmental crisis these days. Too many people say, "Yeah—it's terrible, but what can I do about it?" I have an answer.

You can walk instead of ride. Put on comfortable shoes and start earlier. You'll feel better for having done so. If you can't walk, buy a bike, or join a car pool. Turn off a light. Turn off a faucet. Get mad at polluters. Report them. Write to your congressmen about what goes on in your community—I mean those big industries that are fouling up the air and killing our beautiful lakes and rivers. Call your councilman. Pick up a candy wrapper. Attend a city planning meeting—or any meeting where pollution is being discussed. Organize a glass, aluminum or paper collection. Clean up the park near your home. Give a damn. Read a book and learn the facts. Make a speech. Name names. Plant a tree. Plant a thought. Return your empties. Vote. Write your editor. Love your country, don't leave it. Stick around and clean it up.—O. H-O

Dear O.: Beautiful! Let's hear it for a better quality of life for more people. Thanks for your letter. I just turned off a light.

Dear Ann Landers: There's a woman in this town who is a professional volunteer—for goodness. People run when they see her coming. She always has a handful of banquet tickets or chances on a Chevrolet or a trip to Las Vegas.

Last week she caught me twice—once for recreational equipment for handicapped children, and again for a needy family, burned out in a fire. Next week she heads a drive to buy a kidney machine.

This woman is likable but no one can run into her without having it cost them money. Please print my letter so she (and others like her) will see how their constant mooching looks to others. Thanks.—Lancaster, Pa.

Dear L.P.: Of course it's tiresome—being hit repeatedly for donations, tickets and worthy causes—but this woman (and others like her) aren't moochers. All they get out of it is sore feet—and criticism from people like you. I've done a good bit of what you call "mooching" myself and I'm still at it—not raffle tickets, but worthy causes—and I can tell you, trying to raise money these days is very tough sledding. But somebody must do it, or a good many deserving projects would go down the drain.

Dear Ann Landers: Please tell me how to cut clean from a very sweet guy who is Boresville. Maxwell is what every mother dreams of for her 17-year-old daughter—in fact, this could be the problem. My mother thinks he is marvelous.

Max is nice lookin, a neat dresser, well mannered, says all the right things, makes honor grades, plays the piano, and his dad is a doctor. But he's a sleeping pill. For example, on our last date he brought magazine articles which he read aloud. Then he asked me to listen to a speech which he gives before the De Molays next week. To top it all off he brought along a few hundred snapshots from his trip.

Max called three times last week and quick thinking saved me. But I'm running out of excuses. Why can't I tell him he bores me and get it? Mom says, "Don't you dare!" Help me, please.—Two Faced In Martin's Ferry

Dear T.F.: Why hurt the guy needlessly? Somewhere there's a gal who would love to look at Max's snapshots and listen to him read articles. (It beats sitting home alone on Saturday night.) Do three people a favor and fix up Max with a friend.

Always answer an invitation as soon as possible. Your hostess may want to invite someone else if you can't go.

As a result of 28 years of Conservative agricultural policy, 3000 farmers are being forced off their land every year. Often land that has been in one family for generations. It's a tragic sign of the times that in Ontario today, the Conservatives have left many farmers with no place to stand, and nothing to grow.

Inscrutable Politicians

Figuring Out U.S.-China Policy Not Too Easy

WASHINGTON (CP) — The legendary "inscrutability" of the Orient can seem a model of clarity at times when compared with the mysteries surrounding the current United States policy toward China.

Pity the analysts in the Kremlin or Taipei or other foreign capitals trying to get at the real meaning of this sequence:

1. On Monday, U.S. State Secretary Rogers makes an eloquent plea at the United Nations on behalf of the American view that both China and Taiwan should be seated in the UN General Assembly.

2. On Tuesday, Albanian Foreign Minister Nesti Nase—China's acknowledged spokesman at the UN—denounced the U.S. position and reiterated that China would refuse a seat if Taiwan remains.

3. As Nase spoke, President Nixon's chief national-security mandarin, Henry Kissinger, announced he would make his second trip soon to Peking to tie up "concrete" details for the president's own visit, scheduled for sometime before May 1.

George Bush, the American ambassador at the UN, had a news agency dispatch about the Kissinger trip delivered to the Albanian's desk during his speech. If Bush hoped for a reaction, he was disappointed.

Although there are certain conclusions about U.S.-China relations which seem obvious, they don't clarify much.

The chief conclusion is that both countries are apparently determined to proceed with their mutual explorations, despite lively differences of opinion on issues that go beyond the UN membership question to more fundamental problems concerning Southeast Asia, Japan, Korea and the whole Pacific security question.

Whatever internal problems in China have been signalled by recent unexplained events there, these also will not apparently be allowed to interfere.

In vivid contrast with th Nixon administration's long-standing position that a summit conference with Soviet leaders would need lengthy and detailed preparation, plus some evidence of positive results, the same conditions patently do not apply to summitry with Peking.

There seems little hope that the Americans and Chinese can come out of their proposed top-level conference with profound agreement on any of the principal issues which divide them, however effectively Kissinger does his advance work for Nixon.

Little wonder, then, that the U.S. president's planned visit to Peking has set off a worldwide merry-go-round of state visits, most notably by the Soviet leaders whose fall schedule includes Yugoslavia, Algeria, Canada, North Vietnam, France and other countries.

If the U.S. can work with genuine determination to preserve Taiwan's UN membership while simultaneously courting Peking, and without the customary rebuke from Peking, then the Soviet Union is likely to feel justified in pressing its own interests anxiously in every corner of the globe.

What is merely mysterious or interesting in other countries about U.S.-China developments, the Soviets are likely to find ominous and potentially threatening.

Judicial System 'Myopic'

TORONTO (CP) — A York University law professor says the Supreme Court of Canada has failed "dismally" to perceive its mission of judicial leadership and perhaps should be done away with.

Paul C. Weiler, 32, a native of Thunder Bay, says in a research paper published by the Canadian Bar Association Review that the Supreme Court functions not as a scholarly, socially-conscious forum or the evolution of the law, but as a myopic and humdrum referee that seems to see itself as simply settling one dispute after another.

His findings are based on a study of 25 criminal cases decided from 1949 to 1969.

Among his conclusions:

—The same judges—at least three and often five of whom sit on every case—occasionally reached opposite conclusions on similar sets of facts.

—The court sometimes failed to follow its own precedents.

—The judges persisted in searching statutes for non-existent answers to questions of legal principle instead of working up their own answers as part of an evolving philosophy.

He says it is up to the legislatures to spell out the values it wants reflected in the laws. But the judges ought to collaborate with the legislators by applying those values to specific cases in a spirit of fairness and equality so that over the years a social philosophy begins to take shape.

Prof. Weiler says that if the Supreme Court doesn't believe that one of it's chief tasks is to clarify the law "in the light of basic principles," do we really need it? Could not the provincial supreme courts handle arbitration?, he asks.

Conventions Go To Universities

OTTAWA (CP) — Lower costs at universities are drawing a considerable amount of convention business away from hotels and other commercial facilities, William Cockman, president of the Canadian Association of Convention Bureaus, said Wednesday.

Mr. Cockman, also general manager of the Hamilton and district visitors and convention bureau, told a convention on conventions here that there will be increasing numbers of European conferences drawn to Canada in the next few years.

"But, bad tiews, most of these conventions will be going to universities."

Eartha Kitt In S. Africa

GENEVA (AP) — Television producers went on a one-day wildcat strike against Switzerland's French-language network Wednesday, leaving viewers to face news bulletins and old movies. The strikers said they were protesting against poor-quality programs and alleged censorship by station directors.

CAPE TOWN (Reuter) — Eartha Kitt will play to segregated audiences in South Africa next month, impresario Ronnie Quibell announced Wednesday.

He said Miss Kitt will sing for whites-only audiences in Cape Town Nov. 25-30 and also will give two performances for non-whites during that period.

LONDON (Reuter) — Irish-born stage designer Sean Kenny's five-year-old marriage to British actress Judy Huxtable, 27, irretrievably broke down because of her adultery with comedian Peter Cook, a London divorce court judge said Wednesday. Kenny, 42, who was not present in court, was granted a divorce decree. Cook's wife, Wendy, was granted a divorce earlier this year because of his adultery with Miss Huxtable.

ROME (AP) — Film director Franco Zeffirelli, shifting from romantic to spiritual themes, plans a work called The Assassination of Christ to follow his movie on the life of St. Francis.

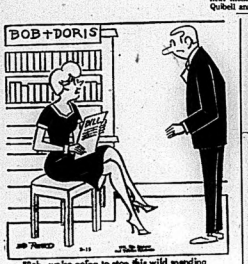
"The time is ripe for a factual film on the death of Christ, from Palm Sunday to Crucifixion," he says. "Let's forget about religion for a while and try to explain Christ, the man."

To Zeffirelli, Christ's death was "a political assassination of a very powerful man who became too disturbing to those in power."

The film will be in black and white. Zeffirelli has summoned an international jury of biblical experts to go through volumes of conflicting material. They are to try to come up with a script.

"If there is no agreement on what happened to Christ," Zeffirelli says, "Then we will show the different versions. The main thing is the sequel, in a documentary form rather than in a glorified style."

The director shot to fame with Romeo and Juliet, which grossed more than $25 million on an investment of $1.9 million.



But the 45-year-old director says he is through with such films—because romantic films are through.

"Love Story," he says, "was the beginning of the end for romance and cinema."

"This decade should be one of spiritual reawakening—of Jesus revival and long-haired youths who may look like hippies but are probably more like saints deep inside.

"This is the trend—and not even a movie director should ignore it."

His current film on St. Francis, called Brother Sun, Sister Moon, portrays the saint as a dropout. "Like many of today's young people, he had problems of identity and found fulfilment in spiritual things," Zeffirelli says.

Beverly Hills Has Vacancies

HOLLYWOOD (AP) — Columnist Hank Grant reports that 400 mansions are up for sale in Beverly Hills, long the prime territory for the film famous.

Some observers might cite this as strong evidence that the movie depression has struck at the traditional lifestyle of film stars. That's part of the story.

Another element is that many stars no longer need to live here to maintain their careers.

Peter Fonda, once a resident of Beverly Hills hilltop, now hankers to move his family to a permanent home on the island of Maui in Hawaii. He would return only for film-making.

His partner in Easy Rider, Dennis Hopper, after filming The Last Movie in Peru, established residence in New Mexico and assembled the film there.

Some stars who have specialized in international films prefer Switzerland. William Holden was a pioneer, moving there 15 years ago. Others in favor be the Alps are David Niven, Deborah Kerr, Yule Brynner, Elizabeth Taylor and Richard Burton.

Richard Boone recently ended seven years of residence in Hawaii. His next home?

"Anywhere but, Southern California," he vows. Bing Crosby settled with his second family in Hillsborough, near San Francisco.

John Wayne, Raquel Welch, Buddy Ebsen and Clair Trevor live at Newport Beach. Robert Young at Rancho Santa Fe near San Diego. Many stars now live almost the year around in Palm Springs and other desert resorts nearby, some in retirement. Among them: Red Skelton, Frank Sinatra, William Powell and William Boyd.

New York remains a lure for stars, new and old. Liza Minelli, Dustin Hoffman, Faye Dunaway, Elliott Gould and other recent stars maintain residence there.

Earlier Time Slot Good for Carol

NEW YORK (AP) — The Carol Burnett Show on CBS appears to be even more popular as an early evening comedy-variety program than it was in a late spot. It has a lot of good things going for it.

First, of course, there is Miss Burnett, a first rate clown who can sing and even dance a little. Wednesday night, she was most effective as a soap opera heroine. Then she turned around and did a dandy imitation of Buster Keaton, followed by one of Katherine Hepburn.

She is backed by a talented company of regulars. Harvey Korman turned up with one of the best imitations of Oliver Hardy yet, but the less said about Steve Lawrence's Stan Laurel and Humphrey Bogart the better.

The program usually has pretty good sketches but it excels in using its guest stars. Carol Channing was at her best in a musical memoir of the flapper era and very funny as a long-winded Oscar winner.

Public broadcasting's Great American Dream Machine had its season premiere on the nation's educational stations. The program was almost 15 minutes short of its usual hour due to an executive decision to postpone the broadcast of a controversial segment described on the air as "an investigative report on the FBI."

PBS network officials decided the portion required revision and further documentation. It was announced on the program that the feature would be shown on PBS Friday night.

The American Dream Machine itself continues to be a haphazard mixture of comedy and serious subjects, of opinions, of crazy and sane ideas. As a whole, it is unique, imaginative, refreshing and altogether welcome.

Alberta Indians Object To Federal Aid Plan

ST. PAUL, Alta. (CP) — Indian Affairs Minister Jean Chretien's proposals to improve living conditions and education on northeastern Alberta reserves are shallow and insufficient, the Indian Association of Alberta said Wednesday.

The Indians want modern, fully-equipped, well-staffed schools, not portable classrooms suggested by the minister, Mike Steinhauer, chief negotiator for the association, said following a meeting of chiefs here Wednesday.

He said Indians at Cold Lake and Kehewin reserves fear Mr. Chretien intends to make improvements with funds already earmarked for other reserves.

"They want the improvements made, but not by using capital intended for improvements on other reserves. The improvements should be provided by a separate financial arrangement."

Also, the Indians wanted to know exactly what improvements to water systems would be made and when they could expect them.

Parents at the two reserves have been keeping children from school to protest conditions. The Indians said the boycott would continue despite Mr. Chretien's proposals and could develop into a nation-wide protest.

An association source said Indians at the meeting were incensed by Mr. Chretien's statements Wednesday. Harold Cardinal, outspoken association president, had scheduled a news conference for 9 a.m. today in Edmonton and the source said the Indians' position would be given fully then.

The situation has been simmering since early September and came to boil last week when Mr. Chretien sent his special assistant, Russell Moses, to investigate northeastern Alberta reserves.

Mr. Moses, an Indian from the Six Nations reserve in Ontario, said conditions were deplorable and cut short his tour because he couldn't stand to see any more.

Mr. Moses' report prompted the minister to issue a directive Tuesday ordering "the remedy of all conditions prejudicial to health, safety and general well-being of students in all federal schools on your reserves, including necessary carpentry, plumbing and heating repairs."

A kindergarten and recreation room were to be built on Kehewin reserve as soon as possible, with a portable classroom replacing the existing building "if the people feel this interim measure is necessary."

Portable classrooms were to replace the existing two basement rooms on Cold Lake reserve "if repairs cannot be effected in an acceptable manner." Water supplies were to be improved throughout the reserves.

Traffic Toll

OTTAWA (CP) — The Canada Safety Council warned Wednesday that 65 Canadians "and possibly more" may die in traffic deaths over the Thanksgiving holiday weekend.

Phil Farmer, executive director of the council, said in a news release that the predictions are issued regularly on holiday weekends as a public warning.

Record high for traffic deaths over Thanksgiving weekend was established in 1966 when 109 died. The toll in 1970 was 56.

Happy Days Are Ahead

TORONTO (CP) — Somewhere in Riverdale Zoo, in a secluded pen hidden from the public, a love-starved, year-old Barasingha deer is pining away.

But not for long.

A young buck, who isn't aware yet that his heart beats only for Beauty, is in the Oklahoma City zoo, preparing for a 1,000-mile journey to join the lonely orphan here.

Beauty's father died of infection before she was born and her mother was killed by a car when she bolted from her pen.

Tom Thompson, Metropolitan Toronto parks commissioner in charge of the zoo, said he located the buck through a New York animal broker, and happy days are ahead.

U.S. Second Stage Plan To Be Tough, Complex

WASHINGTON (CP) — President Nixon discloses tonight what is expected to be a tough sweeping program for the second stage of his economic plan, effective when his 90-day wage-price-rent freeze ends Nov. 13.

When Nixon goes on television and radio at 7:30 p.m. EDT, he will solve many the mystery that has surrounded Phase Two since he imposed the freeze Aug. 15.

Although the White House indicated the president's address will cover mainly the domestic economy, Nixon could announce further plans for ending the US balance of payment deficit.

He announced Aug. 15 the dollar was being cut loose from its tie with gold and allowed to float. He also imposed a 10-per-cent extra tax on imports.

The import surcharge is particularly onerous to Canada, the biggest customer of the American economy and the major exporter to the U.S. Ottawa has sought from the start to have it lifted.

Nixon has said it was only a temporary measure but never spelled out how long temporary might be.

The second stage, known as Phase Two, is a complex one in which wage-price restraints likely will be based on productivity.

This much is known: The White House has virtually ruled out any controls on profits, and has left the door open only slightly to ceilings on interest rates. Some sort of control on medical costs is expected.

Nixon told reporters last month that the second stage of his battle against inflation "will restrain wages and prices in major industries . . . and . . . will have teeth in it."

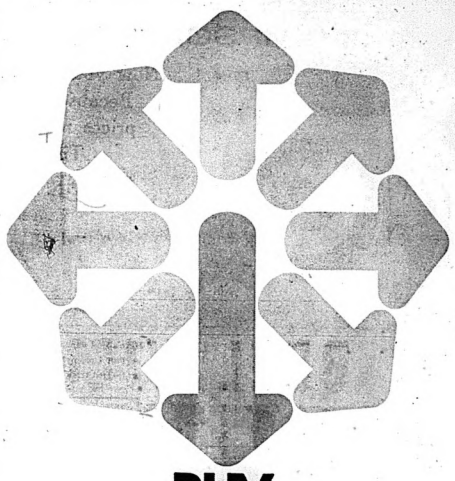
Double Standard Is Brutality

By SYDNEY J. HARRIS

When we read accusations of "police brutality" we have phrases mean. Sometimes it means that heads and bodies are hurt; just as often, it means that feelings are hurt. What upsets Negroes, Puerto Ricans, Mexicans, and poor people generally is the fact that they are not treated with the same respect (not to say deference) by the police as are the more affluent members of the community.

There is no question that most police in most cities are acutely sensitive to differences in social and economic standing. A middle-class person is rarely talked to the way an obviously poor person is talked to. The former is treated as a decent citizen until it is proved otherwise; the latter is treated as a suspicious character until it is proved otherwise.



It is the double standard of approach and handling that gives rise to accusations of "police brutality," even when the police have committed no overt act of violence. If their attitude is bellicose and bullying, the "suspect" may even provoke a pushing around in order to justify his dislike and grievance against cop4ism. To the poor, the police are hated, despised and feared figures—which means that the police get no co-operation from them. Their reaction irritates the police, who then become even more bellicose and bullying, and the circle of mutual distrust is never broken.

What the poor fail to understand, of course, is that the police themselves are fearful in such neighborhoods. They know they are looked upon as enemies — in contrast to middle-class neighborhoods, which look upon them as protectors — and their fear of reprisal makes them talk and act tougher. There is a "psychological feedback" in the police-and - the - poor relationship that perpetuates hostility.

The police, in point of fact, are much less brutal than they were—even a decade or two ago; the World Series of pounding his club first and asked questions afterwards is fast disappearing from the force. But, as against this, poor people are more aware of their rights than they were even a decade or two ago, and they are beginning to demand the same civility that is shown to their more affluent neighbors.

"Police brutality" is largely a semantic question, and its solution is more a matter of psychological attitudes than laws.

Furore Over Furnaces

Stelco on Schedule in Pollution Fight: Kerr

HAMILTON (CP) — Ontario Environment Minister George Kerr said Wednesday his department has known since last spring that the Steel Company of Canada has been emitting levels of gaseous fluorides into the atmosphere at 15 times the rate permissible by provincial law.

But Mr. Kerr added he is satisfied the company is taking steps to reduce the emissions.

The minister was commenting on a confidential report of the Ontario Research Foundation, commissioned by Stelco and released Tuesday night by the Federation of Environmental Groups of Hamilton.

The federation, a combination of 12 citizens' groups, appeared before a city pollution control committee calling for a ministerial stop order on three new basic oxygen furnaces due to be installed at Stelco in December.

It said the furnaces are to be equipped with electrostatic precipitators to remove particulate matter, the same type of device which they said is now proving ineffective with fluorides in the company's open-hearth furnaces.

Mr. Kerr said the company could not be prosecuted under the Environmental Protection Act since it was already under a ministerial order for pollution reduction and is complying with that order. He said fluorides should be at a permissible level by 1972.

Mr. Kerr said Stelco is expected to come up with a new filter within the next few weeks which will reduce fluoride emissions when it is put into service.

The minister said claims that the company would use the same type of electrostatic precipitators are untrue.

"The new furnaces will have to be different or we'll stop them from opening," he said.

He said Stelco had no obligation to make the report public and he did not blame it for not doing so. "Naturally if a report isn't favorable the company concerned isn't going to release it."

Mr. Kerr said even though the escaping fluorides were 15 times the acceptable level there was no danger to human life.

"It does, however, affect plant . . . life and that's why we're concerned the level should be reduced."

Giants Silent Second

PITTSBURGH (AP) — Only the sounds of bats and other equipment being stored punctured the silence in the San Francisco Giants clubhouse.

"You guys are in the wrong dressing room," muttered slugging first baseman Willie McCovey, whose homer and four runs batted in were wasted Wednesday in the Pittsburgh Pirates' 9-5 drubbing of the Giants for the National League baseball pennant.

But despite McCovey's admonition a handful of writers, most from the San Francisco area, still tried to ferret comments from the sullen Giants, finishing second for the sixth time in seven years.

The players sat on stools in front of their cubicles, quietly munching chicken, sipping at soft drinks or just pondering the Pirates' victory.

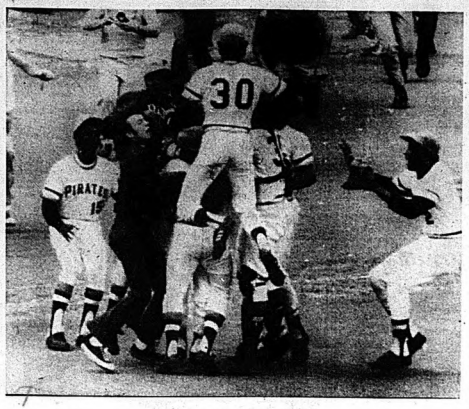
While most shunned comments, ace San Francisco reliever Jerry Johnson said he got a fast ball "up too high" to Al Oliver who blasted a 2-1 pitch for a three-run homer and a 9-5 Pittsburgh lead in the sixth inning.

"I never had any trouble with that zon-de-go all season. I was so tired. I warmed up five times before I came in. That would take it out of anybody's arm," said Johnson, who appeared in 67 regular season games.

Oliver's blast was the big blow of a four-run sixth inning that snapped a 5-5 tie.

Giant manager Charlie Fox defended his move to intentionally walk Willie Stargell after Roberto Clemente advanced to second on a passed ball to pitch to Oliver.

"We respect Stargell, even if he's 0-for-20," snapped Fox, the majors leading home run hitter was 0-for-14 in the playoffs at the time of his walk.



"Who would you rather have beat you Stargell or Oliver?" Fox asked.

The San Francisco pilot said his starter, Gaylord Perry, was "a little erratic."

Perry, who won 16 regular season games for the NL Western Division champions, struggled through 3 2-3 innings before giving way to Johnson.

New Date For Oscar

NEW YORK (AP) — The postponed heavyweight fight between Oscar Bonavena of Argentina and Floyd Patterson of New York has been tentatively rescheduled for Dec. 16 in Madison Square Garden, Teddy Brenner, Garden matchmaker, announced Wednesday. The fight had been slated for Nov. 2 but Bonavena broke the middle finger of his left hand in his victory last Saturday in Buenos Aires against Alvin (Blue) Lewis of Detroit.

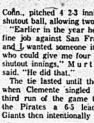
Ellis Gets Pirate Nod After Giants Ousted

PITTSBURGH (AP) — Dock Ellis is manager Danny Murtaugh's choice as the starting pitcher for Pittsburgh Pirates in the first game of the World Series against Baltimore Orioles Saturday.

"Ellis will pitch the first game of the series if he's physically able," Murtaugh said in the dressing room Wednesday after the Pirates had smashed San Francisco Giants 9-5 to win their first National League pennant since 1960.

Pittsburgh won the best-of-five playoffs in four games with the help of super relief pitching by Bruce Kison and Dave Giusti, and three-run homers off the bats of Rich Hebner and Al Oliver.

The only doubt in Murtaugh's mind about Ellis starting Saturday against the Orioles, the American League champions, was the condition of the 25-year-old right-hander's tender elbow.



Oliver and Hebner accounted for most of Pittsburgh's runs Wednesday, but the real standout was Kison, a babyface 21-year-old.

San Francisco ripped starter Steve Blass for five runs in the first two innings, but Roberto Clemente singled home two runs in the first and Hebner smashed his homer in the second off Giants' starter Gaylord Perry to keep Pirates even. At the start of third, Murtaugh brought in Kison to relieve Blass.

Kison, who last year pitched the Eastern League championship clincher at Waterbury, Conn., pitched 3 2-3 innings of shutout ball, allowing two hits.

"Earlier in the year he did a fine job against San Francisco and I wanted someone in there who could give me four or five shutout innings," Murtaugh said. "He did that."

The tie lasted until the sixth when Clemente singled in his third run of the game to give the Pirates a 6-5 lead. The Giants then intentionally walked

ROBERTO CLEMENTE

Willie Stargell, who was 0 for-14, to get to Oliver.

"I got a lot of pride and confidence," said Oliver, after he had slammed a 2-1 pitch over the right field wall for his three-run homer off Jerry Johnson, who had relieved Perry.

The Giants had walked Stargell intentionally in the fourth and Oliver popped out.

"I said to myself: 'Don't get anxious like you did against Perry, the first time swinging at a high ball. Wait on the pitch you can handle and really air it out.'"

Only losing pitcher Perry and Willie McCovey collected hits off Kison.

With two out in the seventh, McCovey singled to centre and Kison uncorked a wild pitch. Bobby Bonds walked on a 3-1 pitch and reliever Giusti came in.

Giusti fanned Dick Dietz and then retired the Giants in the final two innings.

"I threw the ball where I wanted it," said Giusti, who got three saves in the four-game series.

Perry said the slider he threw Hebner for the three-run homer that tied the score 5-5 in the second inning "[illegible] I have been a ball if he hadn't swung."

Hebner, excited about his second homer in as many days, said: "I'm just not supposed to hit these and I haven't been. But I proved to myself that I could."

Despite Oliver's heroics, he will be back on the Pittsburgh bench for the World Series opener.

"I don't like being platooned in centre field," he said.

"I want to be a starter. I've got the ability . . . and I'm 24 years old."

With lefty Dave McNally expected to pitch the series opener for Baltimore, right-handed Gene Clines will go to centre field and the left-handed Oliver to the bench in Murtaugh's platoon system.

Orioles Admit Obvious

BALTIMORE (AP) — Baltimore Orioles find it hard to reveal anything but the obvious when speaking of their World Series opponents.

The American League champions indicate that when you speak of Pittsburgh Pirates the first thing that comes to mind is their hitting.

"They have a lot of power," Baltimore manager Earl Weaver said. "[illegible] Pirates beat San Francisco Giants Wednesday to win the National League playoffs, "and it's pretty well balanced from both sides of the plate."

As a result, Weaver was not definite about his starting pitcher for game No. 1 in Baltimore Saturday.

"The only thing I can say right now is that Pat Dobson probably will work out of the bullpen," he said.

Dobson, one of four 20-game winners on the Baltimore staff, was assigned to the bullpen for the playoffs but was not needed.

As the Orioles swept three from Oakland Athletics, Dave McNally required two innings of relief from Eddie Watt, while the other 20-game winners, Mike Cuellar and Jim Palmer, hurled complete games.

"I know our pitching is better than theirs," coach Billy Hunter said, "and I hope our hitting is as good as theirs."

"The Pirates hit home runs even when they're not in shape," Palmer said.

"Most of them can hit homers, but the biggest thing is they hit the ball all over the park, and make it harder to defence them—unless you can make them hit the ball to Brooks (Robinson)."

Record Effort Beats Hamilton

REGINA (CP) — Ron Lancaster set one Canadian Football League career passing record and equalled another Wednesday night as he guided Saskatchewan Roughriders to a 28-20 interlocking victory over Hamilton Tiger-Cats.

A small crowd of 13,914 watched Lancaster, a CFL quarterback for 11 seasons, complete 12 of 23 pass attempts to pull ahead of Sam Etcheverry in passes completed during a career.

Lancaster now has 1,640, 10 more than Etcheverry completed in seven seasons with Montreal Alouettes. Etcheverry now is the Alouettes' head coach.

Touchdown passes to Allan Ford and Bobby Thompson were among Lancaster's completions, giving him a career total of 185. That equals the record set by Russ Jackson in 12 seasons with Ottawa Rough Riders.

Earlier in the season, Lancaster set career records for passing yardage, passes thrown and interceptions.

Fullback George Reed scored the other Saskatchewan touchdown and rushed for 102 yards to close in on the career rushing record held by Johnny Bright. Reed, in his ninth season, needs another 119 yards to catch Bright, who rushed for 10,909 yards in 13 campaigns with Calgary Stampeders and Edmonton Eskimos.

Jack Abendschan booted two field goals, two converts and two singles as the second-place Roughriders increased their margin to three points over Winnipeg Blue Bombers and British Columbia Lions, co-holders of third place in the Western Conference.

The Ticats, unable to win on a two-game western swing, blew a chance to pull out of a second-place tie with the Alouettes in the Eastern Conference.

Max Anderson and Lewis Porter scored touchdowns for Hamilton but its comeback effort foundered on 1 urth-quarter pass interceptions by Wayne Shaw and Jim Walter of the Roughriders.

Tommy Joe Coffey kicked two converts, a field goal and a single and Joe Zuger two singles for the Tiger-Cats, who lost 17-1 to Calgary Sunday.

The win cost Saskatchewan a player. Bob Pearce, who has been playing both ways since an injury to Silas McKinnie, suffered a broken bone in his right leg in the first quarter and is expected to be out of action for the rest of the season.

Coffey's 42-yard field goal pushed Hamilton ahead in the first quarter, but Saskatchewan stormed back with 15 points in the second quarter on Reed's running and Lancaster's passing.

In boosting his season rushing total to 973 yards, Reed added to career records for most carries, 2,113, most touchdowns rushing, 32, and most touchdowns scored, 33.

The Ticats managed to narrow the Saskatchewan lead to 21-20 early in the fourth quarter but the rally was snuffed out when the late interceptions led to field goals by Abendschan.

Saskatchewan rushed for 238 yards compared with Hamilton's 127 and had 155 yards passing. Zuger, who completed eight of 21 pass attempts, collected 102 yards through the air.

Punting was the only category where the Ticats had an edge. Zuger punted for an average of 55.4 yards compared with Ford's 36.4.

Wade's Lenses Don't Stop Turnovers

MONTREAL (CP) — Quarterback Sonny Wade of Montreal Alouettes began wearing contact lenses on the field one year ago—a move that was heralded as a prime factor in changing the club's high turnover rate into touchdowns.

But today the Eastern Football Conference Als, defending Grey Cup champions, once again lead the turnover parade and Wade concedes he really doesn't think the lenses made that much difference after all.

The Als currently sport a 5-5 record after dropping games to Edmonton Eskimos and British Columbia Lions of the Western Football Conference last week.

The Als are preparing for a Sunday visit by Toronto Argonauts, current leaders in the EFC with a 9-2 record. The two teams return to Toronto one week later for a rematch.

Wade normally wears heavy black-rimmed glasses off the field. Last season's contact lens incident came when coach Sam Etcheverry spotted him inserting the contacts after a club workout. From then on the quarterback wore the lenses on the field.

Now Wade says he doesn't think it was the contacts which picked the club up for its run to the Grey Cup.

"I don't think it ever was. Everybody made such a fuss about it last year that I just went along with the show," he said after Tuesday's workout.

"The key last year was that everyone started to pull together as a unit and we began to play winning football."

While Wade leeds the EFC quarterback statistics with 131 completions on 276 attempts this season and 1,859 yards through the air, he also has had 20 of his passes intercepted, also tops in the EFC.

When teams are losing, the first to hear about it are the coaches and the quarterbacks. And this year Sonny has been hearing about it from both the critics and the coaches.

"That is the toughest thing," he admits. "To try and forget about all the criticism and just try and keep doing the best you know how."

Coffey Adds Six

Eagles Axe Williams

PHILADELPHIA (AP) — Millionaire Leonard Tose wants to win "very badly" so he fired Jerry Williams as head coach of his winless Philadelphia Eagles and gave the job to Eddie Khayat.

"Eddie said he could produce a winner," Tose told a news conference Wednesday. "I'll take that simple.

"If we had played respectable, competitive football, if we had given our fans a hope that we could win, we wouldn't be here with a new coach.

What galled Tose were successive humiliating, lopsided National Football League defeats by Cincinnati Bengals (34-14), Dallas Cowboys (42-7), and San Francisco 49ers (31-3).

"They gave me a feeling of frustration and I just had to do something," Tose said.

The decision angered Williams, dismayed the players, surprised Khayat. Yet it had been expected ever since last year's disastrous season.

Williams, who was named Coach of the Year in the Canadian Football League in 1967, came to the Eagles in 1969 after breaking a four-year contract as head coach of Calgary Stampeders.

He had 45 wins, 28 losses and a tie in his four years with the Western Football Conference Stampeders, the best coaching record of any Calgary leader.

He directed the Stamps to two WFC championships and to the Grey Cup final in 1968 but lost out to Ottawa Rough Riders.

Williams said "I was offered a sizable sum of money to resign, but to accept a bribe of that nature is to lower myself to his depths."

But Tose said that as "a compassionate man" he directed general manager Pete Retzlaff to offer as much as an additional year's salary if Williams would resign "for the good of the team."

Gotta Guess With Best

OTTAWA (CP) — Coach Jack Gotta, still nursing hopes of a playoff berth for Ottawa Rough Riders, says he will go with his best in Saturday's Canadian Football League game against British Columbia Lions.

Riders have won only three of 11 games and are all but mathematically eliminated from the playoffs.

"We want that game Saturday and we aren't thinking beyond that," said Gotta.

The coach said he would use ex-B.C. Lion Paul Brothers more in the game than he did a week ago against Toronto Argonauts.

But Rick Cassatta remains the No. 1 quarterback. "If he gets some help, he could get things going for us," Gotta said. Riders are expected to drop slotback Terry Swarn from the lineup and insert fullback Bob Hoamard, recently cut by Edmonton Eskimos.

Hoamard and regular fullback Dennis Duncan have been running backs in Ottawa workouts all this week.

Weese Gals Complete Final Series Comeback

Weese's came back, but Cosy Grill wasn't ready glad they did. After building a 3-0 lead in their city Women's Softball final series, Cosy saw the championship slip through their hands Wednesday night as Weese's Flowers staged a 3-2 comeback win to take the title.

Cosy carried a 2-1 lead into the fifth inning of the tight-ly - contested softball duel but single tallies in the fifth and sixth were enough to win for Weese's. Left fielder Judy Sager scored the winning tally, beating out an infield single in the next - to - last inning and then riding home on a 4 triple to right centre by Leah Harper.

Verona Brent fired a six-hit-ter for her fourth win of the series, striking out two batters and walking the same number. The losing hurler was Sandra Cleau, who whiffed three and did not issue a walk.

The key defensive play for the winners was turned in by second baseman Bev. Clapp when she speared a fourth-frame line drive by Verna Hill to start a rally - ending double play.

Offensively, Leah Harper connected for a triple and single, while Irma Barberstock had a pair of singles and Lillian Barberstock a double and single. For Cosy, Sheila Ray had a triple and single while Sharon Francis rapped two singles. Defensively shortstop Marg Reid turned in a top performance.

The victory gave Weese's the league championship as well as the regular season pennant for the 1971 season.

Members of the winning team included Lillian Barberstock, Irma Barberstock, Charlene Quinn, Donna Brent, Valerie Brown, Judy Sager, Leah Harper, Cheryl Crain, Bev Clapp, Teresa Marnell and Nora Barberstock.

Charlene Quinn of Weese's Flowers gets into the swing of things in the final game of the city Women's Softball League championship night. Weese's came from a 3-0 deficit in the series to capture the championship on the strength of a 3-2 victory over Cosy Grill. The winning squad emerged with a 4-3-1 record in the eight-game series.

BCI Defence Stumbling Block for Centre Hastings

BCI seniors proved to be a stumbling "block" to Centre Hastings in a Bay of Quinte football bout yesterday.

The Collegians opened up a 6-0 lead when Craig Bakay recovered a blocked punt in the end zone and BCI went on to win the senior game 19-6.

In the junior contest BCI made it a sweep by beating Centre Hastings 26-12.

Peter LeBaron added a touchdown and Lance Kerr a conversion to give the senior Collegians a 13-0 half time lead. In the final period Rick Bell added a touchdown and Steve Redner a two-point conversion.

John Roblin, Mark Lucas and Mike Twig were the defensive stars for BCI, who gained 423 yards in the contest, while limiting Centre Hastings to 147 yards.

In the junior contest Russ Simmonds racked up 139 yards passing and scored two touchdowns to pace the 26-12 BCI win. Other major scores went to Phil Harvey and Steve Rodrigues, while Mark Walmsley had a two-point conversion.

Defensively, Larry Wilson was credited with six tackles, two fumble recoveries and an interception. Other defensive stars were Pete Cox, Chris Lachman and Brian Roach.

Host Runners Do Most

MADOC — Centre Hastings proved to be the host with the most-ess in a high school cross country meet Wednesday. The Madoc secondary school runners bested entries from four other educational institutions to take first place in the five-team competition.

The host team was penalized only 50 points (low score wins) to edge Centennial which totalled 38 points. Other schools competing included Picton, Napanee and Moira.

In the girls section Brenda Robinson helped carry the Centre Hastings team to a win by covering the 1.3 mile distance in 13:26 minutes.

The bantam boys title also went to Centre Hastings with Mike Logan turning in the top performance for the winners. Logan's time was 12:03 for the same distance as the girls' race.

In midget, Picton took team honors but Centennial's Mike Schreider was the individual winner covering he 2.6 mile course in 17:41.

Ron Brown helped pace Centennial to the junior title by turning in a 19:12 effort over the 3.1 mile layout. In senior Centre Hastings again took the team title with Centennial's John Thompson garnering individual honors with a time of 25.44 for the 4.3 mile distance.

Stock Car Tear-downs Disputed

Mini stock car racing was really catchy on which was proven when the announcer at the track asked over the PA system if they enjoyed the mini car races. The reaction of the spectators was tremendous.

All went well in the mini class till the end of the last race on Sunday at Brighton Speedway. Wayne Cochrane took a third and a first place in the day's events. This apparently so annoyed one of the drivers who hinted either the "Power" or the driving ability to do so himself, demanded that Wayne Cochrane, car no. 5, be torn down on the spot.

What is legal?

What is not legal?

Who knows?

The driver who registered the complaint had the only available mechanic for this class of racing. The results of such an inspection before it begins, would be of a prejudiced nature. He could disqualify this car, or in fact any other car with nothing else on his mind but to do so. A bolt too long or too short or a wad of gum on the windshield.

Being in fifth place point standing and having the occasional win, due to a good car and superior driving ability, should not be warrent for a tear-down.

The whole thing boils down to the fact that the driver of the car that demanded the tear-down either lacked the driving ability to win or the mechanic's desires to increase his automotive knowledge by finding out why another car could be made to perform better than the one he works on.

You may think the writer of this is related to Wayne Cochrane. True I am his Dad. But more important than relationship in this case is sportsmanship or the lack of it.

Mini stock car racing has been hurt.

Two NHL Veterans on the Move

By THE CANADIAN PRESS

Deals affecting two veteran players and an injury to Dave Keon, Toronto Maple Leafs' captain, cropped up Wednesday as the National Hockey League teams neared the end of their exhibition schedule.

Pittsburgh Penguins sold Dean Prentice to Minnesota North Stars, while New York Rangers assigned right winger Ron Stewart on loan to Providence Reds of the American Hockey League. Both have seen 18 years' service in the NHL.

And in Vancouver, Leafs' coach Johnny McLellan said Keon will be sent to Toronto today for treatment of strained ligaments in his left knee.

"The players were just skating around and I don't know if he hit a rut in the ice, or what," said McLellan. "I just hope it isn't too serious."

DEAN PRENTICE

Keon will miss Leafs' league opener against Vancouver Canucks Friday and Sunday's game in Oakland against California Golden Seals.

In exhibition play Wednesday night, St. Louis Blues edged Minnesota 4-3, Detroit Red Wings tied Buffalo Sabres 2-2 and Pittsburgh defeated Hershey Bears of the American Hockey League 5-2.

The Penguins did not disclose the amount of cash they received for Prentice, who scored 21 goals for them last season.

Prentice, 39 Tuesday, played with Boston and Detroit before being drafted by Pittsburgh in 1969.

Stewart, also 39, will be accompanied to Providence by rookie defenceman Andre Dupont.

In a straight trade, California sent right winger Tony Featherstone to Montreal Canadiens for goalie Ray Martynuk.

Chris Bordeleau's goal late in the third period carried the Blues to their victory over the North Stars at St. Louis. His shot broke a tie created by Murray Hiver's goal earlier in the period.

The Sabres needed to come from behind twice at home ice to salvage the tie with the Red Wings. Red Berenson and Leon Rochefort scored the Detroit goals, Rod Zaine and Rick Martin scored for Buffalo.

The game, in Buffalo's grooved Memorial Auditorium, drew 14,961 fans, believed a record for a sports event in the arena.

Penguins took a 4-1 lead over the Bears on second-period goals by Greg Polis, Joe Norris, Darryl Edestrand and Keith McCreary.

Hershey's goals were supplied by Ted Snell and Mike Nykoluk. Norris scored his second goal in the third period.

After the NHL opener Friday, 10 teams swing into action Saturday, when Toronto visits California, New York goes to Boston, Detroit is at Chicago, Pittsburgh invades Buffalo and Los Angeles plays at Vancouver.

All are night games except the one in Vancouver.

Three Down, 13 to Go in Grain Debate

OTTAWA (CP) — The Liberals advanced a few yards Wednesday in the Commons warfare over the government's prairie grains income stabilization bill, putting down three of 16 proposed amendments.

It was the first movement in the latest seven days of debate on the bill, which has survived a series of opposition attacks since it was introduced last April.

But the dispute appeared as far as ever from settlement.

Otto Lang, minister responsible for the Canadian wheat board, said outside the House he

No Answer

OTTAWA (CP) — "Will the prime minister be consulting with Mr. Robert Nixon on possible dates for federal-provincial conferences to be held after Oct. 21?"

The Commons question came from Maurice Foster (L—Algoma).

"Hear, hear," said some Liberal members.

"That will be the day," said a Conservative.

"What a hope," said a New Democrat.

There was no record of any Social Credit member saying anything about the outcome of the Oct. 21 Ontario election, and Mr. Trudeau merely smiled.

was on the brink of dropping the bill, which contains two major provisions:

—Repeal of the Temporary Wheat Reserves Act and payment to wheat farmers of $100 million in lieu of reserves-act payments due since July 31, 1971.

—Establishment of a fund supported by the government and farmers, from which farmers would draw when the grains-industry gross income falls below the average of the preceding five years.

The amendments defeated Wednesday—with Liberals outvoting the three opposition parties—would have linked payments from the fund to the industry production costs and would have raised the overall level of payments.

Conservative House Leader Gerald Baldwin said he was shocked and acazed at government accusations of opposition obstruction.

The opposition was pursuing its duty to point out flaws in legislation.

As a way out of the stalemate, he suggested the government make both the payments required under the reserves act and the $100 million replacement payments.

Then the government could reassess the bill, taking account of opposition, industry and farmer criticisms.

Meanwhile, Mr. Lang issued statements attacking the opposition for what he called its mindless filibuster.

He said interested parties and the opposition ran out of constructive criticism long ago.

"We've wasted too much time pandering to the guilt feelings, the political dilemma and the selfishness of the opposition," he added.

But Jack McIntosh (PC—Swift Current-Maple Creek) said the government is responsible for the delay and urged Mr. Lang to withdraw the bill and rewrite it according to the wishes of the farmers.

"We have reached a deadlock."

David Orlikow (NDP—Winnipeg North) said the government could not name one legitimate farm organization supporting the bill.

Mr. Lang said his mail from farmers ran five-to-one in favor of the government bill.

Mr. Baldwin said he had some mail favoring the bill, too—mostly from Saskatoon residents who farmed their backyards.

The government was also attacked by one of its own Senate appointees—Eugene Forsey (L—Ontario).

Senator Forsey said the government was an embarrassed debtor in breach of the law, having withheld payments required by the reserves act.

Prime Minister Trudeau has conceded the government owes a debt under the reserves act, but says the proposed bill would pay much more to farmers when—or if—it is passed.

While the bill would pay a one-shot $100-million to farmers this year, MPs dispute what the reserves act payments amount to.

The opposition has used figures close to $90 million. The government has put the figure as low as $38.5 million.

Fingerprinting

OTTAWA (CP) — The government may be fingerprinting and photographing some of its employees for security reasons, Prime Minister Trudeau told the Commons Wednesday.

But he said he did not know of any general policy along those lines.

Conservative House Leader G. W. Baldwin sent a letter to a local newspaper said employees of Statistics Canada were in a state of "discontent and unrest" over consideration of fingerprinting and photographing of 4,000 of them.

A Statistics Canada spokesman said Wednesday the idea was being considered to strengthen the confidentiality of information received by the agency on individual Canadians.

Senseless Confrontation Stanfield Says of PM Policy

MONTREAL (CP) — Conservative Leader Robert Stanfield said Canada's relations with the United States "must now be at a pretty low ebb," and Prime Minister Trudeau should take constructive action immediately to improve these relations.

"The government of Canada must stop fooling around with the livelihood and prospects of the Canadian people, because it makes no more sense confronting the United States than confronting Canadian farmers and businessmen, as the Trudeau government has done in the past."

Mr. Stanfield was speaking at

Smallwood Calls Oct. 28 Election

ST. JOHN'S, Nfld. (CP) — Premier Joseph Smallwood has ended three years of speculation by calling a provincial election for Thursday, Oct. 28 and plans to begin his seventh appeal to voters tonight with a speech in his Placentia East riding.

The 70-year-old premier, who has led his Liberal party to victory in all six provincial elections since Confederation in 1949, named the date Wednesday at a news conference.

He promised a campaign that would be "thoroughly clean, clean as a hound's tooth."

Frank Moores, Progressive Conservative leader, welcomed the premier's announcement for which "we've waited a long time . . . sometimes not so patiently."

"I can assure the premier our campaign will be clean and it will also be spirited."

Mrs. Moores is expected to be nominated by acclamation in Humber West, President Smallwood's district in the last election.

Mr. Smallwood's announcement allowed one day more than the 21 day's notice of an election required by law.

Nomination day is Monday, Oct. 18.

Except for Mr. Moores, Conservative and Liberal candidates have been nominated in all 41 districts, including Harbour Main which returns two members.

Standing at dissolution of the 36th legislature was: Liberal 25, Progressive Conservative seven, Independent Liberal two and independent one. There were seven vacancies.

The Liberals won 39 of the 42 legislature seats in the last election Sept. 8, 1966 but defections, retirements and death cut government strength during the last three years.

"I can't see us getting fewer than 30 seats," Mr. Smallwood said.

"Our losing the election is something which has never occurred to me."

He appeared in high spirits and joked with reporters about his promise after the last election to step down.

But the present contest "will be my last election."

If re-elected he planned to remain premier until the calling of a subsequent election when he would retire.

For the first time since Confederation advance polls will be held. They will be open the four immediately preceding election day.

Special polling booths also will be set up in centres with 200 or more students of voting age. The aim is to allow Memorial University students in St. John's and those in various trade schools throughout the province to vote for candidates in their home districts.

A total of 265,590 persons eligible to vote including about 60,000 who have never cast ballots before—those born since Mr. Smallwood led Newfoundland into Confederation. In the last election there were 230,516 eligible.

The minimum voting age is 19.

Election speculation has been abroad in the province since months before Mr. Smallwood defeated a determined push to unseat him as party leader in 1969.

The premier retained the leadership by defeating John C. Crosbie, his former health minister, and T. Alex Hickman, who resigned the justice portfolio to try for Mr. Smallwood's position.

The outcome of the leadership convention—first in the party's history—started a dizzy series of floor-crossings as several prominent Liberals and Conservatives switched sides.

Mr. Crosbie, now Conservative candidate in his former district of St. John's West, had resigned from the cabinet in 1968 to protest Mr. Smallwood's economic policies.

He later sat as an independent Liberal, then joined the Conservatives.

While Premier Smallwood said Wednesday the only issue in the election was which party would provide the best government, Mr. Crosbie is likely to continue his attacks on the government's aid to industrial promoters.

Mr. Hickman and H. R. V. Earle, who resigned as finance minister to support Mr. Crosbie in the leadership race, joined the Conservatives a few months after the leadership convention.

Hubert Kitchen, who lost a Conservative leadership race to Mr. Moores in 1970, was appointed education minister by Mr. Smallwood this summer. He is seeking election in Harbour Grace.

In September, Mayor Noel Murphy of Corner Brook, a former Conservative party leader who lost Humber East to a Liberal in 1966, was appointed minister-without-portfolio. He will oppose Mr. Moores in Humber West.

Andrew C. Crosbie, millionaire businessman—brother of John C. Crosbie, was appointed last month as Mr. Smallwood's campaign manager.

John Connors, leader of the New Democratic Party which has never elected a candidate in Newfoundland, said Wednesday night the election announcement was "just what we have been waiting for."

Mr. Connors, NDP candidate in Grand Falls, said the party had been "waiting a long time for the premier to get up enough courage to name the date of the election."

The party has nominated 14 candidates so far and more are expected to be named next week.

There also are three New Labrador party candidates and one independent.

Active Politician

TORONTO (CP) — Jean Newman-Urquhart, 46, who for 19 years after 1950 was active in local politics, died in hospital Tuesday after suffering a stroke Monday.

She was one of the most successful women politicians in Toronto, topping the polls in every civic election she entered until defeated in the 1960 mayoralty race by Nathan Phillips. She served as school trustee, alderman and controller.

She returned to politics in 1963 as Liberal candidate in a provincial byelection in Eglinton riding, but lost to Conservative Leonard Reilly by 35 votes.

FUND ESTABLISHED

TORONTO (CP) — The Anglican Church of Canada has announced a grant of $5,000 has been made to the World Council of Churches' fund to help draft-age immigrants from the United States. A church statement said that some Anglicans would disagree with the decision, but said it was made after two years of study.

Try to Move Youth in Jail

WINNIPEG (CP) — Attorney-General A. H. Mackling says efforts will be made to arrange the transfer to an Ontario institution of a 15-year-old boy who has been held in a jail for adults in Manitoba pending trial.

Mr. Mackling said the boy, alleged to have stabbed a four-year-old girl to death, shouldn't be in a jail for adults "but we have no other place available."

He said in an interview Tuesday members of his staff are checking the possibility of having the youth moved to Ontario. A citizens' group has protested to Mr. Mackling and Health Minister Rene Toupin about the youth's situation.

Mr. Mackling said: "We have a problem making provisions for holding juveniles in maximum-security institutions but so does almost every other province."

He said a possible solution would be a system of regional federal-provincial facilities to handle such cases.

The citizens' group, headed by Rev. Kim S. Warne, a United Church minister, said detention of the boy may violate federal law.

Mr. Warne said: "The boy needs psychiatric treatment but Manitoba has no resources for this type of youngster. He has been in custody awaiting disposition for about seven months.

No Unanimity On Amchitka

OTTAWA (CP) — After two weeks of trying, the Commons still was unable to agree by Wednesday what it wants to say about a proposed five-megaton nuclear blast scheduled for this month in Canada's Pacific backyard.

Last week, three different MPs tried to get unanimous consent to introduce motions of protest against the underground nuclear test scheduled to be detonated by the U.S. Atomic Energy Commission in the Aleutian Islands this month.

When the first motion was proposed by a New Democrat member, the Liberals denied unanimous consent.

Each time two later motions were proposed by Liberal members, a Conservative member dissented.

When one of the Conservatives who had declined consent last week proposed his own motion Monday, a Liberal declined.

External Affairs Minister Mitchell Sharp registered Canadian concern about nuclear tests in conferences late last week with both his U.S. and Soviet counterparts, William Rogers and Andrei Gromyko.

Meanwhile, representatives of the Commons parties were supposed to be working on a formula that would satisfy everyone in the House.

Government House Leader Allan MacEachen said Friday the government would solve the problem of getting unanimous consent by introducing the motion itself—if the other parties would agree to limit debate.

During the weekend, sources from both the government and the opposition say, it was agreed that debate could be limited to a few hours.

But then they couldn't agree on the wording.

The government wanted a motion specifically aimed at the Amchitka Island test, with secondary reference to its opposition to all such nuclear blasts.

But the Conservatives wanted something broader—similar to the motion proposed Monday by Jack McIntosh (PC—Swift Current-Maple Creek)—that would direct the protest as strongly against tests in the Soviet Union, China and France as it would against the U.S. test in Alaska.

The government said this would be a waste of time. And there, apparently, the matter rests.

A government source Wednesday said the matter no longer is being pursued with much vigor by anyone.

Conservative House Leader Gerald W. Baldwin said a motion should be broad enough to let members express a variety of views—be they anti-American, anti-Russian, or anti-bomb.

And a Commons official mused:

"They probably couldn't agree if the bomb were going to be set off in the House itself."

Students Carry Coffin

Davis Interrupts Campaign Tour for Special Meetings Session

WINDSOR, Ont. (CP) — Premier William Davis flew back to Toronto unexpectedly Wednesday night to attend two or three meetings on government business.

The premier cancelled two of four engagements on his campaign tour for the Oct. 21 general election, including a bear-pit session with students at the University of Windsor.

Mr. Davis made the decision to go back after talking to Toronto by telephone from Uplands Airport in Ottawa before he left for Windsor.

Asked whether he would be discussing the Ontario Northland Railway, he said: "I can't tell you that."

He attended a rally at the Windsor Curling Club and paid a brief visit to a senior citizens' home before he left.

He held a brief conversation with Provincial Treasurer Darcy McKeough, who had been at the senior citizens' home before he left for the airport.

The premier said only that he had two or three things to see about in Toronto.

Tom Campbell, assistant secretary to the cabinet, who accompanied the premier on his campaign as liaison between the government and the premier, went back with him.

The premier said he plans to be back in time for his first meeting today. Campaign buses are scheduled to leave Windsor at 7:30 a.m. for a pancake breakfast in Amherstburg. Mrs. Davis remained in Windsor.

Earlier at Pembroke, about 120 solemn girls from a private Roman Catholic high school held a silent protest in the rain outside a Royal Canadian Legion hall where Premier William Davis was campaigning Wednesday.

The students from Our Lady High School formed a double line outside the hall. Four carried a grey coffin.

After Mr. Davis finished speaking to an enthusiastic crowd, Mayor Robert Kay invited the girls in for sandwiches and tea.

But the students were not interested. Hair streaming with water, they marched slowly in a circle in the centre of the room behind the coffin.

There were hoots and some jeers from the crowd of supporters and several elderly Conservatives began chanting, "We want Davis."

John Sutherland, campaign manager for Conservative incumbent Maurice Hamilton (Renfrew North) took the microphone to say:

"I think this is very unfair to handle Mr. Davis in this way."

Mr. Davis invited the students to stay and speak to him afterward but they filed out.

Nelly Vandemaar, told reporters she would not explain the coffin.

The premier's campaign for the Oct. 21 general election has been met almost daily by Roman Catholic students protesting his government's decision not to extend aid to the separate school system beyond Grade 10.

The students were definitely in the minority at Pembroke, where the election tour was delayed for close to an hour because so many supporters wanted to shake Mr. Davis's hand.

Earlier, the premier told the crowd it is time to be prudent in management of government affairs. He would like to see some health programs extended, but this is not the time to increase taxes.

Mr. Davis said Opposition Leader Robert Nixon has suggested if the Conservatives win they will introduce a new income tax.

"If Bob is elected and keeps his promises, not only will he have to create another income tax, he will have to create his own mint here in the province of Ontario."

Mr. Davis's day began with a pancake breakfast for 350 in Arnprior and a visit to a factory that produces brassieres and rubber gloves.

Then the premier made mainstreeted in Arnprior and later in Renfrew.

At Renfrew, students and about 15 teachers from St. Joseph's high school met his campaign buses to protest government policy on separate school grants.

Suzanne Chretien, a 17-year-old Grade 13 student, was invited with two others to chat with the premier. She said she didn't bother to outline the position again.

"I told him he knows our stand and we know his."

The tour also made an unscheduled stop at Cobden, Ont., where the local high school band and several busloads of students were hastily assembled to play in front of the municipal offices.

Mr. Davis will be in southwestern Ontario for the next three days.

More Taxes for Mining Lewis Claim in Cobalt

COBALT, Ont. (CP) — Stephen Lewis said Wednesday that if the New Democratic Party forms the next Ontario government, it will increase the mining industry's share of the tax bill and also develop secondary industries in mining areas.

The NDP leader said the mining industry would be taxed according to the value of its production, adding that each percentage point of total mineral production in Ontario is worth $16 million.

"We feel the industry can afford to pay much more than the 1.75 per cent they paid last year," he said.

Mr. Lewis said that in 1970 the average rate of return on mining capital investment was 9.6 per cent after taxes, compared with 5.1 per cent on all other industries.

"The people of Ontario received for one of its richest resources less than 12 per cent of that wealth by way of provincial taxes," he said.

"Statistics Canada quotes figures from 1966 which show the mining industry paid $15 million in taxes on book profits of $396 million—a nice round figure of four per cent." He added that other industries paid a much higher percentage of their profits in taxes.

Mr. Lewis also carried his Oct. 21 Ontario election to Sudbury and Kapuskasing, Cobalt, 58 miles southeast of Kirkland Lake, is in the Timiskaming riding held in the last government by NDP Donald Jackson.

Mr. Lewis said the NDP would arrange to have most of the minerals that are mined in Ontario processed in the province. Ontario now ships unprocessed out of the province 100 per cent of its lead, silver and uranium, as well as 98 per cent of its zinc and 52 per cent of its iron ore.

He said the NDP would have those processed at home, either by way of incentives to private groups, joint public-private ventures or Crown corporations.

He also said his party would launch a study to develop secondary industries that would use the mineral resources at communities such as North Bay, Sault Ste. Marie and Kirkland Lake.

He suggested such industries as wire and cable plants, copper and brass mills, non-ferrous foundries and cement plants.

Referring to a study of northeastern Ontario by economists Gerald Hodge and Cheuk Wong, he said such industries could provide 800 jobs.

He suggested the investment for those industries could be set at $100 million a year, funded by the provincial and federal governments through an agency similar to the Northern Ontario Development Corp.

Mr. Lewis also suggested a Crown corporation to carry out mineral exploration and development similar to the federal government's partnership in Pan-Arctic Oil.

Mining companies would be required to base new operations at existing mining communities such as Cobalt, which has suffered serious economic blows by the closing of the Khan-Kotia Mines Ltd. refinery which once employed 90 men.

Mr. Lewis said there is a 25-per-cent unemployment rate in the northeastern part of the province, mainly because of mine shutdowns.

In Kapuskasing, he said he hoped the NDP would, within the first four years in power, recover the Ontario economy from foreign domination.

Another Burden

Nixon Charges PCs Ignoring North's Needs

GHAPLEAU, Ont. (CP) — Liberal Leader Robert Nixon used a hospital built in 1915 to illustrate Wednesday what he said were inconsistencies in government policies affecting the North.

He took reporters covering his Oct. 21 Ontario election campaign to the 48-bed Lady Minto Hospital and said that "it is a fire trap and has been condemned."

Mr. Nixon then accused the Progressive Conservative administration of failing to meet the medical needs of this community of 3,600 with funds for a new hospital although $90,000 has been raised locally.

The government has said it will pay 80 per cent of the costs of the new hospital if the remainder can be raised locally. About another $150,000 is needed.

Meanwhile, acute-care patients must be flown to Sault Ste. Marie, Toronto, Timmins or Sudbury for major surgery. There are no chronic-care facilities.

Mr. Nixon later told a public meeting that the hospital "has been condemned on more than one occasion and certainly has been condemned since 1967."

"It is very strange indeed one arm of the government of Ontario says the hospital is unsafe and another, the department of health, will refuse to provide the grants."

Mr. Nixon said the community's old high school now is used as an elementary school and it too is condemned. There is a post in the centre of one of the classrooms helping to support the classroom above.

He told his Nickel Belt riding audience that it has no one to blame for situations such as this "but your own entrenchment" to the Conservative party.

Mr. Nixon said the Conservatives have told voters that "good government deserves the support and you'll fall for that old bait."

Mr. Nixon's statement was challenged by a woman Tory supporter who said the grants for the hospital were approved. She also questioned his statement about the post in the school classroom.

The Liberal leader spent more time flying Wednesday than he did campaigning. He left his Brantford home and flew by DC-3 to Grove Bay on Manitoulin Island, then travelled by car with Austin Hunt, the Liberal candidate for Algoma-Manitoulin, to Manitoulin secondary school at West Bay.

There, he told 140 voting-age students the government spends as much money on a three-mile expressway in Toronto as it does on Northern roads in one year.

Headwinds and snowsqualls delayed his arrival here, cancelling his plans to speak to another high-school audience. He did manage to plod through mud to electioneer with workers at a sawmill. The Nixon party then boarded its float planes to Elliot Lake for a night rally.

Mr. Nixon told 275 persons there that the Conservative government is using party retreads to run the affairs of the North.

He said that Allister Johnson, retiring Conservative member for Parry Sound and chairman of the Ontario Northland Railway, did not know why the line was strikebound.

Frozen Shoulder Needs Movement

By G.C. THOSTESON MD

Dear Dr. Thosteson: My sister has been suffering from a "frozen shoulder." Would you discuss this and what is your advice? She has been going to a licensed physical therapist prescribed by an orthopedist, and is now much better.—Mrs. J.C.J.

A frozen shoulder is an exceptionally stiff shoulder—the same thing can occur in other joints, too.

When the shoulder is "frozen," movement or rotation of the arm can be extremely painful, and often the amount of movement is very limited, quite apart from the pain.

The condition can result from injury, or from a disease such as bursitis, or as a result of reflex changes following a heart attack or lung disease, or from sheer inactivity of the arm and shoulder, whether as the result of a stroke or being immobilized because of a fracture. There, of course, changes resulting from some forms of arthritis may be involved.

In any event, adhesions within the joint limit motion and make it painful—and the shoulder joint is not moved because of the pain, the more "frozen" it becomes.

Rest and application of heat usually are the first measures, followed by supervised exercises designed to loosen the joint. Injections of hydrocortisone into the joint may be necessary to lessen the pain.

In some instances, the joint may be so "frozen"—that is, so bound by adhesions—that an orthopedist may have to manipulate the joint under general anesthesia to loosen the adhesions.

Your sister evidently had good advice: she went to an orthopedist, and now by her physical therapist's work, is gradually loosening the joint.

It is pointless to expect immediate results. The whole business takes time. Co-operation by the patient—even when it hurts—is essential.

In your sister's case, you can see progress; I trust that she's wise enough to continue.

Dear Dr. Thosteson: I have been urged by a friend to buy a juicer and drink carrot-celery-spinach juice, about 16 ounces a day.

My wife insists I might ruin my health by drinking too much and that my skin will turn yellow. Please advise.—P.E.M.

It won't "ruin your health," but neither do I see that you would benefit by drinking so much. It is true that skin can turn yellow from drinking too much carrot juice or eating too many carrots and other yellow vegetables. It's an accumulation of cagotene, the stuff that makes carrots yellow.

Stop the carrots, and the color slowly fades.

Dear Dr. Thosteson: For six months, several times a day a very salty water seems to pour into my mouth from the left cheek. Lately there arises a sudden swelling next to my left ear. Gentle pressing, with a downward motion, causes the salty water to come into my mouth, and the swelling goes down.

Is this anything serious? My doctor said perhaps a stone is stuck in the salivary gland, but it worries me. I am 62.—Mrs. E.B.

It sounds very much like a partial obstruction in the salivary duct on that side. This can be from a stone in the duct, scarring of the duct, or thick secretions which are released when you press on the gland.

An x-ray may reveal a stone. Eating something sour (a pickle, etc.) may encourage the flow of saliva, reduce the swelling, and counteract the taste.

Marmora

MARMORA — Mrs. Jim Rathwell, Mrs. Hiram Mumby, Mrs. Jack Prest and Mrs. H. Maynes attended the recent Grand Chapter sessions of the Order of the Eastern Star at the Royal York Hotel in Toronto.

Mrs. Manley Lavender's floral displays took 19 first prizes at Tweed Fair recently and was awarded the special prize for most points. She had 27 entries altogether and received a total of 34 prizes.

Mr. Lavender's 110 lb. pumpkin was awarded first prize in that section. Of 14 entries which Mr. Lavender had made, 10 were among the prize winners.

Jeane Dixon's Horoscope

For October 8

Your birthday today: Sharper interests, stronger motivations promise to make this coming year memorable. Financial arrangements risky for the first half year — discipline yourself to systematic caution. Today's natives tend to give associates mates an inordinately large share in their decisions, often have good musical talents.

ARIES (Mar. 21 — Apr. 19): Follow logic and well-tested methods rather than feelings, which are apt to be abruptly stirred and stormy. Most of what is said and done can be taken in more than one way.

TAURUS (Apr. 20 — May 20): Trivialities reveal deep attitudes; whole relations turn on a word or two during stress.

GEMINI (May 21 — June 20): Temper is one of the keys to a successful day — can you hold it long enough to realize the provocation doesn't deserve your wrath?

CANCER (June 21 — July 22): Your inclinations and general program are so well known to associates that you have little to add. Just pitch in to do your share of the chores.

LEO (July 23 — Aug. 22): If it's yours, claim and make the best of it. If it's not, drop it and get clear. Let burdens be carried where they belong.

VIRGO (Aug. 23 — Sept. 22): Advice comes from all sides, some unsolicited. You needn't follow any, but give all of it some consideration.

LIBRA (Sept. 23 — Oct. 22): You still have ten uses for every minute of your time and any material resources available. Continue thrifty diligence.

SCORPIO (Oct. 23—Nov. 21): Personal satisfactions are favored. An old wish comes true with little fanfare.

SAGITTARIUS (Nov. 22 — Dec. 21): It's a rather busy day not so much crisis but more routine and unfinished chores that have to be cleared off promptly.

CAPRICORN (Dec. 22 — Jan. 19): As you get matters squared away and some issues closed, you find a choice coming up.

AQUARIUS (Jan. 20 — Feb. 18): You bring your own excitement into the routine of the day — or merely work through it and get a good deal done.

PISCES (Feb. 19 — Mar. 20): A clash between convention and circumstance tends to lead you to abandon some speculative activity or relinquish a claim.

Questions And Answers

By The Ontario Motor League

QUESTION: When are the off-season rates in effect in Florida, Arizona, California, Mexico and the Caribbean?

ANSWER: Florida — lowest rates of the year are in effect from now until mid-December. They are 40 to 50 per cent less than during peak season. Florida is in the hurricane belt, with a good amount of rain in September and October.

Caribbean — off - season rates remain in effect until mid-December. A deluxe room with two meals a day now costs $45 to $60 for two people compared with $65 to $90 in winter. Check storm warnings before going there in September and October, those are major hurricane months.

Arizona and California — three seasons are observed by most hotels. Summer rates in effect from June through September, run 30 to 50 per cent less than during winter. Fall rates are priced about halfway between. For some hotels, peak season starts in mid-December, for others it may be as late as Feb. 1. Warm sunny days and cool nights make fall weather perfect for golf, swimming and other outdoor activities.

Mexico — heavy summer rains begin tapering off in October and by November you should get sunny weather. Off-season rates now run about $18 double in first class hotels. In mid-December prices are doubled but include two meals. Mexico city does not have off-season rates.

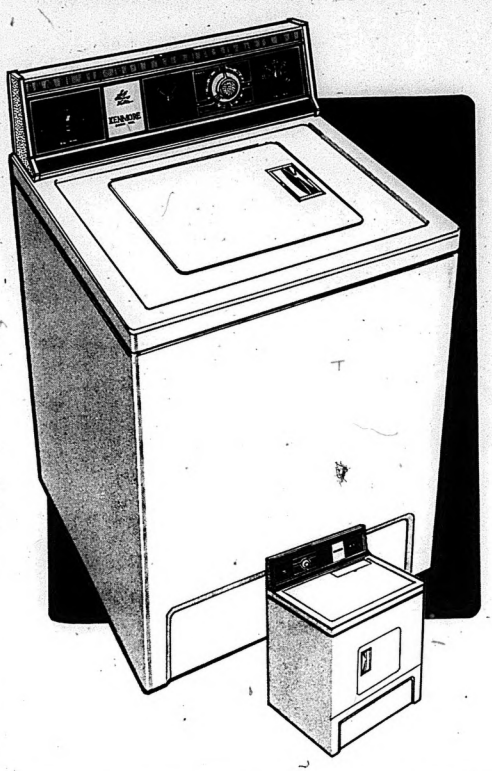
QUESTION: We are taking our family to New York City soon and would like a direct but scenic route if possible and also if you could name a few of the main attractions for adults and children.

ANSWER: There are several scenic routes to New York City but the most direct one is as follows — Take Interstate 81 from the Ivy Lea Bridge to Binghamton, N.Y., No. 17 to the New York Thruway and this will take you into New York City. Mileage — 450 miles. If you would like a different route back take the Hudson River Parkway (9A) to the Saw Mill River Parkway. This will connect with the Taconic State Parkway, just north of Tarrytown. Take the Taconic Parkway north to the Massachusetts Turnpike take this west to the New York Thruway (No. 90), exit off this at Utica, New York, and take No. 12 north to Watertown, N.Y., and No. 81 to the Ivy Lea Bridge. Mileage — 450 miles.

Here are some of the main points of interest in New York City:

Empire State Building — Take an elevator ride up 102 floors to the observation deck and see all of New York in miniature. From 42nd Street north on Fifth Ave. is a window - shopper's wonderland. You pass elegant Saks and Bonwit Teller, Best and Co., with its special collection of children's clothes, F. A. O. Schwarz, home of the newest, most wondrous toys. Kids can actually see themselves on TV during the guided tour of the RCA Building at Rockefeller Centre. They'll enjoy watching a live television show and exploring the studios. The renowned Rockettes are just one block away at Radio City Music Hall, where you'll see a live variety show plus a movie.

Central Park — here you can have lunch at the automat or by the fountain in Central Park. You can rent a boat or bikes or take a carousel ride or visit the zoo.



Boat Trips — Your children will love the breezy, three-hour Circle Line Cruise around Manhattan Island. You'll pass ocean liners and tiny tugboats, plus 35 miles of famous landmarks. You can get on these cruises at West 43rd Street pier. Adults, $3, children under 12, $1.25. The Staten Island Ferry costs a dime round trip and passes the Statue of Liberty. There are many museums to see especially the Metropolitan Museum of Art, 5th Ave. and 82nd Street in Central Park. This is one of the great museums of the world. Among the large collections are Egyptian, Greek and Roman art.

New York Zoological Park — At Fordham Rd. and Southern Blvd., known as the Bronx Zoo, has the largest collection of animals, birds and reptiles in the Western Hemisphere. Open daily 10 to 5 — admission 25 cents.

Davis To Bare Aid Plan

LONDON, Ont. (CP) — Premier William Davis said Thursday night he expects to outline parts of the position he will take at the federal-provincial economic conference during a press conference at Queen's Park today.

Mr. Davis will leave the election campaign tour for the second time in two days to fly to Toronto. He said the government has prepared some short-term and long-term suggestions for Canadian economic policy.

Mr. Davis said earlier in the week that the United States supplementary duty on imports has shown Canadians the vulnerability of their economy.

He said in an interview Thursday night at Western Ontario that economists still believe about 110 Ontario industries will be affected by the duty.

He reiterated his promise that Ontario will supplement federal programs to help the affected industries, if necessary. Mr. Davis indicated that the supplements would cover the full period of the U.S. measures and would take the form either of a guarantee or a loan.

But he said the impression still remains that federal legislation will cover the "bulk of the situation."

Premier Davis said later at a news conference here that his government will introduce free dental care for children in lower school grades if it is returned to power.

"I can't promise we could introduce it in this fiscal year but certainly it has very, very high-priority," he said.

He said he does not intend to promise any new social services program during the election campaign which would "tax the wallets of the Ontario people."

Mr. Davis began the day with a pancake breakfast in Ancaster and then travelled to Leamington for a coffee party.

The premier received warm receptions in all but one of the centres he visited Thursday. A piece for 70 persons was arranged at a meeting hall in Mount Brydges but only 16 persons showed up, and Mr. Davis did not make a set speech.

News Briefs

OTTAWA (CP) — Currency in circulation and demand deposits in the nine chartered banks of Canada totalled $10.7 billion on Sept. 29, showing an increase in the readily-available public money supply of 17.8 per cent in a year, the Bank of Canada reported Thursday.

UNITED NATIONS (CP) — U.S. officials have injected a new element into the fight to keep Nationalist China in the United Nations — the American financial support for the world organization. It would be difficult, one official said Thursday, for the United States to extend aid of the past magnitude if the Taiwan government is expelled. The U.S. contribution toward United Nations expenses is greater than that of any other country.

SANTA BARBARA, Calif. (AP) — Four firefighters were killed and two others were injured as flames whipped by an unexpected wind caught the men on the flank of a two-day brush fire, authorities said. The men were operating bulldozers scraping out a fire line on a ridge Thursday night and "the flames just shot up in the air and engulfed the three "dozers," said Jim Ridenour, manager of an ambulance company.

VICTORIA (CP) — A Supreme Court justice says Vancouver police used "inappropriate, unwarranted, unnecessary and excessive force" in breaking up a disturbance Aug. 7 in Vancouver's Eastend district. Mr. Justice Thomas Dhorn of the British Columbia Supreme Court conducted an inquiry into the incident and his report was released Thursday by Attorney-General Leslie Peterson. It said over reaction by police provided the confrontation sought by organizers of a demonstration against drug raids in the area.

Irish Chief Pleased

LONDON (CP) — The British government's decision to send three more army battalions — about 1,500 men — to Northern Ireland may be followed by a gradual introduction of political reforms, observers here believe.

Commentators said today the additional forces may be intended primarily to calm the fears of many Ulster Protestants who have been demanding more decisive action by Britain to end the bloodshed in the North.

Unless the goodwill of the Protestant majority can be restored, it will be impossible for British Prime Minister Edward Heath and Ulsters Premier Brian Faulkner to introduce any of the reforms sought by Roman Catholics, observers contended.

After a six-hour meeting with Faulkner Thursday, Heath announced that three new battalions will join the 12,000 British troops already stationed in Ulster in an effort to restore peace.

The extra forces will be used particularly to strengthen control of the often-breached border with the Irish Republic to the south and to speed up action against terrorists when information is received from informants.

Heath's move may have been partially intended to demonstrate his confidence in the Ulster leader and to show that Faulkner is prepared to take any action needed in the interests of restoring order.

A communique issued after Thursday's discussions said the British and Ulster leaders plan to hold numerous future meetings in an effort to work out an acceptable peace formula.

Faulkner told reporters later he had been one of the most satisfactory meetings he had ever had with the British government.

In Belfast, British marksmen reported shooting a sniper off a roof but were unable to confirm it because rioters prevented police from reaching him.

The army reported a patrol in Belfast came under fire from a barooka attack. The Rodon Street police station was sprayed with machine-gun fire and a bomb thrown at the station's door, but no one was injured.

Pattern in Sentencing

Judge's Personality Key Influence

TORONTO (CP) — A criminologist who has studied sentences passed by Ontario provincial judges says the judge's own personality, background and attitudes often have more bearing on the sentence pronounced than do the facts of the case.

John Hogarth, 35, an associate professor of law at Osgoode Hall Law School who has written a book on his study, told a news conference Thursday that a judge's sentence can be better understood by knowing the case.

Mr. Hogarth, who holds a PhD and a diploma in criminology from Cambridge University, conducted the study in 1965 while senior research associate at University of Toronto's Centre of Criminology. At that time provincial judges were called magistrates.

"My study should be no surprise to experienced defence counsel or Crown attorneys," he said. "That's why there is so much jockeying for judges going on."

He said the study involved a review of sentences passed during an 18-month period by 71 magistrates who had dealt with more than 700 Criminal Code cases a year.

At that time Ontario magistrates dealt with all persons charged with summary conviction offences and with 94 per cent of those charged with more serious indictable offences.

"I really got the whole life history of each judge," he said. "I got to know 71 judges, their families, their hopes and their concerns about sentencing and related issues."

Mr. Hogarth said he analysed the judges' detailed reasons for sentencing in seven categories of serious crime, and he was able to predict with a high degree of accuracy the sentences in 11 different kinds of crime.

He said a judge's sentences can be predicted from knowledge of his background, his values and primarily, his attitudes. Also important is what the judge thinks others expect of him.

100 Clerks Back at Work

NORTH BAY, Ont. (CP) — About 100 members of the Brotherhood of Railway Clerks returned to work here today, as the first break in a labor dispute which has crippled operations of the Ontario Northland Transportation Commission.

The clerks reported for work at Ontario's Northland Railway's head office but there was no immediate report on whether the return would spread to the other 1,500 employees who booked off sick Tuesday, demanding pension parity with civil servants.

Mayor Merle Dickerson said he met with union leaders and management Thursday, but his efforts were "fruitless."

"They just do not want to talk to each other," he said.

Hire Natives, Industries Told

OTTAWA (CP) — Northern Development Minister Jean Chretien has warned industries operating in the Canadian north to change their attitudes about hiring Eskimos and Indians.

If they continue to make impossible demands before hiring native northerners "we will have to present this problem in terms ... which directly affect business income and profit," the minister said in a major policy speech delivered Wednesday night at Montebello, Que.

"This could include the imposition of specific northern employment quotas," said Mr. Chretien in his remarks to the Air Industries Association of Canada.

High unemployment among Eskimos and Indians is the most pressing problem in the Northwest Territories and the Yukon.

Despite the growth of oil and mining exploration, few jobs were created for the native northerners. Nor had the growth of territorial government departments opened up new job opportunities for them.

Farm Bill Gets Tuesday Deadline

OTTAWA (CP) — The stormy career of the Prairie farm income stabilization bill appears to be nearing its end, with survival depending on a change of heart by either the government or opposition parties.

Thursday, Liberal House Leader Allan MacEachen set Tuesday as the deadline for a solution to the Commons deadlock if opposition parties do not agree to pass the bill next week, the government will drop it.

Fourteen proposed amendments remain to be debated before the Commons can give final approval to the bill. That could take several weeks at the rate the Commons was moving before the government ultimatum.

Party house leaders met on the bill Thursday afternoon, but no agreement was reached. They were to meet again after consulting their respective parties.

Decision Later On Hydrofoil

TORONTO (CP) — Defence Minister Donald Macdonald said Thursday the federal government will make a final decision sometime this month on whether to continue development of a hydrofoil craft for the Canadian navy.

In an interview following an address to the Empire Club he said prospects for sale of a Canadian-developed hydrofoil craft to foreign governments "are not very bright."

The government already has spent $32 million on the development of the Bras d'Or.

Record 383 Candidates Seeking Seats in Oct. 21 Election

TORONTO (CP) — A total of 223 years of experience in governing is missing from the ranks of Ontario's Progressive Conservative party as it faces its 28th general election campaign coming to power 28 years ago.

Sixteen Tories who held seats at dissolution of the 28th legislature have decided not to seek re-election or lost. They include nine present or former cabinet ministers, led by retired premier John Robarts.

A look at the official list of 383 candidates for the 117 available seats also shows that four Liberals and two members of the New Democratic Party will not be running again.

All three major parties have nominated full slates and the list also includes five members of the Social Credit party, five Communists and 22 independents.

The record number of candidates compares with a total of 368 candidates who contested the 1967 provincial election.

Nominations closed at 2 p.m. Thursday—23 days, 21 hours and five minutes after Premier William Davis called the election.

The nominations list also shows that the estimated 4.4 million voters will have the largest number of women candidates ever to choose from. Twenty women are running including eight New Democrats, six Conservatives, four Liberals, one Social Creditor and one Communist.

Standings at dissolution were — Conservatives 68, Liberals 27, NDP 21, independent one.

Mr. Davis put his own stamp on the party after he became premier March 17 with a wholesale cabinet reshuffle, leaving only three ministers in the same posts they had held under Mr. Robarts.

Some ministers already had let it be known they would not seek re-election and did not appear in the Davis cabinet. They included George Gomme, 59, minister of highways; Irwin Haskett, 68, minister of transport, and Stanley Randall, 63, minister of trade and development.

Also leaving politics are John Simonett, 60, who gave up the public works portfolio last year to become vice-chairman of the Ontario Northland Railway Commission; and Arthur Wishart, 68, minister of financial affairs and former attorney-general. Mr. Wishart was the only one of these ministers to stay in the Davis cabinet.

Also missing from the Tory ranks will be Fred Cass, 58, year-old Speaker of the house since 1967 and a cabinet member before that; Ray Connell, 54, who left the public works portfolio for health reasons in 1969; and Leslie Rowntree, 57, who gave up the financial affairs portfolio in 1970 and was appointed chairman of the Ontario Science Centre.

Mr. Robarts, announcing his retirement in December, said it was time for new blood. He has been 20 years on the government benches. Mr. Connell also was a 20-year-man, as was back-bencher Norris Whitney, 63, who will not run again in Prince Edward-Lennox.

Mr. Cass had spent 16 years in government and Mrs. Rowntree, 15. Twelve-year men included Mr. Simonett, Mr. Gomme and Mr. Haskett. Four of the seven retiring backbenchers had spent 16 years in the house.

Of the four Liberals who are not running again, Elmer Sopha will be missed most by his colleagues. The 47-year-old lawyer represented Sudbury for 12 years and was a noted flea in the government ear. Now, he wants to concentrate on his law practice.

The man who caused the Liberals one of their more embarrassing moments is missing from the nominations list. He is Ron Knight, 29, who crossed the floor in 1969 to sit as an Independent Liberal for Port Arthur because he was dissatisfied with party policy.

Of the two NDPers not seeking re-election, a big loss is Hugh Peacock, the 34-year-old former trade unionist who became frustrated with the slowness of legislative procedure. He represented Windsor West.

For a mixed bag of candidates, St. Andrew-St. Patrick takes the prize with representatives of the Tory, Liberal, NDP, Social Credit and Communist parties, plus one independent.

One last tid-bit from the statistics concerns parabilities. There were 16 seats won in 1967 with pluralities of fewer than 500 votes. Eight of them were Liberal, four Tory and four NDP.

Four men came in with pluralities of less than 100 votes: Liberal James Breithaupt in Kitchener (52), Liberal T. Patrick Reid in Rainy River (61), Liberal Vernon Singer in Downsview (71) and Tory Jules Morin in Ottawa East (125).

An all-time squeaker: Tory Henry Montgomery edged out Liberal F. Jones in Leeds North in 1883 by one vote. It was 837 to 836.

One of Five Afternoon Accidents in Belleville Yesterday

Driver of this car, Diane Helen Robertson, 17, of Carrying Place, made a regular turn onto Bridge Street yesterday afternoon when the door of her car flew open. While attempting to close it, she swerved into a parked car, up the bank and came to a stop against a parking meter.

No injuries were sustained, but damage was estimated at $450.

At 4.44 p.m., cyclist Jeffrey Vanrcewyk, 11, of 409 Dundas St. W., apparently swerved into the side of a car being driven by 70-year-old William F. Bezore of 185½ Victoria Ave. The boy was taken from the accident scene on Dundas Street, to Belleville General Hospital where he is recovering from lacerations to his head and left leg.

Most expensive accident, damage estimated at $900, occurred on Suicide Corner, a portion of Cannifton Road. Motorists William John McKay, 31, of 3 Strachan Street, and Mrs. Gayle H. Lobs, 26, of 60 Bridge St. W., collided at 4.29 p.m. No injuries were sustained.

One driver who stopped at the corner of Victoria Avenue and McDonald Avenue, also at 4.29 p.m., was in collision with a second vehicle. Damage here was estimated at $250.

Drivers of the cars were George Grant Armstrong, 41, of RR2, Trenton and Roy Kenneth Jeffrey, 41, of 123 Dufferin.

The final accident in this series occurred at the corner of Church and Victoria. A car driver by Mrs. Barbara A. Bodnaryk, 31, of 21 Symington Avenue, collided with a car operated by June C. Lyons, 31, of 309A Albert Street.

This accident was also without injuries. Damage was estimated at $185.

Board Argues Over Consultants

Several members of Quinte Planning Board have had second thoughts on the question of hiring a consulting firm to prepare an official plan and accompanying zoning bylaws for the city of Belleville.

This decision, approved at their September meeting, replaced an earlier recommendation made by Dr. J. Russell Scott, that a firm deals with the entire nine-month planning preliminary requirements.

At their October meeting last night, board members Donald Rodgers of Stirling predicted a "good bid battle" could be in the offing because members seem to want one consultant for each municipality. "How many consultants can this board afford to hire? Are we going to be paying $50,000 or $300,000 for them?"

Thurlow township councillor Reeve Borden Forsyth said he couldn't see anything wrong with hiring different consultants. It was his contention that although Belleville's planning problems were urgent, the problems of other municipalities have as precarious a nature as that of the city.

"This planning is urgent, and I don't think we should work with one consultant," he said.

Mr. Rodgers envisioned a hodge-podge of consultants attempting to fit future growth of the Quinte district together in much the same manner as a jigsaw puzzle.

"I could just visualize the conflict if a group of consultants were hired for Belleville, Sidney, Thurlow and other municipalities.

"I think you'd have a pretty big mess," he charged.

One of the biggest problems concerning board members is the fact that some of the municipalities have official plans either completed and waiting for approval, or in the final drafting stages. Many feel residents who might approve plans for their own districts, would object to plans for other areas.

Bert Kenny, planning director, said "much of the problem means distilling information already on hand."

It was at this point that Murray Township councillor W. R. Ellis related reports that have come to him, outlining a three - year hiatus in obtaining a complete plan for the city.

Mr. Kenny emphatically denied these allegations, stating documents could be tabled from between six to eight months, with preparation of accompanying bylaws to follow. He said the whole job might be done within one year.

Belleville Mayor F. Russell Scott said it was because the possibility of such holdups that he wished his original idea to "hire consultants for the whole area and deal with Belleville as a priority" could have gone through in September.

Mr. Kenny asserted board members have been told of a team of consultants for Belleville did not mean that plans for other municipalities would have to come to a standstill.

He said, "In fact, we might endorse their terms of reference" and once the other plans are completed, one official plan for all nine municipalities would emerge from the hodge-podge.

Reeve Knight, a member for Sidney, protested the move to previous public hearings held in Belleville, Sidney and Thurlow township.

"What's to prevent the ratepayers from turning out? Every meeting they had, they wanted change," he reminded board members.

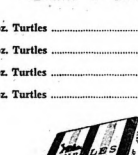
One representative voiced general impressions that have emerged since the board was first formed when he said each municipality is afraid they will suffer, both residentially and industrially, shower any zoning restrictions be passed for neighboring communities.

During several public hearings held in Belleville to discuss the residential chapter of the city's official plan, rural representatives and city dwellers argued the importance each municipality should play.

On July 29, one Belleville resident, David Cretney, ran into words a common example of the independent attitudes which have overshadowed many Quinte Planning Board discussions. "It is beyond human comprehension why the people of Thurlow and Sidney could hold up jurisdiction of a plan in the works for, what is it, five years," he said of the residential chapter.

This situation will probably exist every time the board meets. It's the nature of a board such as this." Mr. Kenny said of the problem of board members remaining at loggerheads on so many issues.

Of chief importance to city dwellers has been the rezoning of land to enable developers to construct apartment complexes. Residential owners have vehemently demanded halting of the invasion of apartments into their neighborhoods.



Developers and realtors have been flooding the planning board with their recommendations to permit construction of apartment complexes.

One of the largest plans surveyed has been forwarded to Canada Mortgage and Housing Corporation by developers of the Quinte Mall. This company proposes rezoning of a 30-acre piece of land adjacent to the plaza, to permit plaza expansion and a high-rise development.

The planning board, which refers these recommendations to its staff, will also receive a brief on the residential section of the city plan from the Belleville Real Estate Board and the Quinte Home Builders' Association.

And the board representatives were not lacking in their letters. Two groups are interested in zoning southern portions of Sidney Township. One wants high property on Aiken Road, wants zoning for commercial, industrial and residential uses. The second wants broken frontage on the first concession along Quinte Shoreline, included in the proposed urban development area.

Hastings Riding A Real Challenge for Returning Officer

By HARRY MULHALL
Staff Reporter

ACTINOLITE — So far, things at times seem so quiet for a provincial election you can almost hear an autumn leaf fall.

Except, of course, for people behind the scenes. People like Lloyd Price who, as district returning officer has the task of superintending the entire electoral process in the riding of Hastings. Particularly Lloyd Price.

The state of autumn leaves in his riding etches the dimensions of his task.

In its northern reaches, the bushlands already are blazoned with the scarlet, yellow and mulberry hues that betoken a typical fall. At its southern extremity, green woodlands are just starting to tinge.

For the constituency of Hastings spans upward 120 miles from the Bay of Quinte shore almost to within-hailing distance of Algonquin Park. In between it embraces 24 townships 30 miles wide.

It may not be the largest riding in Ontario — but it's certainly the lengthiest along the province's Lake Ontario shoreline.

"It's perhaps the biggest in southern Ontario," concedes Mr. Price whose command post is the Elzevir - Grimsthorpe township hall where, where he normally is on call as municipal clerk. "So it gives you a tremendous area to look after and you have certain difficulties to overcome — especially in communications."

Now with election day just two weeks away, he figures he has a grip on all such problems — but not before learning sometimes from experience, even for a man who knows Hastings intimately. For instance, it wasn't until after the formal election writs had been issued and he summoned poll officials to a meeting that he discovered how long it can take a letter to reach the far northeast end of the county. Because of differing post office jurisdictions, his summons took four days to arrive at its destination!

The plethora of paper work and instructithes that must be passed along from a DROs office to local officials is an awesome labor. In Hastings, the normal complications are compounded by geography.

Up to the mid-1960s the area was equally divided into two ridings — East and West Hastings. Redistribution carved out the populous Belleville and Trenton centres and their burgeoning urban satellite, Sidney township into the new riding of Quinte. About 2,600 lightly populated square miles of Hastings County remained, to be designated the constituency of Hastings — a colorful and king size study in contrasts. It combines rolling farmlands with a splendor of with fair-sized towns and villages; a diversity of pursuits from tourism to timber cutting — even trapping — to mining and milking.

Its 107 polls vary in registrations from 500 down to 15 names.

Wiring such a widespread area for a general election process could be an onerous chore.

"But generally speaking, our communications were pretty good," says Mr. Price.

The telephone played a prominent part in linking local poll officials to the central office here. Distribution of necessary documents and literature was speeded by having the officials meet Mr. Price at a central rendezvous.

"It's a slow procedure to deliver all your materials because you have so many points to call and so many miles to travel."

Getting around the individual polls — particularly in far northern townships off the back roads — would have made it an impossibility to meet deadlines.

With so much backroad driving the task could "take weeks to do that," and centralizing system was necessary.

On the local level such challenges of communication also were well met by the enumerators — the people in at the beginning of the entire process, whose door-to-door canvassing of their neighborhoods compiles the number of eligible voters and thus evolves the voting lists for each election.

But neighborhood takes on a different connotation for some Hastings canvassers. Where the population is sparse, one township could make up an entire polling subdivision.

"Some enumerators would have to travel well over 100 miles to do their enumerating — which is quite a lot of driving, and time consuming.

"Most of them have other work to do. It's a bit of a problem to find people with enough free time to do the job," says Mr. Price.

As a result, about 25 per cent of the enumerating was done by women.

This election something else was added — enumerators could be appointed by the opposition political party to accompany the government appointees.

In an area which has been — in the majority — unabashedly Conservative since the days of settlement and which takes its election-time politics seriously, some enumerators were curious as to who their companion canvassers might be, admits Mr. Price. But again there were no problems.

The number of eligible voters also is up — 72,000 from 18,407 in the 1967 election, an increase of roughly 10 per cent. Main reasons for this are the extension of the franchise to 18-year-olds and the fact the county is being discovered as an ideal retirement haven by elderly one-time big-city inhabitants.

The enumerators — in rural areas they're paid $25 and 11 cents a name — have three days to finish the canvass and then must draft their lists in a "legible" fashion. The obvious answer to this stipulation is typewritten sheets. Typewriters were not available to all so some had the "painstaking job" of copying out each name in block letters, said Mr. Price. That done, some had to drive distances up to 100 miles to present him with the documents which he and a small staff had to check and assemble for printing — at local plants through out the riding — into the final product — the voters' lists.

The population spread also gives rise to some anomalies — which the DRO is empowered to resolve at his own discretion. For instance:

Most polling boundaries follow municipal patterns, long familiar to local inhabitants. Yet in one Hastings township there is only one permanent resident. In a municipal election this would mean a 30-mile drive to cast a ballot. To facilitate her, Mr. Price has expanding the polling boundary in the neighboring township so she need only travel about three miles Oct. 21. The same procedure has eased the voting process for a family which is the only inhabitants in the corner of another township.

"Your try to use a little commonsense in those cases and make it easier for the voters and easier for the enumerators — easier for everyone concerned. But there are only a few instances where you can do that," says Mr. Price.

Despite the difficulties in reaching the polls compared to the ease with which their urbanized fellow citizens may ballot, voters in Hastings traditionally are enthusiastic responders on election day.

For instance, Mr. Price points out close to 70 per cent of 18,500 eligible voters turned out in the 1967 provincial contest.

This year the vote may even be higher because of the proxy vote which may permit students and servicemen to vote away from home.

"I think it's going to increase the percentage some," says the DRO. "We hope so. We like to see as many people as possible voice their opinion when there's an election. That's why we operate as a democracy. It must be awfully disappointing to have an election and only get 25 or 30 per cent out."

Mankind Bleeds

So the demented hoodlums of Ulster are still bent on death and destruction and Prime Minister Faulkner is off to London again for emergency talks amid fears that the country, in his words, is "bleeding to death."

And at a scarcely less crazed level of behavior, right here in our own midst, vandals have hit four public schools; and this while city police are finding it necessary to patrol the streets in pairs.

But have times really changed? Back in 1848 Vienna was torn by revolution, in one of many rebellions that occurred in the Austrian capital with the declaration of war by the emperor against Hungary. Bloodshed and destruction were common and among those killed was war minister Count von Latour.

A year ago Canadians had a brief encounter with the trappings of revolt and there is no guarantee that we have seen the end of it.

"It is when you hurt someone that you may get some action," former CBC newsman Stanley Burke told a Kingston audience the other day. In such fashion, he said, could individuals exert pressure internationally.

Mr. Burke, in his characteristically blunt fashion, is right of course. Look at history as well as contemporary happenings, and the truth of his words strike home.

But where does peaceful democratic action, in Parliament, through the media, or by public demonstrations in the streets, end, and anarchy begin?

Hurting for some — for the uneducated, the uncivilized — has become not so much an accepted political force as a relief from the boredom and futility of their lives. If horse racing is the sport of kings, turning the streets into battlegrounds is that of the lower orders of society.

There comes to mind Charles Darwin's impression of the Indians of Tierra del Fuego, when he sailed to that remote region as naturalist aboard the hydrographic survey vessel H.M.S. Beagle. Darwin saw these people as "miserable, degraded savages." From among them the Beagle's captain took three: York Minister, described in a National Geographic article on the voyage as "a large and somewhat surly member of the Alacaluf tribe, aged 28, and two young Yahgans, likable Jemmy Button, from Navarino Island ,16, and Fuegia Basket, a bright, pert little miss, 11 years old." They were brought to England and taught English and the rudiments of Christianity and civilization, as well as such practical subjects as gardening and carpentry. It was hoped, said veteran mariner Alan Villiers in The Geographic article, that all three might on their return make a beginning toward a better life for their fellow Indians. It was not to be; returning on a subsequent voyage Darwin found Jemmy had reverted to a "thin, haggard savage . . . who later led a massacre of local missionaries. York and young Fuegia, at this stage married took to thievery, and years later York was killed in revenge for a murder he had committed. . . .

Have we progressed then at all as human beings? Since the events of that time we have gone through a series of torments culminating in two world wars and the current Vietnam affair. During this period the world has witnessed every degree of depravity of which man is capable — for freedom, it is said, but fundamentally it boils down to man's pride, prestige, the need to save face and from that it is only a step to the primitive bloodletting that has plagued man since his beginnings.

• • •

Years after his voyage, in 1871, Darwin wrote these words, in his Descent of Man: "The main conclusion . . . namely, that man is descended from some lowly organized form, will, I regret to think, be highly distasteful to many.

But there can hardly be a doubt that we are descended from barbarians.

"Man may be excused," the narrative continues, "for feeling some pride at having risen, though not through his own exertions, to the very summit of the organic scale . . . We must, however, acknowledge, as it seems to me, that man with all his noble qualities . . . with his god-like intellect . . . man still bears in his bodily frame the indelible stamp of his lowly origin."

Thanksgiving is almost upon us again, and, yes, we have a great deal to be thankful for in this country, but it is a chastening thought that our so-called civilization is covered by such a thin veneer, as Darwin realized, and as we all must recognize right now as another year draws to a close.

20th Century Din Threatens Hearing of Population

By KEN PRITCHARD
NEW YORK (CP) — Two news reports which appear to have emerged while notice hasn't cate man may lose some of his senses sooner than he thinks.

Both reports were from Washington, D.C.

One said that unless something is done about noise pollution, those who dwell in the noisiest areas may be deaf by the end of the century.

The other foresees the eventual doom of the well-equipped kitchen, with human existing on cold food, such as peanut-butter-and-jelly sandwiches with added vitamins.

Evolution does bring changes, of course. Man's sense of smell is said to have deteriorated since the time he was a nomad hunter. The slide probably started when monolithic man domesticated a dog, sometime before 7000 BC,and acquired a helper whose nose was keener than his own.

Now some humans are threatened with total loss of hearing because of their man-made environment.

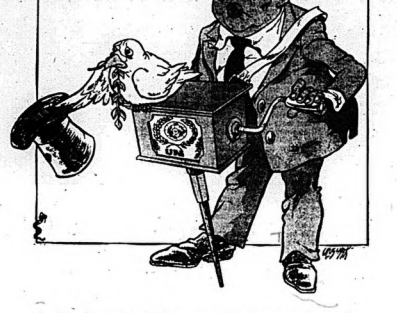
Alvin F. Meyer, acting director of the office of noise abatement and control in the U.S. Environmental Protection Agency, said this in a speech about urban noise:

"The over-all loudness of environmental noise has been doubling every 10 years in pace with social and industrial growth, and, if allowed to continue unchecked, the cost of alleviating it in the future may be insurmountable. In the case of cities where, according to some estimates, noise levels may be rising one decibel each year, some observers fear that maybe (given such a continued rate of increase) people who dwell in the noisiest sections will be deaf in the year 2000."

The potential victims can't say they haven't been warned.

The other prediction, about man's future diet, was made by another expert, in a speech to the American Chemical Society. It didn't mention taste buds. It was more in the nature of a pep talk about how to relieve the housewife of time-consuming meal-preparation duties, reduce the complexity of putting farm products into urban stomachs and cut the cost of building houses—ovens and several other appliances would be eliminated.

The gourmet, the lover of thick, juicy steaks, Thanksgiving turkey, piping-hot vegetables and plum pudding could only shudder.



Dr. George G. Graham, a professor of human nutrition at Johns Hopkins Medical Institutions in Baltimore, Md., said in this Washington speech that eventually a complete meal may consist of a simple "hand-food. A peanut-butter-and-jelly sandwich, for example, could be made of "fortified bread, with vitamin C added to the jelly, and with vitamins A and D added to the peanut butter."

"I could give these to a child three times a day, along with three Cokes, and he'll be just as well nourished as he would be with the 'three square' foods containing the traditional four basics of meat, fish and eggs; dairy products; cereals; and vegetables and fruits."

The crowning blow was his later declaration that "there's absolutely no nutritional value to a hot meal of itself—heat is not a nutrient."

It's cold comfort, but Dr. Graham did say that considerably more research is needed before such unrefined eating habits become practical for all of us.

Now we're left to wonder how many centuries will fly before man's taste buds become redundant.

A definite upturn in the consumption of water in the municipality is seen in the fact that in 1940 the per capita figure was 134 gallons and 159 gallons in 1941. Thirty-six per cent of the water pumped is used for commercial and industrial purposes and of this amount over two-thirds is used by the CNR and seven other large consumers. The domestic consumption for 1940 is estimated at 1,180,000 gallons per day. The revenue of the system reached a peak of $66,461 in 1931, declined to a low of $57,220 in 1935 and has increased steadily since that time.

Polluted Moira

Bellevillian in U. S. Deplores River Prospect

Editor,
The Intelligencer.

I am a former citizen of Belleville. I went back this summer to visit and while I was there, a friend and I decided to go for a walk along the river.

As we walked along the bank, I noticed dead fish and garbage floating on the water. This was a great disappointment to me. I knew the water was polluted before, but it was never that bad.

As we walked further on, we noticed some children catching fish, spraying them with insecticide and throwing these fish back into the water. This is a sure form of pollution.

Here in Colorado, we have a stiff fine for littering and even pollution. Sure, our water here is polluted, but not to the extent of dead fish and garbage floating on it.

Perhaps if you have a fine, politicize it and most important, enforce it; this problem will lessen in time.

Please try something. I have lived in Belleville almost all my life and love it very much. I am sure other people feel the same way as I do, so please don't let it looks be ruined like this.

THERESA HENRY,
Colorado Springs, Colorado.

EDITOR'S NOTE: Attention was drawn to this subject recently in our editorial columns to the dirty slick on the Moira's surface near the Dundas Street bridge, and to the assorted junk along the banks and again, lying on the surface of the river. It is a sight for the proverbial sore eyes and we are wondering if the city could not send some of its Works Department people out in a boat to clean up the worst of it. Or what about the responsibility of the Moira River Conservation Authority in this matter?

Plastic Product Spells End For Hickory Lacrosse Plant

Cornwall Standard - Freeholder

In spite of an optimistic outlook only a couple of years ago, and a government grant to restore operations after a fire, it looks like the lacrosse stick factory on Cornwall Island will have to close.

It will be regrettable if this ancient and honorable handicraft of the Indian people should disappear because a plastic product replaces the traditional hickory stick. But it does look as though this is exactly what will happen.

For the time being, the manufacturing of lacrosse sticks will probably survive as a form of home industry, operating on a small scale for the Canadian market. But the American market, by far the largest sticks appears to be closed to heavy competition and distribution difficulties.

Maybe the real problem is the increasing scarcity of suitable hickory wood; maybe a distribution agreement that is not working out, according to reports, is the root of the evil.

Unfortunately there doesn't appear to be much that can be done from this end. The company is apparently unable to sell abroad and unable to support itself by the Canadian market. To carry on it would probably have to fight fire with fire by introducing its own version of plastic sticks. It might have had an excellent opportunity to do this when its market demand was high and its connections good. But it looks as though this possibility has been passed up until too late.

Big Not Necessarily Best

Future of Small Hospitals at Stake

Brockville Recorder and Times

The federal government's task force recommendation that would disband small hospitals within an hour and a half's travelling time of a big hospital has not met with open acceptance in Ontario. Indeed the Ontario Hospital Association has been forced to battle against it. In this district, for instance, it could mean the disappearance of local hospitals in such places as Kemptville and Winchester and perhaps even extend to the smaller of two hospitals in communities such as Brockville and Smiths Falls. We feel the recommendation should be fought with vigour and vigor because the bigger a hospital the more impersonal it becomes.

Willett Hospital in Paris, Ontario, has already filed a request with OHA to fight the proposal. Most small hospitals pride themselves on patients, civil staff into its own community where genuine personal contact is mutual. The plain humanity of the place, its efficiency and long-standing staff traditions that breed loyalty is patient as a friend is something rare in the large hospital.

The task force plan would add to the figures of an already big hospital with the usual problems of crowding, building expansion and administrative pyramiding. The Ontario school amalgamations were a financially frightening example of that).

And the foolishness would be repeated wherever the bureaucrats could indulge in empire building by wiping out good small hospitals.

Patients requiring the specialized services only the big hospitals can provide can go to the big hospitals, as they do now.

But there is no sense in tearing down useful community institutions — and hitting the public with needless expense — to satisfy the mistaken assumption that Big is Best. Unless a small hospital is proved incompetent, it should be left along.

BBC London Letter

You need six girls, one man, one small car, 12 jellies on plates and various obstacles. Each of the girls takes two jellies from a table and scrambles into the car, which driven over a difficult obstacle course, at the end of which the jellies (or what is left of them) are replaced on the table. The team delivering the greatest number of intact jellies wins.

Not the sort of thing you would expect to arouse intense International rivalry, but it does. For these are the rules for one of the games in 'It's a Knockout', one of the craziest and most popular programs on BBC Television and one of a new European link-up called 'Jeux sans Frontieres' (Games without Frontiers).

It all began back in the 50s, when BBC producer Barney Colehan devised a series of contests called 'Top Town', in which towns in Britain competed in way - out games This inspired Eurovision to launch 'Intervilles' on the French viewing public in 1962. And from this evolved 'Jeux sans Frontieres', which pulls in millions of viewers in Britain, West Germany, Italy, Belgium, Switzerland and Holland.

Every summer, teams from these countries in the Eurovision network compete in games of strength, skill and just plain daftness, which give viewers to their sets and give rise to fierce interown and inter-country rivalry. Very friendly rivalry too, for teams visit each other's countries and get to know what makes the other man laugh.

And now Russia, the USA and Australia have shown interest and Barney Colehan does not discount the possibility that 'It's a Knockout' may go intercontinental. The series has sparked off many local 'It's a Knockout' events in the countries taking part, quite apart from the television shows. The BBC even had a letter from Uganda asking advice on how to stage the games at a school there.

After all, it cuts foreign affairs down to size when nations prestige can depend on which country can smash up a piano and get the pieces through a hole in a wall in the shortest time.

Public School Students Visit The Sandbanks

Editor,
The Intelligencer.

On Sept. 29, our class travelled by bus to Sandbanks Provincial Park. All 100 of us were filled with excitement.

All we peered downward there sat the vicious-looking bulldozer; its jaws opened wide as it carefully lochted its way over to the sand, then quickly gulped it.

Across the way we noticed the foundation of the old brick plant.

I hope the government will try to prevent removal of sand from these dunes. To me the Sandbanks are unique.

Election P. R. Men Under Scrutiny

By DON O'HEARN
From The Intelligencer's Queen's Park Bureau.

There is an unusual dissension building up in the camp of Premier Davis.

The old pros around the premier, the veteran politicians who have been around long enough to have gone through the decisions and votes of the past, are getting very fed up with the new dealers who are running the campaign.

The pros, who mostly are concentrated at Queen's Park, feel that the new boys, mainly advertising and public relations men whose political experience has been confined to such leadership contests, are overselling the premier.

The pros dislike the constant harassment of the public on radio and television, particularly radio, is wrong and could have a strong kickback.

As one of the vets said, "give them another million dollars and they'll manage to beat him."

They believe a false and poor image is being built around Davis. "Here is one of the most naturally likeable guys in the world and they are presenting a slick used salesman," was an expression on this.

And they are disturbed that Davis has apparently been going along and not trying to exercise any control.

The discussions don't have any real fear of losing the election. They believe Davis is strong enough to make it, whatever mistakes his organization may make. But there have been some indications apparently that the premier himself is a bit concerned and may order some changes.

But winning could have its problems too.

"They will believe they did it," one man said, "and then what are you going to be able to do with them."

That television "debate?"

It's all right, the premiers isn't in as weak hands as it might appear.

Really the three men who aspire to lead it aren't all that bad.

They do have energy. They do have fire. They do have some brains.

To one who knows the Ontario party leaders, looking at them on this television spectacular was like watching three riverboat gamblers trapped at a Mississippi showboat.

Those men who were sitting stiffly, or too easily and so "properly" dressed weren't the Bill Davis, Bob Nixon and Stephen Lewis people I should know.

Perhaps even their mothers wouldn't have known them.

These are men that they came across as fluent dummies.

Once again to me, the only way you could get a worthwhile television debate would be to let the men get at each other.

Lewis Charges Tories Rattled and in Disarray

TORONTO (CP) — New Democrat Stephen Lewis said Thursday night the Conservative campaign for the Oct. 21 Ontario election has gone sour and the Tories are bickering among themselves about how it happened.

The NDP leader said in a speech to the Metropolitan Toronto Labor Council that private letters are being written to corporate and professional people soliciting more funds for the Conservative party.

"Our opponents are frankly rattled," Mr. Lewis said.

"Within the Tory camp there is even now a debate raging about what they've done; how it is, they ask themselves, that the throngs don't come to Premier William Davis . . . that people are not excited by the Tory advertising onslaught, that after 28 years in government the ancient machine of yore, the Leslie Frost, John Roberts machine is no longer working in contemporary times."

He said that among Tory strategists "there exists considerable tension at this very moment as they try to decide what went wrong, and how they can retrieve it for the next 10 days to two weeks."

Mr. Lewis said that he now believes "that the Tories cannot again form the majority in Ontario" and that the NDP is going to make a dramatic breakthrough in the province.

The NDP leader challenged Premier Davis to produce proposals to cope with what he described as an economic crisis in Ontario.

Mr. Lewis produced a letter he said was sent to Ontario lawyers by Colin Brown, a London, Ont., businessman, urging them to contribute again to either the Tory or Liberal campaign.

Parts of the letter, read by Mr. Lewis, warned lawyers that "you will be forsaking free enterprise if you do not match the union's contribution to the NDP".

The letter also said there is a "distinct possibility" that the NDP would win the provincial election.

Mr. Lewis said the election is the turning point for Ontario and for Canada.

"The decision is whether we want to be part of a totally integrated, continental economy with the decisions imposed from outside, or whether we want to make a strike for economic independence!"

He said passage Wednesday by the United States House of Representatives of a bill calling for a seven-per-cent tax credit on the purchase of machinery in the U.S. was an incentive to Americans to stop purchasing in Canada.

"And isn't that in fact the ultimate blow to a branch plant economy?" he asked the meeting.

He said only 30 of the 435 voting members of the U.S. house were present for the passage of the reform package "on a vote with which the destiny of Canada is intimately linked."

Mr. Lewis said Canada's branch-plant tie to the U.S. is a "mercantile relationship where the parent company dictates the terms of the agreement."

Earlier, to a noon-hour gathering at downtown Trinity Square, Mr. Lewis said a mythology has grown up around the dependence of Canada on foreign investment. But only six per cent of the total new money invested in Canada comes from foreign sources. The rest is generated in Canada.

He also rejected a suggestion that the U.S. would retaliate against any policy to restrict foreign investment in Canada, calling it far-fetched.

Mr. Lewis was to resume campaigning today in Hamilton.

Record High Reading

Nixon Wants Reasons for Pollution Made Public

SUDBURY, Ont. (CP) — Liberal Leader Robert Nixon called Thursday for full disclosure of pollution information by industry and government.

After flying over the smokestacks, slag heaps and craters of the Sudbury Basin, he told reporters covering his Oct. 21 Ontario election campaign:

"Full information must be made public—Not just the levels of pollution, but just what the reasons are . . .

He also called for a better pollution monitoring system for the Sudbury area. There now is one government air management branch station, but at least three more are needed, he said.

"When the wind blows in the right direction it cuts the pollution reading down to zero or two . . . It is probably always 69 or 70 depending on just what part of the city you are in."

Sudbury hit a pollution reading of 70 Tuesday, a record for the province. The government can force industry to cut back emissions when a pollution reading reaches 32. A reading over 100 is considered serious.

The Liberal leader said a sulphur-recovery program had been "on the books" for the International Nickel Co. Ltd. here, but the company wrote it off as too costly.

"If they say they can't afford it, the first thing they should do is justify that statement," he said, adding that Inco had a $200-million profit last year, but has experienced a recession this year.

Mr. Nixon later told a news conference that he didn't think the company's decision to withdraw from the sulphur recovery program "is the kind of decision that can be taken unilaterally by the president of the company."

There are "many indicators" that the government should order Inco to continue the sulphur recovery program, "and we would order it to and they would have opportunity to justify why they cannot do it."

He said the government is withholding pollution information from the public, but "they're not being asked to release data that would affect Inco's competitive position."

Asked what a Liberal government would do, he said "it is easy to say we will be tough," but a new approach is needed.

He said industry and government should publish all information on pollution and proceed with a sulphur-recovery program rather than closing down polluters.

"We're committed to maintaining the industry and expanding job opportunities," he said.

The Liberal leader later spoke to 200 Laurentian University students and told them the government was guilty of poor administration of its $30 million student loan fund.

Mr. Nixon said the fund was large enough "if it is directed to the right places."

Questioned on nationalization of certain industries as advocated by the NDP, he said NDP Leader Stephen Lewis "is becoming the nice guy of Canadian socialism."

"He's losing his nerve and moving more toward the middle of the road, but there is no

Tranquillizers, Airlift Save Problem Polar Bears

WINNIPEG (CP) — Problem polar bears at Manitoba's northern port of Churchill may get a stay of execution thanks to tranquillizers and an airlift.

Plans are being completed by a private animal conservation group that could save 30 of the bears from the game warden's gun.

Churchill, on the shores of Hudson Bay, has an annual polar bear problem. Each year the bears migrate north to spend winter hunting on the bay ice.

"They just stack up around Churchill every fall, waiting for the ice," explained Manitoba government biologist Jack Howard in a Winnipeg interview.

There are an estimated 600 polar bears—considered an endangered species by conservationists elsewhere in the Churchill area.

The bears pose a danger to the community when they forage for food. Two years ago a young man was killed by a polar bear at the townsite and last fall a young boy on his way to Sunday school was knocked down by a bear as it walked through the town's streets.

"Every year we have had this problem of keeping bears and people apart," said Mr. Howard, "and with live trapping it was getting to be a pretty expensive business."

He said that this year it appeared the government would have to kill about 30 of the "problem bears" which ventured beyond the garbage dump into the town.

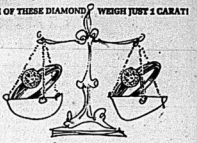
Brian Davies, of Fredericton, N.B., executive director of the International Fund for Animal Welfare, has volunteered money to airlift the bears away from the townsite to more isolated surroundings.

Mr. Howard said the bears would be tranquillized and then transported by commercial aircraft to an area just inside the Ontario border to the southeast.

The project has our blessing, although I don't think it is particularly practical," he said.

The aircraft apparently can take only two bears at a time, and the estimated cost for one flight is $800.

Although dates are tentative, the project will likely get under way about mid-November.



The polar bear is listed in the "red book" of conservation, meaning the species is threatened with extinction in many parts of the world.

"Fortunately or unfortunately, depending on your point of view, Manitoba doesn't have this problem," said Mr. Howard.

He said there was a major denning area for the shaggy white beasts just south of Churchill and about 100 young cubs were raised each year.

Mr. Howard said government conservation officers would likely do the live trapping and tranquillizing and the conservation group would

Monumental Task In Checking Food

WASHINGTON (AP) — The day when a sharp eye and a sensitive nose were a food shopper's best friends have given way to a flash-frozen, plastic wrapped age requiring a chemist or microbiologist to spot tainted food.

The U.S. government is straining to keep up.

The floating hospital vessel in this relatively small plant accidentally operated at 16 degrees below zero for refrigerated food for 10 days, one man died, his wife was sickened and federal officials had to destroy 600 a million cans of food bearing 30 different labels.

Problems arising from technological developments on the processors' lines have been matched by new techniques down on the farm which have ushered in a new array of insecticide but dangerous contaminants: DDT, hormones, antibiotics, mercury, lead.

Housewives could once detect spoilage for themselves. Now preservatives and coloring can mask odor and color. Detecting invisible, tasteless contaminants is something government has to do for consumers because they cannot do it themselves," said an FDA consumer special ist.

It is a monumental problem. The nation's food industry runs up retail sales of $125 billion a year.

Guarding against dangerous red meat and poultry alone requires U.S. Agriculture department inspectors to cover 4,181 plants.

Last June the department began continuous inspection of operations at 142 firms which break eggs for resale as frozen or for use in processed foods. The department has 172 inspectors for the job. Next year inspectors will check plants which pack eggs in the shell.

Induction Service Held At Wellington

Approximately 180 parishioners and friends attended the induction service of Rev. David Hawkins as rector of the Anglican Parish of Wellington and Consecon. The event was held last Wednesday evening at St. Andrew's Church, Wellington.

Mr. Hawkins was the former assistant curate at Christ Anglican Church in Belleville.

Rev. Peter Teel, rector of St. Thomas' Anglican Church, Belleville preached an informative and thought-provoking sermon on the many possible roles of a clergyman. He pointed out that a clergyman and congregation are not to serve each other, but to serve Jesus Christ. He also quoted from the Anglican bishop who stated the church and organization leaders are actually assistant ministers, and are usually there with help when asked.

The service was conducted by Bishop J. R. Creeggan, Archdeacon W. L. Simmons of Napanee and Rev. R. Stewart, Rural Dean of the Deanery of Quinte.

Music for the occasion was supplied by a combination of choirs of the four congregations, Wellington, Consecon, Ameliasburg and Carrying Place.

Following the service the women of the parish served lunch in the parish hall.

Successful Living

Widowed After 50 Years; Wants Same Name

By DORIS CLARK

Dear Doris: My husband died six weeks ago and I miss him every day. My relatives say I am no longer "Mrs. Bruce Marsh", and that I should have all my mail addressed as Mrs. Mary Marsh. I tell them I took my husband's name 50 years ago and hope to carry it as long as I live.

Am I right about names in the phone directory? I feel having my name listed as Mary Marsh could lead to bothersome calls, since it might indicate that I am living alone.

I'll follow whatever your answer may be. You have helped me before. — Mrs. M. M.

Dear Mrs. M.M.: You will see that I have substituted another name for the one you gave me. Keep right on using your husband's name. The women who change to "Mrs. Mary Marsh" are the ones who have divorces or who are in some type of business where it is indicated.

Leave the directory listing just as it is. Often women living alone put first initials only in the phone book, as a way of avoiding those bothersome and perhaps dangerous — calls.

* * *

Dear Doris: We have three girls, 16 years, 13 years, nine years). The 9-year-old helps herself to her sisters' and my possessions without asking, then leaves them lying around. She comes in with her girl friend and eats any baking that is on hand. She has been caught twice sneaking out of the house to meet boys.

Once her dad strapped her. Now she is silent. She takes no part in conversations. When asked a question she replies in a low voice that you can barely hear. I know she hates me.

Every time we had an argument or I scolded her she would retreat into her shell and not talk. Of course I get angry at the other girls but they forget and are talking and laughing again very soon.

I am treating the 13 year-old now by not saying anything to her. Any discipline will have to come from the father as I get myself so worked up I am becoming — A Nervous Wreck.

Dear Wreck: When a middle child shows symptoms of rebellion or detachment, I suspect a lack of security. When you scold the oldest or the youngest they can take it in their stride because they are secure in their knowledge You might find a peal of great price among them. It is wonderful the way an unattractive mug takes on beauty once you get to know a really nice guy.

Those handsome good looks are only skin deep, remember?

Fruit Bread Has Tendency to Rise Too High

By MARY MOORE

QUESTION: . . . I bake a lot of fruit breads. It always seems that they split and rise quite high in the middle. Most other people don't. Am I doing something wrong or is this normal? — Dorothy V.

ANSWER: It's about par for the course. Some commercial bakers permit their fruit breads to split when baking to add an attractive finish. Use a little less flour in your loaves to prevent splitting and slightly lower temperature. You see a high temperature sometimes makes up of loaf first and forms crust. Then when inner batter bakes it rises and breaks through crust.

However, I am giving you Willie's Lemon Bread which seems to please everybody.

WILLIE'S LEMON BREAD

½ cup shortening
1 cup water
2 eggs
1½ cups sifted all-purpose flour
½ cup milk
½ tsp. salt
1 tsp. baking powder
¼ cup chopped nuts
Grated rind and juice of 1 lemon
¼ cup sugar

Cream shortening and add sugar and eggs. Add sifted flour, salt and baking powder alternately with milk. Add chopped nuts and lemon rind. Pour into greased loaf pan and bake at 350 deg. Fahr. about 40 min. As soon as taken out of oven pour over the bread ¼ cup white sugar which has been dissolved in the juice of the lemon. Baste bread with this mixture.

Dinner Menus

Salmon Loaf with Hard-Cooked Egg Sauce; Baked Squash; Spinach with Chopped Crisp Bacon; Tomato Slices with Endive; French Dressing; Coconut Layer Cake; Tea.

Ann Landers

Curiosity Among Young Is Normal Reaction

Dear Ann Landers: Your answer to the mother who was horrified when she caught her young daughter and her cousin "playing doctor" was good. But it wasn't strong enough. Please re-emphasize that curiosity among the young is normal.

Something similar happened to me when I was not quite 12. I was very naive and thought it would be fun to "play doctor" with a boy who was 13. My parents discovered us and gave me such hell you can't imagine what it did to me. We were devout Catholics and they drummed it into my head that I was a vile creature—that God hated me, that I was doomed, etc. For months, I had nightmares that I had died in my sleep because I wasn't fit to live.

For years I felt guilty and feared every normal urge. The very thought of kissing a boy made me sick. I longed for male attention but I was terrified that I might do something sinful if I were alone with a boy. My erotic daydreams were always about violent and forbidden sex.

It took years of professional help and thousands of dollars to get myself straightened around. Please, Ann, print this letter and urge parents to understand that the sex drive is normal and natural and that young children who are made to feel guilty about normal instincts can be scarred for life.—Lucky I Made It

Hello, Lucky. Here's your letter. Thanks for providing the re-emphasis.

Dear Ann Landers: You are a sensible woman who sees through things that are unreal and done for effect. Please give me your opinion of the following.

The man whose funeral I attended yesterday was 74 years old. He lived a full life, enjoyed a lovely family, financial success, and had a great many friends. He was sick for four months and everyone knew his illness was terminal.

The church was packed. There were three clergymen on the altar. The widow practically had to be carried in by her brother and son. She was wearing black from head to foot (even black stockings). Her hat was brand new and very stylish, which meant she had shopped for it recently. I'm sure the sermon was good but I can't say I heard it because the widow was sobbing so loud no one could hear. When the pallbearers started to carry the casket out she threw herself across it and had to be carried out.

My question is this: The man's death was not sudden. The widow had plenty of time to prepare for it. Why the performance? She actually ruined the funeral. Please—comment in the paper.—Pew Two

Dear Pew: Some people are in better control of their emotions than others. The notion that a person can "prepare" for the death of a loved one is not always correct. The final parting, even though expected, can be painful and unbelievably difficult.

Your implication that the widow was putting on an act is unkind and unjust. Who of us can look inside the heads and hearts of others?

Kosygin Could Complete Mary Knittel's Storybook Romance

OTTAWA (CP) — Mary Knittel would give anything to talk with Russian Premier Alexei Kosygin when he comes to Canada later this month.

And it's too bad that the chances are so slim, because Mrs. Knittel is part of a storybook romance that begs for a happy ending. Mr. Kosygin could provide it.

The story goes back to the 1930s when Mrs. Knittel went through school in the Ukraine with her childhood sweetheart, Ivan Neufeld, also of German origin. They were constant companions, and eventually became engaged.

Then the Nazis came and Mr. Neufeld went to join the Russian Army. Mary Knittel was evacuated to Germany.

At war's and, Mr. Penfield was presumed dead, and Mrs. Knittel emigrated to Canada. She married in 1951, had two sons—now teen-agers—and became a laboratory technician in Waterloo, Ont.

Her husband died in 1964.

Meanwhile, back in Russia, Mr. Neufeld had survived the war and he had gone through university to become an accountant. He thought Mrs. Knittel was dead. He never married.

Then, in 1969, he made his first trip out of Russia—to visit a brother in Vancouver. During the visit, various friends with Ukrainian background dropped in and, by a thousand-to-one chance, one of them had met Mrs. Knittel in Waterloo. Her name was mentioned, and Mr. Neufeld was immediately bound for Waterloo.

"It was just the same," she recalled Thursday. "He came in, and it wasn't a bit strange. It was so happy."

When he returned to Russia from Canada he applied for permission to emigrate, repeated the process a few times, and even renounced his Russian citizenship in hopes of speeding the process.

"They said 'No' without giving any reason."

When Mrs. Knittel heard that the prime minister was going to Russia last fall she saw what she thought was a marvelous opportunity.

The Russian authorities, I thought, might be very lenient with Mr. Trudeau there, so I made arrangements to be there at the same time." But after she had committed herself, Mr. Trudeau postponed his trip for several months.

She spent two weeks with Mr. Neufeld in Russia and they tried to get married in hopes of increasing the chances of emigration. But they were not allowed to marry.

"I'll never give up . . . I hope they understand and will help . . . If only I could talk to Mr. Kosygin. . . ."

Nixon to Oversee Costs But No Profit Control

WASHINGTON (CP) — President Nixon has prescribed a program of restraint and self-denial for the ailing American economy after the compulsory 90-day wage-price freeze expires Nov. 13.

To hold inflation within tolerable limits, the president announced Thursday night that the government would oversee the economy for an indefinite period to limit prices, wages and rents but there would be no direct control of profits.

As anticipated, the message outlining the second phase of his economic program touched only briefly on the international scene.

It was in his Aug. 15 message outlining the unusual steps to deal with the economic crisis that he also announced the 10-per-cent levy on U.S. imports that brought anguished cries of protest from Canada and other trading partners.

He did not mention this levy in his address. However, giving what some trading partners might consider an overly-rosy assessment of the present controversy, he said:

"I am glad to report substantial progress in our campaign to create a new monetary stability and bring a new fairness to world trade."

Taking a generally optimistic view in his radio-television address, Mr. Nixon called on labor, management and Congress to co-operate in a war on the "inflation psychology" that has beset the U.S. for too long.

But he fixed no specific wage or price standards for the second phase of his economic program, leaving that hot potato for two newly-created semi-autonomous boards to regulate prices and wages.

Although he did not mention an actual goal for the over-all program, the White House distributed a "background paper" that cited an objective of holding the annual rate of inflation to between two and three per cent by the end of 1972.

Some economists said that could mean a guideline of five to six per cent a year for average wage increases.

Nixon announced he will appoint a 15-member pay board with three representatives each from labor, industry and the public, and a price commission of seven public members to administer price-wage-and-rent controls when the current freeze ends.

In cases where "exorbitant profits" develop, "rather than tax such profits, the price commission has power to see that business should pass along a fair share of its cost savings to consumers by cutting prices."

The president wants standby power to control interest rates and corporation dividends. He will ask Congress shortly for that authority and for a one-year extension of the Economic Stabilization Act under which he froze prices, wages and rents Aug. 15, and on which he is basing Phase Two of his program.

"We will permit some adjustments of prices and wages that fairness demands, but we will not permit inflation to flare up again," Nixon said.

The early reaction to the long-awaited message was that in making it sweet enough for the Democratically-controlled Congress and labor to swallow the president may have diluted the medicine too much to be really effective.

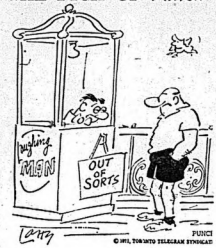
Economists said they found Nixon's plans encouraging but probably hard to administer.

Union leaders were unhappy about the absence of firm regulations to keep in check dividend payments to shareholders, interest rates charged by financial institutions and profits.

While the Phase Two controls will be backed up by the strong court-enforcement provisions which have prevailed during the freeze, Nixon said:

"We will rely primarily on the good faith and voluntary co-operation of the American people.

"But we will not hesitate to take action against any part of the economy that fails to comply."



The price-wage control plan will, in effect, divide the economy into three segments. Each will be subject to a varying degree of control.

Business and unions that officials consider "of critical importance for the control of inflation" would have to give advance notice of proposed wage-or-price increases. The board or commission would have power to reject, approve or delay the increase.

Some other firms and unions would be required to file prompt reports of increases, but not in advance. The board or commission would review them and could order action if it feels they violate the standards.

A third group—the great bulk of businesses—will be subject only to spot checks, less-frequent reporting and the investigation of complaints.

President's Economy Talk Let Down for Canadians

OTTAWA (CP) — President Nixon's future-of-the-economy address Thursday night was a let down for Canadian political leaders eager for a hint that Washington might relent on tough trade restrictions imposed eight weeks ago.

Comment in Ottawa was guarded because the president dealt almost entirely with domestic matters—the cool thaw that is to follow the current freeze on wages and prices in mid-November—and then only in rough outline.

There was little in Mr. Nixon's optimistic references to international matters to buoy Canadians.

In fact, he obliquely promised that Canada and other countries may expect even tougher times in trade markets with his pledge that 1972 will be a year in which "we open up new markets for our goods abroad" in a reborn spirit of competition.

Finance Minister E. J. Benson declined direct comment after listening to the broadcast speech in his Commons office.

But he remarked wryly that only the removal of the U.S. 10-per-cent surtax against imports from Canada and other countries would make 1972 a good year for this country.

Evidence of the concern in Ottawa about the so-called Nixonomics proclaimed by the president Aug. 15 emerged in Commons debate.

Although the debate ostensibly was dealing with the government's voluminous tax legislation, the theme of speeches by both government and opposition MPs highlighted Ottawa's preoccupation with U.S. trade restrictions and how Canada should respond.

Most speakers stressed a need to reconsider Canada's close relations with the United States in trade and industry, placing more emphasis on the processing and manufacture of resources to avoid slipping back into the role of a supplier of raw materials to the United States.

Those speeches followed a statement by External Affairs Minister Mitchell Sharp that the cabinet was indeed reassessing its policies—if only it knew what the United States intended in the long run.

In Toronto Thursday, Revenue Minister Herb Gray served notice that the government will not alter existing U.S.-Canada trade agreements under duress, as a price for winning removal or abandonment of existing or proposed U.S. trade restrictions.

After Mr. Nixon's speech, Opposition Leader Robert Stanfield said he had been skeptical about the 90-day wage and price freeze imposed Aug. 15, and said he would need more details on the next phase before assessing its influence on Canada.

But George Hees (PC—Prince Edward-Hastings), Mr. Stanfield's colleague on the opposition front bench, volunteered that Canada should match the U.S. effort to restrain prices and wages.

39,000 Quinte Voters Possible for Election

Last minute additions to the voters' lists could see as many as 39,000 voters being eligible to cast their ballots in Quinte riding on election day, October 21.

Riding returning officer Gerald W. Joyce said yesterday that the preliminary enumeration completed some time ago listed 38,254 voters but that revisions could possibly boost this number by another 728.

The 39,000 total would compare with the 29,478 eligible voters in the last provincial election four years ago.

Mr. Joyce said he would be at his office at 291 Front Street on Oct. 8, 9, 12, 13 and 18 to accept names left off the voting list but noted it was up to the individual voter to ascertain whether his name actually was on the list.

He said the fact that a person was enumerated doesn't completely assure that his name is on the list.

"There is always the possibility of error," he said.

In the urban areas, the last day for adding names to the voters' list is October 18.

But in the rural areas voters whose names have been left off the list can present themselves at the poll on election day and, after being properly vouched for and sworn in by the deputy returning officer, can cast their ballot.

There are 134 polling subdivisions in Quinte riding but with 11 double or "split" polls and the addition of polls set up at five nursing homes, there will actually be 150 polling booths on election day.

This year polling booths are being set up at the Bellcrest Nursing Home and Montgomery Lodge in Belleville, at Trent Valley Lodge in Belleville, at Trent Valley Lodge in Trenton, and at Green Acres and Maple Haven in Sidney township.

These booths are for the convenience of nursing home residents who might not otherwise be able to get out to the regular poll to cast their ballots.

Picton's Fire Department Keeps Growing

By MARGARET HAYLOCK
Staff Reporter

PICTON (Staff) — Picton's first fire truck chugged into town in the roaring twenties, its four cylinders eagerly pounding to prove that it could, indeed, attain its rumored speed of 30 miles an hour.

Where there's smoke, sometimes there's a liar. Raymond Sheppard, a Spring Street resident who occasionally drove this miracle machine yesterday recalled, "It could go 30 miles an hour if somebody was pushing it downhill."

The plucky little four-cylinder truck had no regular driver but was piloted by the first man on the scene following a fire alarm.

If the first man had driven the truck before he probably arrived carrying a jack. Mr. Sheppard observed Picton's few fire engine seemed prone to flat tires in times of emergency.

Picton firefighters now promoting fire prevention week, today are prepared to combat emergencies with three trucks fitted with modern equipment.

Fire chief Leonard Tripp, four full-time firemen and 12 volunteers stand ready to answer alarms in Picton and North Marysburg and Athol townships.

Rural fire protection was not for sale in the 1920s. Mr. Sheppard noted that yesterday's heroic little truck, fitted with a homemade wooden box to hold hose reels, was considered "lucky" to attend local blazes.

Town fire protection is a familiar subject to this Picton resident since he lived for many years in an apartment at the King Street fire hall.

Mr. Sheppard, who has vivid recollections of the first fire engine also remembers when the firemen, all volunteers, relied on horse-drawn carts.

As a youngster living at the fire hall in 1912, he frequently saw horses in his pitch the fire department's black team to one of the two wheel wooden carts wrapped with hose.

The horses kept to draw the carts were stabled at the livery of Alex Williamson located near the fire hall.

In Picton's early days three fire stations were spread through town. The main fire hall on King Street received assistance from a second station located at the foot of The Town Hill. This "station" was actually a metal building housing a handcart wrapped with hose. A third building was situated on the west Main Street.

Approximately 20 men served as Picton's volunteer firefighting force with Fire chief Walter Reid heading the group.

"Anybody handy who could lift a bucket of water or fight a fire became a fireman when a blaze broke out," said Mr. Sheppard.

The first fire alarm system was a large bell forged by The Jones Company Troy Bell Foundry, Troy, New York, in 1878.

Later, fire boxes were placed on telephone poles in Picton and connected with a brass alarm bell at the fire hall. Each volunteer fireman had a similar bell in his home.

Probably none of Picton's early day firefighters ever forgot the blaze that burned the fire hall.

Flames completely gutted the interior of the brick building which housed the town council chambers and the Bijou Opera House and destroyed the roof as well.

Charred roof timbers can still be seen, according to Mr. Sheppard, in the upstairs of the fire hall.

An earlier history of Picton's firefighting forces recorded by Mr. and Mrs. Richard Lunn in their book, The County, states that a fire in 1838 at the Mansion House Hotel gained peculiar fame.

When the hotel caught fire one March day, a number of bystanders neglected to come to the aid of volunteer firefighters. Free spirits "flowing freely" from the burning hotel lured many from their civic duties.

This fire triggered town council's decision to consider the obvious need for fire protection.

Raymond Sheppard yesterday recalled a Main Street fire at Carter Brothers Hardware Store as one of the worst alarms answered by volunteer firemen in the early 1900s.

"It was in February, 1918, and it was very, very cold," he said.

The water kept freezing in the hose and firemen brought them back to the fire hall to thaw them. They fought that fire for two days and when it was out they looked like one big block of ice."

Mr. Sheppard noted.

Fire prevention week in Picton has involved a number of safety inspections and a large billboard proclaiming "We Can Break Your Heart" has been erected to urge observance of precaution a precautionary against fire damage.

Chief Tripp said yesterday that no fire alarms so far have been called in during Fire Prevention Week.

Gerry, Meet Al

TRENTON (Staff)—You never know who you will meet at a senior citizens' tea party and bake sale these days. For one Quinte riding candidates in the provincial election and their wives Thursday it was each other.

Alan Deacon, the NDP candidate, with wife Kris, had come to town for the popular senior citizens' event at Trenton's Orange Hall. They had just sat down with their party in late afternoon for a tea break when modest half, when another political entourage headed by Gerald and Eileen Weaver converged on the same room.

After a few seconds of uneasiness, the Liberal and NDP hopefuls were deep in conversation on a Gerry-and-Al basis. They talked briefly about the campaign, particularly last Monday's television debate among Premier William Davis, Opposition Leader Robert Nixon and NDP Leader Stephen Lewis before settling down for a sampling of senior citizens' cooking.

Then the elderly groups broke and novelty sale; revealed that with an unexpected boost with candidates and their wives taking home bags full of cookies and armfuls of cut flowers.

Earlier in the day the third man in the race, Conservative candidate Dr. R. T. Potter, had dropped by the east side basement hall here for his tea break from the day of campaigning.

As one senior citizen assessed the day's event, "I do not know how I am voting but they were all good customers."

Solicitor Not Needed

Quinte Planning Board does not have enough legal business to warrant retaining a solicitor on a full - time basis, planning director Bert Kenny told members last night.

Belleville city manager J. D. Reynolds, in a letter to planning board, requested clarification of the city solicitors' legal role with the board.

Chairman Jack Bush joined Mr. E. A. Hare in suggesting that any legal work undertaken by the board should be done by a solicitor not linked with any municipality.

The board felt any legal consultations would be restricted to agreements with planning consultants.

Before dissolution, the Belleville and Suburban Planning Board had agreed to pay an annual fee of $500 for use of city solicitor John Miller's services.

Revered Relics

Stones inlaid on this slab are from historic places of Christianity and none can be seen at Christ Church. Memorial was inspiration of church's rector, Canon R. B. DeBlois Wright.

Stones Are Symbols Of Christian History

By HARRY MULHALL
Staff Reporter

Christian churches — and, by implication, Christianity — are more than just parishes.

And the parishioners of Belleville's Anglican Christ Church are now possessors of a unique reminder of the fact.

On display in the church is a memorial that tidily combines vivid reminders of an epochal religious history with a modern parable.

The memorial is a granite slab inset with stones from various places revered in Christian history, directly linked to the earliest eras of the religion's development.

However, its presence is not merely to excite curiosity.

Rather, hopes Christ Church rector Canon R. B. DeBlois Wright. The memorial will serve as a reminder that Christianity — while of awesome longevity as a human ethic — is an ongoing movement with a functional role in the world.

Christian congregations must not develop a ghetto complex, says the rector, whose inspiration created the little memorial.

In fact, he puts it this way in a preface to a booklet outlining the memorial's history: "In an age that finds the church content to become more and more a Christian ghetto in the midst of a hostile world, it is a reminder to all of us the words of religious reformer John Wesley. When asked where his parish was, he replied 'The world is my parish.'"

While the memorial is new, the stones actually have been in possession of Christ Church for many years — for so long in fact, and out of general sight, that many parishioners ought have forgotten their presence, believes the rector.

Assembled in the slab, they were presented to the church by John M. Black, a Stirling native who was admitted to the congregation in 1950. (Later, he moved to Montreal and became art editor of the Montreal Star-Jard).

The slab was inserted into the church's altar in 1941 during a special dedication service.

The stones came from such revered shrines as early Christendom as England's Glastonbury Abbey — where legend has it Joseph of Arimathea (the merchant attributed with providing Christ's tomb after the Crucifixion) is supposed to have built the first "above-ground" church in the world.

Britain's historic Canterbury is also represented. There's a tile of reddish marble from Ireland's ancient Armagh cathedral — reputedly the spot where St. Patrick erected a cross in 441. There's green marble from Iona — called "the holiest ground in Scotland" — where the first Irish missionaries arrived in 563.

There's marble from Jerusalem, where it all began, and stone from ancient Rome, where its posterity was secured.

Neither is Christianity's Canadian history forgotten. There's a piece of dark limestone, once a sliver in the foundation of the chapel at Annapolis Royal — once a centre of worship for the ill-fated Acadian settlers. Limestone also recalls St. Paul's in Halifax, founded in 1750 and, aside from Roman Catholic churches, believed the oldest of any other communion in Canada.

Set in their slab the stones were inserted into the Christ Church altar during a dedication in 1941.

There they remained, mostly out of general view, covered by the traditional altar linen during services.

Their rediscovery "began as an accident," recalls Canon Wright.

Some time ago, during the consecration — the most solemn part of the Anglican service — the chalice suddenly toppled across the altar spilling its contents.

After the service the rector closely scrutinized the altar and found a large slab with stones imbedded in it . . . which had slipped down and apparently this was the reason for the chalice tipping over."

Repairs were made, but the stone continued to slip, and the vestry council approved its removal, Canon Wright hunted the church archives and rediscovered the stones' story. A memorial area was set aside in the church — and the rest is history.

But the rector is gently adament that history shall have its lesson for all viewing the memorial and its relics.

He recalls the names of the early scattered Christian communities they represent.

"Today, we can turn into ourselves instead of out to the world. But if they (earlier Christians) stayed where they were would we be here?" he ponders. "But we are here because they looked outward. We must look outward."

No Surprises In Nominations

Despite earlier rumors that there could be a last minute fourth candidate for the Oct. 21 provincial election, yesterday's official nomination for Quinte riding produced no surprises.

Riding returning officer Gerald Joyce said that only three candidates are in the field — and they have been in the running unofficially for two or more weeks.

They are Alan J. Deacon, NDP; Richard T. Potter, for the Conservatives and Gerald A. Weaver for the Liberals.

Mr. Deacon, a teacher at Quinte Secondary School, was the first candidate to be officially in the field. He filed nomination papers with the returning officer on Sept. 28; Dr. Potter, member for Quinte riding for the past four years, filed on Oct. 1, while Mr. Weaver, Trenton businessman, filed his papers yesterday morning.

Each candidate is required to have his nomination papers signed by 100 eligible voters.

Jan E. Reily is the official agent for Mr. Deacon; Leslie Shore is agent for Dr. Potter, while Gregory Bulger of Trenton is agent for Mr. Weaver.

Although the election in Quinte has now been confirmed as a three-way race, Returning Officer Gerald Joyce said nomination papers had been taken out for a possible fourth candidate.

The papers had been taken out by a third party but were not returned.

Official nominations in Hastings are Richard Lunn, NDP; Rev. Ian Munro, for the Liberals and Clarke T. Rollins as the Conservative standard bearer.

In Prince Edward - Lennox the candidates are Bryan Beaver, NDP; James Taylor, for the Conservatives and Barry Young as the Liberal nominee.

Belleville Woman Killed in Toronto

A Belleville mother of two died yesterday following an automobile accident in Toronto.

She was Mrs. Sylvia Kleinsteuber, 28, wife of Murray Kleinsteuber, 61 Lemoine St., and daughter of Raymond and Roxanne.

She is also survived by her parents, Mr. and Mrs. George Bilham, and a brother, Larry Bilham, all of RR2, Trenton.

Mrs. Kleinsteuber will be resting at Weaver Funeral Home, Trenton. Funeral arrangements will be announced later.

Orioles 9-5 Favorites!

BALTIMORE (AP) — Pittsburgh Pirate manager Danny Murtaugh may find himself biting a little deeper into his cigar, but as of now he's sticking with problem-plagued Dock Ellis as his starter for Saturday's World Series opener against Baltimore Orioles.

Ellis, besides his normal difficulty finding hotel accommodations to suit his style, has a tender right elbow that doesn't suit his efficiency on the mound. But Murtaugh still is sticking with his original decision to go with Ellis against Orioles left-hander Dave McNally.

"I've named Dock to start," Murtaugh explained. "I've not named a replacement if Dock isn't able to go."

And it's not likely that a final decision will be made much before Saturday's 1 p.m. EDT starting time, following the pattern Murtaugh set during the National League playoffs when he waited until minutes before game time to replace Nelson Briles with Bob Johnson.

Ellis, meanwhile, had some difficulty when he checked his hotel room after arriving here with the club Thursday. After he and his wife took one look at the accommodations, Ellis changed rooms.

Murtaugh agreed with Ellis' assessment of the rooming situation, acknowledging they were "not too spiffy."

Once Ellis straightened out his accommodations, he left for the hotel and said at his press he would respond to his satisfaction and it did.

"My arm didn't hurt," he said. "It felt good, I'm ready to go."

Las Vegas oddsmakers initially shied away from the first game but later made the Orioles 3-2 favorites to take the first game and a 9-5 choice to win the series.

But New York oddsmakers established the Orioles as 7½-5 favorites to win their third world championship in the last six years and their second in succession.

They also made the Orioles' slight favorites to win the opener behind McNally, who was 21-5 during the regular season compared with 19-9 for Ellis, the Pirates' big winner. However, Baltimore manager Earl Weaver, as concerned about first baseman Boog Powell as Murtaugh is about Ellis, doesn't have Murtaugh's pitching problems. He has named right-hander Jim Palmer and left-hander Mike Cuellar to go after McNally.

DOCK ELLIS

Powell, who has been bothered by an ailing right hand, had x-rays taken Thursday while the Orioles worked out. They proved negative but did show torn fibres in the back of his hand.

Powell, along with the two Robinsons—Brooks and Frank —is a key in a Baltimore offence that hit at a .261 clip with 158 home runs during the regular season compared with .274 and 154 homers for a Pittsburgh team led by outfielder Willie Stargell.

Stargell led the majors in homers with 48, but had a disastrous series against San Francisco Giants in the National League playoffs, going hitless in 14 trips.

There is a vast difference in pitching between the teams. Ellis was Pittsburgh's big winner while Baltimore had four 20-game winners—McNally, Palmer, Cuellar and Pat Dobson.

The Orioles are the only club other than the 1920 Chicago White Sox ever to have four 20-game winners and are one of only three clubs in major league history to record 100 victories or more in three consecutive seasons.

A team many feel is stronger than the team that defeated Cincinnati Reds in five games in the 1970 World Series, the Orioles are starting off with a string of victories that exactly duplicates last year's—11 at the end of the regular season and three consecutive in the playoffs.

The Pirates lost the first game to San Francisco in the playoffs and then battled back to take three in succession for their first NL pennant since 1960 when they went on to beat New York Yankees in the World Series.

Saturday's game will be televised on the CBC National network.

One Series Game Under Lights

The best-of-seven series is scheduled as follows, all times Eastern Daylight:

Saturday, Oct. 9, 1 p.m. at Baltimore; Sunday, Oct. 10, 2 p.m. at Baltimore; Tuesday, Oct. 12, 1 p.m. at Pittsburgh; Wednesday, Oct. 13, 8:15 p.m. at Pittsburgh; Thursday, Oct. 14, 1 p.m. at Pittsburgh, if necessary; Saturday, Oct. 16, 1 p.m. at Baltimore, if necessary; Sunday, Oct. 17, 2 p.m. at Baltimore, if necessary.

Gotta's Boss Denies Rumor

OTTAWA (CP) — David Loeb, owner of Ottawa Rough Riders, denied Thursday he is shopping for a new coach.

He was commenting on Montreal reports that assistant coach Bob Ward of the Alouettes, a one-time Rider coach, is being considered as a replacement for Jack Gotta.

"I'm not saying that our coach is being fired and I don't like having a last-place club and we have to make plans in a hurry to improve the situation for 1972."

Riders have only three victories in 11 starts and are almost sure-bets to repeat their 1970 last-place finish in the east.

OTTAWA (CP) — About 775 fans and friends gathered Thursday night to bid farewell to Ron Stewart and set the stage for Saturday, when another 21,000 will do the same thing.

Stewart, 36, retired June 16 after 13 years as one of the most productive and most resourceful running backs in Ottawa Rough Rider history.

The ceremonies in his honor Thursday was held in the Civic Centre Arena, tucked under the main grandstand of Lansdowne Park where the 5-9, 175-pound Queen's University graduate had some of his finest days.

Mayor Ken Fogarty declared Saturday Ron Stewart Day in Ottawa — this includes the CFL game between the Riders and the Lions where Stewart will be honored at half time.

Did Grey Cup Cost Too Much?

MONTREAL (CP) — The defeending Grey Cup champions are losing money, Red O'Quinn, general manager of Montreal Alouettes, said Thursday.

"It's something I really even don't like to talk about," O'Quinn said.

"Every time we start talking about our financial position, people say we are crying."

The biggest problem, still, is getting fans to fill the Autostade, a department in which the Als have fallen behind last year's pace.

O'Quinn's figures show that after five home games, Montreal has drawn 16,957 fewer fans, 106,778 to 123,735.

And with more fans in 1970, the team ended up with a $100,000 deficit. With ticket prices raised a dollar each, Montreal cannot expect to do better than finishing even with last year's deficit.

"This isn't a non-profit, community-run project," O'Quinn said.

"We can't go around holding $100-a-plate dinners like they do in Regina and other western cities.

"And we can't go on losing $100,000 a year, year after year," O'Quinn added.

With one of the highest stadium rentals in North America— 35 per cent of the take—and other factors, Montreal needs to average 25,000 fans each game to break even financially.

So far this year the Alouettes have averaged 21,356 and the break-even point for the season is 69,000 fans away. Even if their last two home games could fill the 21,000-seat Autostade to capacity, the club would still fall short of that objective.

O'Quinn has a lot of ideas why the fans have not been responding this year but no solutions.

"But I think one of the biggest problems is the fact that football interest just deteriorated badly in the past 10 years," he said.

O'Quinn admitted that 1971 has been a tough one financially for Montreal.

"I know we had all the new administration costs last year, but this year we've had a lot of players, and some high-salaried ones, out of action and on the disabled list," he said.

"With the situation between Moises Denson and Bill Massey we have carried an extra back all year. All these things cost money."

ANAHEIM (AP) — Manager Lefty Phillips and his four coaches were dismissed Thursday by California Angels.

Gene Autry, board chairman of the American League baseball team, and Bob Reynolds, president, issued a statement saying the contracts of the five would not be renewed.

Phillips was offered a job in the Angels' player personnel and scouting department but did not say whether he will accept the offer.

The coaches are Rocky Bridges, Carl Koenig, Pete Reiser and Norm Sherry.

The announcement had been forecast for weeks after a year of turmoil highlighted by the celebrated Alex Johnson case.

TORONTO (CP) — Accuracy cost Nino Flamini of Ottawa Tigers an extra 18 months in suspensions for spitting at referee Jim Highlet of Toronto during a National Soccer League game in Sudbury last Sept. 22.

Flamini was suspended until Sept. 25, 1973, for connecting with the referee's face. Maurizio Caciotti, Flamini's team-mate, drew an 18-month suspension until March 25, 1973, also for spitting at the referee.

"Caciotti missed," NSL secretary Ivan Habus said Thursday when asked to explain the difference in the suspensions.

ST. CATHARINES (CP) — University of Waterloo leads 15 schools in the first golf championship of the newly-formed Ontario Universities Athletic Association.

In the two-day event in which five members for each team shoot 36 holes each with only the four best scores counting, Waterloo has accumulated 305 strokes on the par-72 course, with McMaster University of Hamilton second with 307.

John Churchill of Queen's University, Kingston, and Dave Hollinger of Waterloo, led after Thursday's field, each shooting two-over-par 74s.

The championships, both team and individual, end today.

Same Senior Story?

By THE CANADIAN PRESS

There are new coaches, new team nicknames and plenty of new players around the Ontario Hockey Association Senior A series this fall, but the race for first place could be an old story.

Galt Hornets, who won 35 of 40 games during the regular season and then romped to the Allan Cup, appear stronger than ever.

The Hornets, who led the league in attendance last year, have Norm Defelice back as coach and have added to last year's powerhouse.

Galt Hornets have acquired goaltender Sonny Pennington and defenceman Peter Speyer from Orillia and right winger Skeeter Teal from Kansas City of the Central League.

A 40-game 1971-72 schedule opens tonight with a full slate. Barrie plays at Orillia, Galt visits Oakville, Kingston travels to Belleville and Owen Sound plays host to Woodstock.

A solid third last year, Barrie Flyers have made more changes than any other team in the league although Jon Weeks, traded to Orillia for Bob Cunningham, is their only loss.

Heading a long list of newcomers are defenceman Darryl Sly, who was with Vancouver of the National Hockey League for part of last year, centre Doug Acomb, who once scored 37 goals for Toronto Marlboros of the OHA Junior A series and Bob Baird, who scored more than 30 goals in each of the last four years for Fort Wayne of the International League.

Kingston Aces, who have lost nine veterans, have lured Tom Carty out of a one-year retirement and signed college hockey players Mike Flanagan and Peter Kennedy.

Oakville has lost goaltender Ken Broderick, who will play for Seattle in the Western League; Robinson; Charlie Cipolla, who is trying out with Orillia; and Ludger Doucet, Byrle Klinck, Jack Price, and Bobby Taylor, who have retired.

A big catch for Orillia could be Obie O'brien, who was scoring champion and most valuable player with Oakville two years ago and then sat out most of last year.

Mavety Late Cut

Larry Mavety was at his off-season Belleville home today wondering what he has to do to crack hockey's big time.

"I figure I had the best training camp I ever had," the rugged defenceman said, after being an eleventh-hour cut by Buffalo Sabres at their National Hockey League training camp in St. Catharines.

"I played in all but two of their ten exhibition games — all but the first and last," Mavety said, "and they had me playing both the left and right sides."

LARRY MAVETY

Mavety's next stop appears to be the Sabres' affiliate Salt Lake City club, the basement-dwellers last year in the Western Hockey League where Mavety was a second-team all-star the past two seasons with Denver.

"I told Punch (general-manager-coach Punch Imlach) I'd rather go there than the American League," Mavety said. "I know my way around out there, and it's a better league. I'm supposed to report Sunday.

"But he (Imlach) did say I'd be back up within a certain time," Mavety added. "But who can say when — he might mean two weeks or two months.

Today, the Sabres also announced that veteran forward Reg Fleming, 35, was being detailed to their Cincinnati farm club in the American League.

Coming Unglued

Centennial offensive end Phil Easton has his eyes glued to the flight of the football in yesterday's Bay of Quinte COSSA match. Unfortunately for the Charger receiver his hands lacked a little glue as the pass eluded him for an incompletion. Despite missing connections on this play, Easton played a strong two-way game as Centennial hung a 7-6 upset on the previously unbeaten Moira Trojans.

Quintes Opening Tonight With Question Marks Galore

By MAURICE SWITZER
Sports Editor

On the eve of their first OHA Senior A hockey game of the season, the "Q" on the front of the new Belleville Quintes' sweaters could stand for "question mark".

In addition to the sweaters, the local senior hockey entry has new management, a new coach, and five new faces in the lineup for tonight's 9 p.m. Memorial Arena season-opener with Kingston Aces.

Coach Gene Poirier answered a lot of questions about his capabilities by putting the Quintes through what was undoubtedly the best training camp in the last four years of Belleville-senior hockey history.

Manager Ken Murphy came up with another key solution Thursday when he announced the signing of centre George Godson, one of the most consistent performers in Ontario senior hockey circles.

Godson made his first appearance in Belleville Wednesday night, skating without equipment, and coach Poirier has him inserted in tonight's lineup between familiar teammates Al Ferguson and Lorne O'Donnell.

Although his goal production slipped to nine in 37 games last season with the now-defunct Mo-Hawks, Godson maintained his reputation as a dogged penalty - killer and his 40 points were second only to Doug Senior's 42.

Senior, incidentally, poses a question mark all by himself. After leading the Belleville seniors in point production in his first season with

Quinte Makes Best Net Gain

Quinte Secondary School made the biggest net gain in high school boys' volleyball action yesterday.

The Blue Devils of Quinte swept a pair of games from previously unbeaten Cloyne to hold first place, by two points.

Sparked by the spiking of Terry Collins and Bruce Nickle and the floor leadership of Dale Jones, Quinte took 15-5 and 15-8 decisions from Cloyne. Quinte, which now sports a record of 15-1 took a pair of wins from Trenton, while Cloyne seniors (14-2) also swept their Trenton counterparts.

In junior action Cloyne swept all four of their contests, while Trenton took a pair of wins from Quinte.

them, the former Kingston centre did not make a training camp appearance with the Quintes until this week.

As of Thursday night, both Senior and veteran Dave Jones, who looked impressive in training camp and in last weekend's 4-2 exhibition loss in Kingston, indicated they had not come to terms with manager Ken Murphy.

GEORGE GODSON

As a result, one centre position tonight will be taken by John McConnell, who will be playing between scrappy Ralph Plane and his brother Wayne, whose 23 goals paced the local seniors last winter. The younger McConnell got into a handful of senior games last year while playing regularly in Intermediate ranks.

Newcomers Paul Perras, a Junior A performer in Peterborough last year, will centre Ray Johnston and Perry Chittick, a former Pete who played in Switzerland last winter.

In addition to goalie Steve Rexe, the Quinte defensive duties will be handled by Greg Marchen, Mike Rexe, Lionel Botley, former Barrie standout Pete Stoutenburg, and Dan Creighton, whose appearance tonight hinges on receipt of his release from Syracuse.

Peterborough commuter Mike Self was scheduled to dress as the extra forward.

Some time this weekend, coach Poirier was to have a look at two additional tryouts from the International League's Dayton Gems. One of them is 22-year-old Lee Parkas, former Hungarian National Team member who defected last year.

Spectators at tonight's curtain-raiser will see an additional 16 new faces.

That number of city postmen have volunteered their services to the Quintes as rena ushers, a service that in previous years has put an estimated $1,500 dent in senior club coffers.

Convert Wins for Chargers

Trojans Get Kick Out of Clarke

By ERIC EMERSON
Sports Staff

If the Moira Trojans were still on speaking terms with Bevan Clarke after yesterday's Bay of Quinte COSSA football battle, they just might acknowledge that "I get a kick out of you."

Unfortunately for the previously unbeaten Trojan seniors the kick was in the form of a convert that helped send them to their first loss in three games. Clarke, the towering middle guard of the Centennial Chargers split the uprights to provide the difference in a 7-6 victory by the green-and-gold.

One Centennial player that the Trojans didn't have any words for, or at least any printable ones, was halfback Ralph Vandervoort. The Charger speedster was a thorn in the paw of Moira's "Animals" throughout the contest, scoring his team's only touchdown, catching key passes, making a crucial interception, returning punts and kickoffs and even holding for placement kicks after quarterback Glenn Carleton was sidelined briefly with a knee injury.

Vandervoort was installed in the Chargers' defensive backfield after last week's 52-8 drubbing at the hands of and along with Dick Howe and Steve Ford helped stiffen the porous pass defence. Howe picked off two Moira passes and recovered a fumble that had been jarred loose by Ford, while Vandervoort came up with an interception late in the game when the Trojans were attempting to at least get into range for the equalizing point.

Penalties plagued both teams in the scoreless first half, but were particularly damaging to Moira. The Trojans had a 65-yard touchdown gallop by Brian Cousins called back on a holding penalty and lost excellent field position when Dave Rutherford's pass interception was wiped out by a rule infraction.

Centennial drew first blood in the contest with Vandervoort crashing over from the one-yard line and Clarke kicking the convert for a 7-0 lead. The losers closed the gap to 7-6 when Peter Stailkovich hammered over from the one on a third down gamble. The Trojan touchdown was set up by a fumble recovery on the Centennial five-yard line.

While the Moira seniors were tasting defeat for the first time this season, their junior counterparts continued to tear up the league administering a 48-0 thrashing to Centennial.

Fullback Bob Bernier spearheaded the Moira win, carrying for several long gains and counting two touchdowns. John Locker added a pair of majors for the winners, including a 50-yard touchdown dash. Other pointers went to Bob Lorimer, Mike McClelland and Steve Kirby while Mike Meagher pulled in a pair of two-point conversions and Brian Calnan added another.

Offensive tackle Ken Barnhardt provided much of the running room for the Trojan backfielders, while the defensive standouts included end Dan Gutoskie and linebacks Lorimer and Kirby.

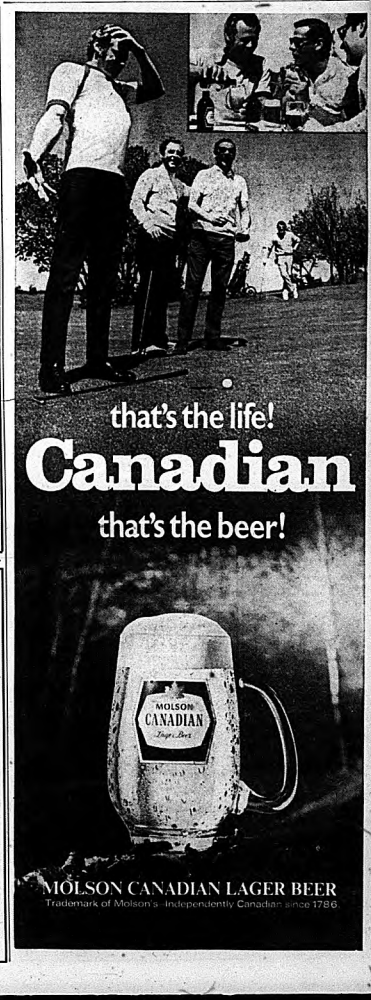
Fairways Limp for Opener

Survivors of the Belleville Fairways training camp can't help but be optimistic about the future of the club, even though it will be a rebuilding year.

At least three regulars could miss the exhibition opener tonight because of groin injuries picked up in practice. Forwards Rod Palmer and Brian O'Coin along with defenceman Peter Ackerman were all absent for Thursday's workout and are doubtful starters for the bout with the Eastern Ontario Junior B rivals.

Another rearguard from last season, Kevin Dockrill, has been sidelined for the entire camp with a leg injury incurred while playing high school football. The foursome are among the 14 players already signed by the Belleville B's for this season.

Other returning players include John Mulvihill, Cliff Janitsch, Doug James, Dave Smith and Dave Horwood. In addition, five newcomers have been impressive enough to warrant signing before the exhibition bouts begin.



Defencemen Jim Cain and Doug Perry figure prominently in the Belleville plans and should provide some needed stress to the Fairway lineup. Cain, who moved to this area

Poile Pins Canucks' Hopes On Goalie with 4.28 Average

By THE CANADIAN PRESS

The fate of Vancouver Canucks in the National Hockey League this season rests squarely on goaltender Dunc Wilson, says general manager Bud Poile.

The Canucks are host to Toronto Maple Leafs, and Los Angeles Kings tangle with California Golden Seals at Oakland as the NHL's 55th season opens tonight.

In Saturday contests, New York Rangers meet the Canadiens, defending Stanley Cup champions, in Montreal, Detroit Red Wings are at home to Minnesota North Stars, Chicago Black Hawks play the Blues in St., Louis and Philadelphia Flyers take on the Penguins in Pittsburgh.

Toronto travels to Oakland Sunday to play the Seals, Boston Bruins open at home to New York, Detroit visits Chicago, Pittsburgh meets the Sabres in Buffalo and the Kings travel to Vancouver.

New York defeated Boston 5-3 Thursday night to complete the exhibition schedule.

"Dunc Wilson certainly is the key to our club," said Poile Thursday. "I put it squarely on Dunc's shoulders. If he doesn't become a major leaguer, then we're in big trouble."

Last season, Wilson, picked up from Philadelphia in the 1970 expansion draft, shared Vancouver's goaltending duties with Charlie Hodge and George Gardner.

But this season, the Canucks' second in the NHL, Hodge is on waivers and could end up with Rochester Americans, Vancouver's farm team in the American Hockey League.

Gardner, 28, is regarded as only adequate. But Wilson has been instructed to make himself No. 1 in a bid to improve upon Vancouver's sixth-place finish in the East Division last season.

Although Wilson's average last season was 4.28 in 35 games, Poile realizes that the 22-year-old was used against last season's powerhouses—New York, Boston, Montreal and Chicago—while Hodge and Gardner drew the leftovers.

As incentive for Wilson, Poile has loaded his contract with bonus clauses, including extra money for staying in the league for a certain number of games and for performance.

"He can make himself a good buck," said Poile.

BUD POILE

Wilson is also on his word that his behavior this season will improve over his antics last season when he became involved in several fights and had to post a $1,000 keep-the-peace bond with the league.

"We've told him to stay in goal and play his game," Poile said. "He had seven fights last year. I think his attitude has improved."

At Boston Thursday, the Bruins lost their fifth of nine contests against NHL clubs in pre-season play. They tied one.

Jim Neilson and Bruce MacGregor scored 33 seconds apart early in the first period, leading the Rangers to their sixth win against two losses and one tie in exhibition games with NHL clubs.

The victory was New York's third in four meetings with the Bruins this fall.

Jack Egers, Rod Seiling and Rod Gilbert rounded out the Ranger scoring with second-period goals. Derek Sanderson, Ed Westfall and Fred Stanfield replied for the Bruins.

At Buffalo, the Sabres sent veteran Reg Fleming, 35, to Cincinnati Swords of the American Hockey League. Fleming scored six goals and had 16 points with the Sabres last season.

Eagleson Joins Fight

PETERBOROUGH (CP) — A two-year suspension imposed by the International Ice Hockey Federation on 18-year-old Bob Smulders may go to the courts if lawyer R. Alan Eagleson doesn't get satisfaction from his discussions with the Canadian Amateur Hockey Association.

Smulders, who played last year with The Netherlands national team, was suspended by the IIHF for a year after an altercation with an official during a game with the French national team.

The IIHF reviewed the suspension last month and increased the term to two years.

Smulders, meanwhile, had returned to Canada and signed with Peterborough Petes of the Ontario Hockey Association Junior A series.

Smulders advised Peterborough officials of the IIHF ruling as did OHA secretary-manager Bill Hanley who said the CAHA accepts the suspension.

"I'm going to attempt to convince the CAHA that Smulders' two-year suspension shouldn't be recognized because of the different type of rules in Canada," Eagleson said Thursday.

"If the CAHA fails to do this, then we'll undertake some sort of court proceedings. We'll do everything we can for this young man."

Eagleson is executive director of the National Hockey League Players' Association.

TOM JOHNSON

Bruins' Johnson, Rangers' Francis in Different Moods

BOSTON (AP) — Coaches Tom Johnson of Boston Bruins and Emile Francis of New York Rangers are in entirely different moods heading into the start of the National Hockey League season this weekend.

"I'm not happy, to say the least," Johnson said after the Bruins dropped a 5-3 decision to the Rangers Thursday night in a final pre-season tuneup before 14,995 fans at the Garden.

"We've had a pretty fair training camp and we're ready to go," Francis said. "We haven't had any real serious injuries and I haven't had to suspend anyone."

Asked to sum up his Bruins' training season, Johnson replied: "I can't—it's unprintable."

"We had one good week, the first one. The rest has certainly been disappointing, at least from a standpoint of results. The over-all attitude has been the main reason. In this game, you can't fall back on last year's results.

Lochead Leads Way

PETERBOROUGH, Ont. (CP) — Oshawa Generals beat Peterborough Petes 6-4 Thursday to move into sole possession of first place in Ontario Hockey Association Junior A standings.

Bill Lochead scored two goals to lead Oshawa's 32-shot attack. Doug Ferguson, Dennis Howard, Frank Davis and Rick Middleton scored one goal each.

Prison Reform Policy

OTTAWA (CP) — Family visits, prison committees and even the income tax are being granted prisoners as part of a new federal policy of rehabilitation instead of punishment.

Solicitor-General Jean-Pierre Goyer outlined the policy in the Commons Thursday.

He said it was aimed at the 80 per cent or more of prisoners who, the experts say, can return to normal life.

Visits by the prisoner's family, "under conditions which are to comply more fully with the requirements for privacy," are one aspect of the program.

Establishment of elected prisoner committees, for co-operation with prison officials, already has been set in motion, he said.

As an experiment, prisoners at the William Head minimum security establishment on Vancouver island will receive the federal minimum wage—$1.75 an hour—for helping to put up a needed building at the centre.

Prisoners now get 35 to 85 cents a day for working.

The new wage "will make it possible for them to pay for their room and board at the institution, to pay for their clothing, to help support their family, to save money for their eventual release from prison, to pay their taxes and to be eligible for payments under unemployment insurance and workmen's compensation acts," Mr. Goyer said.

"Once released, an inmate may be less inclined to rob a bank. On the contrary, he will already have a bank account.

"He may even, as in the case of other workers, receive unemployment insurance payments during the period required for finding some employment."

Mr. Goyer said that "for too long a time now, our punishment-oriented society has cultivated the state of mind that demands that offenders, whatever their age and whatever the offence, be placed behind bars.

"We have decided from now on to stress the rehabilitation of individuals rather than protection of society."

Among the other changes listed by Mr. Goyer were:

—Closure of the maximum security section at St. Vincent de Paul Penitentiary and transfer of most of the Kingston Penitentiary prisoners to the new Millhaven institution.

—A permanent psychiatric advisory committee.

—Relaxed regulations on communications between prisoners and MPs.

—Modern haircut standards and abolition of identification numbers on clothing.

—Establishment of small communities in prison wings including prisoners and correctional officers to personalize the system.

—Cafeteria eating to replace meals in cells.

—Expanded training facilities for officers.

—Long-term plans to create greater citizens' involvement in improve chances for rehabilitation.

Conservative justice spokesman Eldon Woolliams (Calgary North) and John Gilbert (NDP —Toronto-Broadview) hoped Mr. Goyer would put his welcome announcement into action.

But Social Credit Leader Real Caouette said crime would remain as long as misery exists in the midst of plenty.

'Sure I'm for prison reforms, but this is ridiculous!'

Liberals Advocate Action

OTTAWA (CP) — One Liberal backbencher invoked Eric Kierans and another advocated retaliation Thursday as the Commons discussed Canadian reaction to U.S. economic policies.

Hugh Faulkner (L—Peterborough) supported what he called the most eloquent plea of Mr. Kierans, former Liberal minister, that the government stop tax discrimination against the manufacturing sector—hit most by the U.S. measures—in deference to resource industries.

Robert Kaplan (L—Don Valley) said the government's tax change bill would have to be revised if U.S. intentions are "what they appear to be" in changing U.S.-Canadian economic relations.

If the U.S. was going to treat Canada as a resource depot, Canada would have to revise its tax laws to stimulate manufacturing, exports and employment in a way that had never been necessary or desirable before.

As the government moved toward critical decisions in what External Affairs Minister Mitchell Sharp said Wednesday could be a fundamental reassessment of Canada's relationship with the United States, nearly all debate focussed on that issue.

Mr. Kaplan said Canada and the U.S. had been involved in an economic partnership of great benefit to both countries.

But if U.S. was changing its economic policy towards Canada, then this country would have to retaliate with measures similar to the U.S. 10-per-cent import surtax, its export-promoting and buy-American tax incentives.

He rejected suggestions by New Democratic Leader David Lewis that Canada impose an export surtax on resources needed by the U.S., saying the U.S. wasn't really all that dependent on Canadian resources.

Middle East oil was cheaper than Canadian oil, natural gas could be replaced with oil, and nickel was being produced in other countries.

In a recent Commons finance committee meeting, Mr. Kaplan suggested Canada put a special tax on dividends and interest flowing to U.S. citizens from Canadian investments.

Mr. Faulkner agreed the U.S. had gone too far in trying to repair its balance-of-payments deficit and was threatening world trade structures.

Mr. Faulkner then invoked Mr. Kieran's theories on both the need for co-operation among labor, business and government and on the contention that resource exports favored by tax concessions aren't enough for real Canadian development.

Octoberfest Warmup

OTTAWA (CP) Members of Parliament whopped it up during the dinnertime adjournment Thursday with Bavarian-style beer, braised pig's-tails, sauerkraut and an oompah brass band from Munich.

The occasion, staged in the glittering Confederation Room of Parliament's West Block, was a transplanted publicity warmup for the annual, nine-day Oktoberfest that opens today in Kitchener-Waterloo.

Partisan and regional suspicions were submerged in the brassy atmosphere.

External Affairs Minister Mitchell Sharp sported a green tyrolean hat and Prime Minister Trudeau, in a red hat, said "Danke schoen" when presented with a genuine litre beerstein from Munich.

•Davis Job Proposal To Employ 41,800

Colin Rowe

Two Prong Plan

TORONTO (CP) — Premier William Davis proposed Friday a two-pronged plan to create 41,800 jobs in Ontario this winter at a cost to the province of about $93 million.

Mr. Davis said he has suggested tax measures for discussion at the federal-provincial economic conference later this fall which would cost the provincial treasury $30 million.

Meantime, Ontario would expand and accelerate provincial capital works and public works programs and initiate a new construction program at a total cost of $63 million.

Key proposal on the federal level would be to accelerate planned cuts in personal income tax in income of personal disposable income in Canada by about $250 million. The figure for Ontario would be about $125 million.

Ontario Liberal Leader Robert Nixon and Stephen Lewis, New Democratic Party leader, criticized the premier for waiting too long to take action on the unemployment problem, and suggested his move was part of his campaign for the Oct. 21 provincial election.

Premier Davis told a news conference that he has made several proposals to Ottawa and the other provinces for discussion at the economic conference now expected some time after Oct. 28. These include:

—Ottawa to re-schedule to January, 1972, the cuts in personal income now scheduled for 1974. The cuts would reduce to 15, per cent from 22.1 per cent the combined federal-provincial rate of the first $200 of taxable income. This would cost the Ontario treasury $30 million.

—Ottawa to reduce the federal excise tax to stimulate sales of automobiles and consumer durables, such as household appliances.

—Federal-provincial contingency policies to be developed to enable fast action in specific sectors.

On the provincial level, if his government is returned to power Oct. 21 he would immediately:

—Expand to $25 million from $7.5 million the employment incentive grants to municipalities. He predicted this would create 25,000 temporary jobs.

—Accelerate OHC projects now in the planning stages and speed up the major and 30 smaller public works projects at a cost of $35 million.

—Begin a $10 million program for construction of day nurseries to provide places for 4,000 children.

Mr. Davis said the public works program would include improvement of parks and recreational areas, conservation activities, repairs to OHC properties and on-the-job training programs. The 5,000 training places created would be in addition to the 41,800 jobs.

The premier also said that details of a new grant program to provide incentives for home improvements during the winter would be announced shortly.
